Baby the Baby.

Yes, doctor, life's baby girl,
Should then my verdict stand,
I will not call her Poll or Sal,
No, nothing else but Kate.

My aunt was called the same—
My love for her is a great;
Yes, doctor, that must be her name,
She shall be christened Kate.

What? Twinnin! Good gracious! how they squall!
Doctor, bring—Why, well, I will call
Both girls—Well, then, I will call
Kate and Dupie Kate.

A Curious Collection of Patriots.

Taken individually and collectively, the patriots who were invited to this city to meet the Credit Mobilier candidates for the Democracy were fully entitled to the name and the occasion. Ex-Governors, ex-Senators, ex-Secretaries, ex-Commissioners, ex-Ministers, ex-Generals, ex-Colonels, ex-everything and other extraordinary personages of the past, together with a few present dignitaries, made up the motley assemblage at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

Lindaflet, Williams, Scott, Robeson, Bellknap, Banks, now United States Marshal, and a dozen of many sides; Bullock, the notorious ex-Governor of Georgia; Conover, ex-carpet-bag Senator; Warmoth, ex-carpet-bag Governor of Louisiana; Sypher, ex-carpet-bag Congressman; Orth, the Vesuvius jobber; Storrs, who defended Belknap, defended the Whiskey Ring, tried, and now still defends Garfield in the paying job; Tyler, ex-Postmaster at St. Louis, whom Schurz pursued to the bitter end; Dorsey, ex-carpet-bag Senator; Pinchback, whom the Republican Senate refused to admit to a seat, Wheelwright, voting him seventeen thousand dollars for more than three years of salary; Clerical Error Sloughton, and other distinguished persons, were conspicuous in the throng around the Credit Mobilier candidate.

John Sherman, with a specially detailed force of collectors and receivers of gifts, his staff, came down upon the occasion, and tendered the olive branch to James [illegible] liberal enough to make [illegible] and to tell the audience that a political campaign was a matter of business, and not of sentiment or gush. John Logan flourished his war paint, and with unlifted tomahawk threatened to annihilate the old secessionists if they [illegible] Union General, who had taught them a lesson of duty and submission. Thurlow Weed made a noble effort to excite enthusiasm by referring to the campaign of 1840. He fought, and [illegible] very, and felt confident of carrying New York, if the republicans could get votes enough.

The great feature of the occasion was a hot debate between the southern patriots, some of whom wanted money and moral support—principally the former—while others de[illegible] the South would be a waste of resources. Conover, [illegible] West Virginian advocated the former policy; Sypher and Freeman took the latter side. This is the first time in a long experience that Sypher has ever been found against hard or soft money. Perhaps his antagonism was excited by distrust of the virtuous republicans who expect to handle the appropriation.

The appeals for aid and comfort carried the day, and Mr. Marshall Jewell's conglomerate convention voted to strengthen the hands of the faithful in the Virginias, North Carolina and Florida. It is gratifying to know that Chandler and company have a prospect of getting their expenses to New York repaid, with perhaps a chance for something more for the good of the cause. They will not have another opportunity very soon, and it is not necessary to advise them to draw upon the treasurer promptly and liberally.

Don Cameron sat through all these scenes like a philosophical spectator, and neither opened his mouth nor his purse. In fact, he is said to have clung to the latter with an exceptionally firm grip during an outburst of Conover's eloquence. He had served with him in the Senate and knew his dangerous fascination.

Mr. Conkling manifested a more remarkable interest in the candidate and in the conference, for, although he lodged in the same hotel with Mr. Garfield and near the room where this meeting was held, he took pains not to see the candidate and not to participate in the conference. Blaine and Sherman were both grieved by his absence, while Marshall Jewell, as master of ceremonies, was sincerely distressed at the failure of the New York Senator to make the greatest effort of his life. Senator Bruce, who had named his baby after Roscoe Conkling, was also sorrow-stricken and despondent.

Altogether, this was one of the most curious collections of politicians on record.—[N. Y. Sun.

Arithmetical Political Omen.

W. A. Taylor, writing from Ohio, to the New York Sun, solves the political question in this manner:—

Take the letters of the alphabet in their numerical order from 1 up to 26, spell out the names of each candidate, and number the letters in their regular order, and we have the following astonishing result:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| W | 23 | J | 10 |
| I | 9 | A | 1 |
| N | 14 | M | 15 |
| F | 6 | E | 5 |
| I | 9 | S | 19 |
| E | 5 | A | 1 |
| L | 12 | B | 2 |
| D | 4 | R | 18 |
| S | 19 | Y | 25 |
| C | 3 | H | 9 |
| O | 15 | A | 1 |
| T | 20 | M | 13 |
| T | 20 | G | 7 |
| H | 8 | A | 1 |
| A | 1 | R | 18 |
| N | 14 | F | 6 |
| C | 4 | I | 9 |
| O | 15 | E | 5 |
| C | 3 | L | 12 |
| K | 11 | D | 4 |
| | 215 | | 154 |

The total equals the electoral vote, 369.

What adds to the force of the above remarkable figures is that they represent the electoral vote and their division between the two candidates.

While the writer does not pretend that there is anything prophetic in this, it is certainly a singular coincidence. If it needed any strengthening I might state that in 1876 I was a student on the Pittsburg Post, and taking the names of Samuel J. Tilden and Rutherford B. Hayes and applying the same rule as above it resulted:—Tilden, 205; Hayes, 184. The electoral vote was divided between the two candidates in exactly that proportion. The Republican conspirators, visiting statesmen and Electoral Commission stole 8 votes in Louisiana, 7 in South Carolina, and 4 in Florida, so as to make the count stand 185 for Hayes and 184 for Tilden.

Girls think that a man should X L at forty, if ever.
