LETTER FROM GALENA.

Editors News:—Verily the world moves. This, no doubt, is a trite adage, but no other expresses so well the onward and upward tendency of matters and things in our pleasant village. What if politicians do get on an occasional ramp in the first district, even (if report be true) to the extent of carrying knives for one another, does that arrest the onward movements of the car of progress? Does it disturb the serenity of Galena's favorite and popular candidate for Representative? I tell you nay. A new energy seems infused into the citizens of our thriving village. The spirit of improvement begins openly to appear abroad. I venture to say no small credit for this is due to the enthusiasm engendered at the weekly meetings of the Galena Literary Society. It is growing, and its members are deeply interested in its welfare. Every alternate meeting is a public one, to which admission is gained by complimentary tickets distributed by the members. The regular meeting for April 8th promises to be a very interesting one as, besides a program of considerable length, there comes off a debate, subject—"Resolved, that pavements are a more needed improvement in Galena than street lamps." It is possible a nominal fee of about 10 cents may be charged to aid the society. The Odd Fellows of Galena very kindly extend the use of their rooms to the society for a small gratuity. I may seemingly speak at too much length about this association, but rest assured the pluck it shows and the object it has in view merits it.

It is understood that the Odd Fellows will break ground for the erection of their handsome three-story building about the middle of May. It will be some 25 feet in depth by 40 in length, the plans for which have already been executed.

The life of our town are Hyland's machine shops, which are now running on full time and turning out annually hundreds of useful and substantial farm implements, well typified in their sturdy and progressive proprietor, whom Galena loves to honor.

With many regrets Galena parts this week with the popular preacher, Rev. J. E. Bryan, who with his family left for their new field of labor. On Friday his successor, Rev. W. M. Warner, was welcomed to the parsonage by a fair proportion of his congregation.

At the Episcopal Chapel the services have been very impressive since the commencement of the Lenten season, and the sermons by the cultured and talented Rector, Rev. John Martin, more than usually solemn and practical, Mr. Martin may be classed among the best of sermonizers, and his congregation as thorough "church goers."

Not long since I was solicited to join a club for the purchase (at reduced price) of unabridged Dictionaries. At the time the absolute necessity of that comprehensive book did not occur to me, but since "Kyser" and "Terence" gave us their last show of "jaw-breakers," it has flashed upon me that Webster's unabridged is an excellent thing in a family. I shall hasten to join the club. It isn't safe to be without one while subject to the descent of such torrents of incomprehensible adjectives and sky-flying literary matter as Kyser and his critic have been flooding us with. We can't be without the unabridged. In truth we have plead guilty to a tendency for cock fighting, and now in our mature years we confess nothing has so aroused our "old blood" so highly to the old-time fervor, as the close resemblance of the fight between "Kyser" and "Terence" to that of two young roosters in "days of yore." The Millington cock has evidently entered his spurs pretty deeply into the "cock of the walk" hen, and is inclined to walk off and crow a little; but he evidently forgets that Kyser is "game stock," against which "dung hill" stock or "sand heaps" cannot prevail. Perhaps, though, in walking off, he is only proving the truth and force of the old maxim, "Discretion is the better part of valor." We trust that such a sanguinary (?) conflict will soon be brought to a close and that both birds may shake claws o'er the "bloody chasm," and while declaring that "the cruel war is over," may compose their ruffled feathers, and—let us have peace.

March 29. OBSERVER.

Kent Co. Agricultural Association.

CLUB ROOM, March 28, 1881.

Messrs. Editors:—You are aware that it is almost impossible, if not quite so, to present so faithfully on paper the proceedings of an association such as ours as that the reader shall be as well instructed and entertained as if present at the meeting. It is impossible to put in writing the tone of voice, the expression of countenance or the gestures of the speaker; and while the words of the brilliant and opposite repartee may be framed, the spirit of it is too dependent on the time and surroundings to be captured, and if it were not for your kindness and the favor which your readers, especially the members of the association, extend to these papers, I should at once throw aside the pen in disgust.

