Agricultural.

English Farmers in Despair.

From the London Economist.

It may be from fear of America, it may be from the long continuance of unprofitable harvests, it may be from the rise in the expenditure especially upon labor, or it may even be from increased intelligence, but there is a hopelessness about farmers' complaints which experienced men [illegible] member before. They hardly look for any improvement. They do not speak of the bad times as exceptional. They do not, among each other, talk of prices as sure to improve. Above all, they throw up their farms on apparently light provocation. Experienced land agents notice a total difference of tone, an indisposition to bid, a lack of determination to make need but by others, and to stick to them. The tenants, they say, seem not to want the farms, and make offers too low to be entertained, in a kind of spiteful sport. Very often no offers at all can be obtained, and the land is either thrown into the landlord's hands or goes out of cultivation. The latter occurrence was formerly most unusual in Great Britain, and seems almost impossible; but there is no reason to doubt the statements made that in every county in the south and east large numbers of farms formerly yielding good rents are lying idle, the landlords being unwilling to let at low rents to men who ask long leases, and unwilling to cultivate for themselves or able to bear a temporary loss. We know from our own experience of a district in which eleven farms, poorish to fair as to soil, are deserted and untilled, and have read advertisements of a quite extraordinary character in the way of temptation to tenants. Of farms in the landlord's hands, and of farms broken into two or three, there is no end, while land in modest patches, has sunk in value in a degree which suggests a kind of dread among tenants as well as landowners. There is a feeling of hopelessness, in fact, abroad among farmers of the better class and of reluctance to remain in the business, which of itself may produce important effects, although we do not think it has been an important element in the trade. It differed from all others in its attraction for a class—those who preferred country life and were content not only with [illegible] profits, but with almost an entire absence of those chances which in many walks of life are so attractive. Now that willingness has disappeared.

Support Your Local Paper.

A [illegible] people in every community do absolutely nothing to support their local papers, and yet reap the benefit—in dollars and cents—every day, of the editor's work. A man will say, "Advertising does no good in my business; it may be necessary for dry goods men, or milliners, but it's of no use to my business; I have to keep men on the road and get my customers by going after them; and yet the fact is that the town in which he does his business would be unknown, the railroad over which he ships his goods would be unbuilt, and he himself unheard of, were it not for the newspaper, which he says does him no good. The local newspaper is of benefit to every man in the community, just as much as the local government; and when a man refuses to contribute to the support of the paper, on the ground that it "does him no good," he might just as well refuse to pay his taxes for the support of the courts and the police force, on the ground that he "never breaks the law, and doesn't need any officers." There are men who consider themselves perfectly honest, and very pious, who are doing business in every community, and every day appropriating to their own use the fruits of other men's labors, by reaping the benefits of the newspaper without contributing a cent to its support, and yet they would be terribly shocked if they would be charged with stealing wood from their neighbors. But the principle is just the same, the only difference being that in the one case the law can reach them, and in the other it cannot; but, morally, it is just as dishonest to steal the fruit of your neighbor's enterprise, as to steal his fuel or his chickens. Too much credit cannot be given to the weekly newspaper for the work it has done, and is still doing, for the benefit of this country.—[Western Homestead.

Substituting Twine for Wire.

Many manufacturers of reaping machines are trying to substitute twine for wire in binding sheaves of wheat and other cereals. In addition to the fact that a royalty has to be paid on the patent for binding with wire automatically, the use of wire is alleged to be objectionable for the following among other reasons: When it gets into the thresher it breaks the teeth and renders the machine useless; small pieces of wire with needle-like points attach themselves to the straw and have pierced the intestines of animals who have eaten of the straw, causing their death; sever fires in mills have been attributed to sparks thrown off by the contact of the millstone with the wire; when the straw is used to make paper the pulp has been rendered useless by the presence of particles of wire, and large magnets have been required to eliminate them. It is estimated that farmers will require on an average 200 lbs of hemp or flax twine, the cost of which would be about $40, or one half the cost of wire. To bind wheat would require twenty-five times as much, or 10 cts to a bushel of grain or for the whole crop raised last year in the United States fifty thousand tons of hemp, which could be made into a cord long enough to girdle the earth 10 times. It is suggested that if twine came into general use as a binder, the farmers, especially in Kentucky and Missouri, who have been raising hemp and flax principally for the seed, would be able to dispose of the stocks also. There are now ten factories in this country [illegible] of twine, but their capacity is less than the amount of twine that would be required for the full crop of wheat.

The Sugar Beet.

Are any of our farmers arranging to plant sugar beets this season on a large scale, and in their best land? Remember, the crop is twice as remunerative as corn and there is a large sugar factory at Wilmington which will buy all that are raised. They will net the farmer $5 per ton, and 12 and 15 tons to the acre may easily be raised. Plant sugar beets and make money.

For a kicking horse fill an old sack with hay and suspend it from the loft by means of a rope, in such a manner that the horse will be able to kick it every time it swings against him. "Let him kick it until he stops of his own accord, and you will have no more trouble with him that way.

EARS FOR THE MILLION!

Tao Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil

Positively Restores the Hearing, and is the Only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is extracted from a peculiar species of small White Shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Carcharodon Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 1110. Its cures were so numerous and many so remarkably astonishing, that the remedy was officially proclaimed over the entire Empire. Its use became so universal that for over 300 years no Deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address at $1 per bottle.

Only Imported by HAYLOCK & CO., Dept. 41., New York.

Its virtues are unquestionable and its curative character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and personal observation.

Among the many readers of the Review in one part and another of the country, it is probable that numbers are afflicted with deafness, and to such it may be said: "Write at once to Haylock & Co., 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1, and you will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of New York Mercantile Review, Sept. 25, 1880.

COLLECTOR'S FINAL NOTICE.

THE 2D OF FEBRUARY has come and gone, and many tax bills are yet unpaid, thus leaving the collector liable to prosecution and punishment at the May Term of the Circuit Court. I cannot thus imperil my reputation and my bond.

I am now posting my accounts and adjusting my books, and will commence scheduling the property of delinquents as follows:

In District No. 1, Wednesday, March 16.
" " 2, Friday, " 18.
" " 3, Monday, " 21.
" " 4, Wednesday, " 23.
" " 5, Saturday, " 26.

A schedule makes a legal cost of $2.33. The advertisement of property will follow as soon as they can be prepared, and published. This makes additional costs. The sales will follow, and more costs will be insured.

I do hope that I will not be obliged to make even one schedule; but the taxes MUST BE COLLECTED, cost what it will.

BEGS to announce that he has received another invoice of the celebrated Waltham Watches, all sizes and grades. These watches are now used on the principal railroads in England in preference to any other make, being more reliable time keepers. They are the most popular watch in the market. Two years guaranty with each watch. Patronizing home made watches, they are both better and cheaper than foreign make. may21,78