Our club is certainly a Democratic institution, (not in a party sense) but in the broadest meaning. Remarks are handled without gloves, and the largest freedom of criticism is allowed, all without ill-will. I hardly think members realize the value of the training to be had here, especially in the command of the feelings, the quickness to detect the fallacy in an argument, and the ability to use at a moment's notice what the mind contains or memory recalls in reply, or to sustain a position.

Messrs. W. W. Stephens, W. H. Stewart and J. Brice were appointed a committee to put the track in order. The resolution did not say in order for what, and I sincerely hope the committee will feel it their duty to have it put in order to be planted in corn this spring, and if the committee will be faithful, see the corn properly planted and tilled, forty or fifty bushels per acre may be raised.

Mr. Boston, the inventor, was present with the corn and fertilizer dropper and coverer. Its working was examined carefully, and it was admitted to possess many valuable qualities; but as the inventor claimed that, owing to some want of adaptedness of some of the parts, it did not work to his satisfaction in drilling the corn so accurately as to admit of working both ways, he proposed to exhibit again, when he would have it properly adjusted. If he has a simple machine that will drop and cover the corn and fertilizer so that it can be tilled both ways and run by the average farm hand, there is a fortune in it. The increase of complicated machinery has brought very onerous duties on the farmer himself, and while the demand is not for less machinery, it is that it shall be so simple in construction and certain in its action that the average farm hand can produce the best results.

The regular question, "Can poor and unimproved land, bought at present prices, be so cultivated and fertilized as to pay interest, taxes, cost of fertilizer and expense of cultivation, and at the same time be improved in fertility?" was discussed around and across and through and between, and this is the best I can do for it.

An article was read from the "Clover Leaf" on sowing clover seed, claiming that it was just as easy to obtain a good catch as to roll off a log. Oh, my! how I wish it was.

Mr. W. H. Stewart read an original essay on "Do inventions have a tendency to retard the development of farm labor?" sustaining the negative. It was listened to with much attention.

Question for April 4, "To what extent do agricultural books and papers benefit farmers?"

I regret that I fail to remember the essayist for the next meeting. PARTICIPS.

"The Last Word."

Whilst the tremulous Kyser writhes beneath the froth of the puissant "Terence," though it be unpalatable, 'he still lives.' Though his irascibility is supposed to have been excited by the chastisement of a cavilling and undistinguishing critic, though the "carping of an idiot" is thought to have aroused his frenzy, he is now composed, enjoying the serenity of quietism, and smiling at the pusillanimity of the Millingtonian. Though the genius of "the fiery Galenian" be inadequate to dictate the quirks of the literati, his mental capacity inferior to that of a "Terence" and his age a restriction to his pen, he will never try to copy the diction of a calumniator. Is it a crime to be a boy? Are men born as men? No, as infants, and it requires time to develop a manly form and a perfect judgment. The heinous offence of being a boy I shall neither attempt to palliate nor deny; but content myself with the hope that I may be one of those whose follies cease with their youth, and not of that number who are ignorant in spite of experience. Cannot age become as justly contemptible as youth if the opportunities which it brings pass away without improvement? He who has seen the consequences of a thousand errors and whose age has only added obstinacy to stupidity, is surely the object of either abhorrence or contempt; or deserves not that his gray hairs should secure him from insult.

Where is the author who is unwilling to have his work examined by the principles of good taste and sound understanding? He is not to be found; neither is good taste found at every turn of the eye. Is there any one who will maintain that the taste of a Hottentot, a Laplander or a Millingtonian is as delicate as that of Loginus or an Addison? No.

Though inelegance may deface the productions of Kyser, the same being distasteful to "Terence," why should he (T.) indulge in such degeneracy? If I understood aright, its presence was distinctly seen in the "Rejoinder."

Now, "Terence," I will bid you adieu, sincerely trusting that you will so model yourself as to ever be a fit criterion for a KYSER.

Galena, March 29, 1881.

WITHIN the last three months two hundred cannon have been converted into car-wheels at one of the large car shops in Washington. The big guns are subject to intense heat for four or five hours to reduce them to pig iron.

Letter from Worton Station.

Worton Station can boast of about forty inhabitants. We have two stores, a postoffice, a good blacksmith and wheelwright shop, with men in them that understand their business. Mr. Wm. Ivens, our gentlemanly and accommodating agent, has the express office, and the Boss the postoffice. Mr. George Pell has broken ground for a dwelling and store; he expects to go into business in the spring. There is talk of several buildings going up here this spring. Our friend Tom is back among us again; he can whistle and sing as well as ever.

There seems to be a lull on the political waters at this time—always a calm after a storm. We did think we knew what we wanted out here, but there are some who think differently—and don't you forget it.

There has been a great deal of sickness and a number of deaths in this community this winter. We all miss our kind and generous friends, Mr Lewin Usilton and Mr. Wm. Lucas. How blest the remembrance of old friends when those that are thus numbered have been removed from us by death. Through the mirror of the mind we can see those old familiar faces and hear those ever welcome voices that once greeted us in the social gatherings, when friend met friend and hand grasped hand in token of a bond which death fails to sever—the pledge of brotherly love, and when with new faces and untried associates, still those other days are written upon the tablets of our hearts in letters of gold which neither time nor circumstances can efface.

We have a good school house close by and an excellent teacher. We love to boast of our schools and persuade ourselves that they stand on a much higher plane than the schools of the past; and so they do in houses and appliances for book-knowledge, but take a child out of the school-room and how much more does he know? How much brighter does he appear in conversation, or how much better is he fitted to take a hand in the business struggles of life than those of corresponding years a quarter of a century ago? All the money and time spent in education in these days should speak a little in the style of conversation. How much rather I would that my children be taught to speak correctly in well modulated tones than many of the things they are taught. I never heard of any talking exercise in our public schools. It may be urged that it is the duty of the parents to teach their children to speak correctly; but the truth is many of us do not know ourselves, and cannot give that instruction in language and expression that it would be desirable for a child to have. We employ teachers to instruct in other branches beyond our skill, why not in this? I have always regretted that I could not talk better when I come in contact with a person who has a free and ready use of language. I will down like a cabbage leaf after an hour's boiling and feel as if I could not get out a word the right end foremost.

The members of the Union M. E. Church purpose giving an exhibition in the Hall at Worton Station, the proceeds to go towards buying an organ for the church. We approve of it and think it would be a great help to the singing. Hope all will attend who can. BOZ.

HAIR WHITENED BY DISAPPOINTED LOVE.—The Little Rock (Arkansas) Gazette of a recent date says: "A young lady whose womanly qualities had made her the mark of much attention from gentlemen, to one of whom she had plighted her troth, had her hair turned from a glossy brown to white. This evidence of poignant grief was caused by the base action of her lover. He is a young man, moving in Little Rock's highest social circles a short time since, but now married and residing in another part of the Union. She did not suspect that he had been unworthy of confidence. One evening last week she picked up a paper from the city in which her lover was visiting, and one of the first things that struck her eye was the description of a brilliant wedding in a fashionable church. She saw her lover's name figuring as that of the bridegroom. During that whole night she lay in a stupor. The next morning one side of her head was white as snow, and so it remains."

SOME seamen wandering along the Rehoboth beach last winter, found a drowned man. They took the corpse up, carried it to Captain Tredenick's barroom, stood it up at the corner of the bar, and went out and told Tredenick a friend wanted to treat the crowd. The crowd drank and left. To Tredenick's surprise he could get neither money nor answer from the corpse, and becoming enraged, struck him. He fell to the floor with a thud. Becoming scared, he called in the man's friends, and each solemnly declared the fellow was dead. Tredenick, white as a sheet and with trembling voice, was at first dumbfounded, but at last he exclaimed, "Well, I did it in self defence; he drew a knife on me before I struck him."

IF the story is true that Attorney General MacVeagh told the President flatly that the appointment of Stanley Matthews was not a fit one to be sent to the Senate, and almost refused to make out the nomination, it reflects much credit upon Mr. MacVeagh. If the President had taken the advice of the Attorney General he would have saved his administration from a great reproach, and if he allows the independent and honest cabinet officer from Pennsylvania to be turned down for the repetition of such excellent counsels he will not help either himself or his party. Of course he cannot expect Mr. MacVeagh or any other honest gentleman to see Matthews put on the Supreme Bench without a protest.

MATRIMONIAL INFELICITIES.—In a divorce case before Judge Lawrence, of the Supreme Court of New York, last week, the Judge said he regarded the great increase of late of suits for divorce as one of the alarming features of the times. He would never grant a divorce which rested to any extent upon the admission of the defendant. Nearly one-fifth of the business of the present term of the court, at Chambers, said Judge Lawrence, had related to suits having reference to matrimonial troubles, including motions for alimony in suits for separation and for absolute divorce.

"THE Kinderhook Glutton" is dead, and a famine is thus averted in Columbia county, New York. It is said of him that he would eat as long as anything eatable remained before him. It is alleged that at one sitting he has eaten twenty pounds of solids and drunk a gallon of milk and coffee. Five pounds of beefsteak were regarded by him as but an appetizer, and unless such side dishes as a half peck of potatoes, a whole boiled cabbage, a big pie and a complete pudding were provided also, he insisted that he had only lunched. His loss is the community's gain.

GREAT INCREASE IN IMMIGRATION.—The arrivals of Immigration at the port of New York during the past week numbered 7,798, which is far beyond anything on record at this season of the year. A comparison of the arrivals for the present year with those of 1880, which was the largest year ever known, up to and including the 24th ultimo, shows an increase during 1881 of 10,898. The increase in January was 2,405; in February, 1,849, and in March, 6,644. The arrivals during the first twenty-four days of March were 19,583.

A SPECIAL from Jacksonville, Fla., says that "Jay Gould has just concluded a contract by which he is to control every orange grove in Florida for thirty years. He drew his check for an enormous sum, and will leave the state as soon as he has staked off his alligator farm—another new scheme, which has startled every equarium in the United States, as it is apprehended that alligators will come high next year. Some of Mr. Gould's alligator traps occupy an acre of ground."

DR. BOCHANAN is out in a confession in which he says that twenty thousand of his bogus diplomas are abroad in this country, and forty thousand in Europe, most of them doubtless in actual use by quacks. This thing is stopped now, but Pennsylvania is responsible for this army of scoundrels abroad in the land, with letters of marque authorizing them to prey indiscriminately upon the lives and purses of mankind.

THE Crisfield Leader predicts a great scarcity of crabs this spring. The river shore is strewn with dead crabs, and it is therefore concluded that it will be late in the season before they become plentiful again.

THE PEACH CROP NORTH—The N. Y. World of last Monday says: In order to tell the extent of damage and the present condition of the growing fruit along the Hudson Valley, a World correspondent has visited the principal fruit-growing sections during the past week. Since 1876 the growers have had the "peach fever." Every spring enormous quantities of young trees have been planted. It is estimated that nearly six million trees have been planted on both shores of the Hudson during the past five years. Many horticulturists have their entire capital invested in raising peaches for the New York, Philadelphia and other markets. The exceptional severity of the past winter gave rise to the report that the buds on the trees in the Hudson River Valley would be killed. This announcement was made before a thorough examination of the trees had been made. It now turns out that the cry about the buds being frozen is without foundation. From Marlborough to Esopus along the river front the prospects of an abundant crop during the coming season are very promising. During the past two years many leading farmers in the Wallkill Valley have engaged in the culture of fruit. Thousands of young trees will bear this year for the first time. If the buds sustain no further injury between now and the middle of May the peach crop along the Hudson Valley for 1881 will be a fair one.
