From the New York Observer.

DO IT WELL.

"Do it well, James!" It was Grandpa Clark's voice. James knew that, and he didn't look up from his work of raking the weeds out of the garden path. He raked them carelessly, leaving a weed here and a weed there, and not stopping to remove the long root of knot-grass that had caught on the corner of the onion bed.

"[illegible] Clark, "and if it rains to-morrow, these scattering weeds will take root and be as thrifty as ever. Whatever you do, my boy, do it well. The slighting of any piece of work, however unimportant, leads to neglect of more important things and soon everything the hand touches is passed over carelessly. Habitual neglect makes a bad workman. Let me tell you a story. You [illegible] come here and compost in the house of this tree, and you will work the better for the rest and for the little lesson you will find in my story."

James dropped his rake and hastened to accept the invitation of his employer. The old gentleman scowled as the long handle of the rake fell across the row of early peas, but he said nothing about it, and as the lad seated himself on a rustic seat, and fanned himself with his broad-brimmed straw hat, Grandpa Clark went on:

"Several years ago a well-to-do farmer in a prosperous Connecticut river town divided his property, consisting of real estate, stock and farming tools, equally between his two sons. [illegible] wife went to another county to live with a married daughter. The boys were twins but were utterly unlike in character. While they worked under their father's instructions this difference was not particularly noticeable; but when each went to work for himself, it cropped out immediately. While Henry cultivated a little land in the nicest possible manner, Harvey vowed a good deal and slighted all. Each was ambitious in his way.—Henry to become a good farmer, as the surest way to make farming, in the long run, profitable; Harvey to make money, whatever the consequences to the farm. The first year he did very well. The next year the weeds which had been left around the borders of his fields to go to seed were multiplied four-fold; the next, forty-fold. Indeed, his farm was swamped with weeds. The people in the town began to look upon the farm as a seed bed which was doing great damage to the whole township of fine, highly-cultivated farms, and a few of the most prominent men got together to talk it over.

"'I have great respect for the family,' said one, 'and Harvey is a good fellow, but a man who will allow a plot of Canada thistles, and other noxious plants and weeds, to go to seed on his farm year after year can be called nothing but a bad citizen, who not only harms himself, but his neighbors also.'

"'It is a shame for him to go on so,' said another, 'after we have waged a war of extermination upon these troublesome plants, to have him invite them back. He has undone the work of years already.'

"'He ought not to be tolerated in town,' said a third; 'we must buy him out.'

"So they set a value upon the farm; each one told what he would pay toward it, and one was chosen to make the offer to Harvey. He caught at it very readily, as it was [illegible] liberal one. He supposed he could purchase another farm in the vicinity; but, to his surprise, there was not a farm for sale in the township; the people were all leagued against him. When he found out the truth of the matter he was very indignant, and said he had a right to seed his whole farm to clover, thistles, wild parsnip and butter-and-eggs, if he chose, and that he would get the better of them yet. He bought a farm in the next town, but the succeeding session of the State Legislature prohibited the sowing of the seeds of noxious weeds.

"So poor Harvey was not able to revenge himself in that way. It seemed for a time that he made an effort to correct his shiftless habits, but he found it a hard matter. All his life he was hampered by the early contracted habit of slighting everything he undertook to do. Bad luck followed him, of course; and while his brother Henry became a wealthy man, a good citizen, and an active Christian, poor Harvey lost all his property, and to the last he [illegible] that it not for the kindness of his brother, who provides for him and his wife."

"Thank you, sir," said James, heartily, "I think I will get an old broom and sweep out the walk; then I shall be sure to get every weed. After this I will try to make good 'Do it well' my motto. I shall be able to be turned out of town." And James picked up his rake and hung it upon the bough of an apple tree, while he hastened away after his wheelbarrow and broom.

Deacon Hunt was naturally a high-tempered man, and used to beat his oxen over their heads. [illegible] It was observed that when he became a Christian his cattle were remarkably docile. A friend inquired into the secret. "Why," said the deacon, "formerly when my oxen were a little contrary, I flew into a passion and beat them unmercifully; this made the matter worse. Now, when they do not behave well, I go behind the load, sit down, and sing 'Old Hundred.' I don't know how it is, but the psalm tune has a surprising effect upon my oxen."

Matthew Crawford states in an exchange that the destruction of tomato plants by the cut-worm may be avoided by making a compact mound of earth about the plant, as large as an upturned teacup, the cut-worm being unable to climb. Another way, which we have long practised, is to wrap around the stem, if the cut-worm is feared, a few inches of paper or a large green leaf, any kind, before drawing the mound to it. They will not take the trouble to gnaw through the paper or leaf.

When squashes and melons first begin, ground give them a dusting of ash-compost, made of equal parts of sifted unbleached wood ashes and gypsum or land plaster. This will protect the young plant from the "striped-bug," and its use may be continued with advantage until the vines get so strong as not to care for this enemy. As top-dressing to almost any garden crop, it will be found beneficial.

Why will not grass grow under our trees? M. Paul Bert has shown that green light hinders the development of plants. Plants enclosed in a green glass frame wither and die as though they were in darkness. M. Bagnard finds that plants specially require the red rays. If sunlight is deprived of the red rays the plants soon cease to thrive.

Bradstreet estimates the total yield of the cotton crop of 1881 at 6,233,000 bales.

CURE FOR THE MILLION!

Foo-Choo's Balsam of Shark's Oil

Positively Restores Gray Hairs, and is the only Absolute Cure for Deafness Known.

This Oil is extracted from a peculiar species of small white shark, caught in the Yellow Sea, known as Orcharoton Rondeletii. Every Chinese fisherman knows it. Its virtues as a restorative of hearing were discovered by a Buddhist Priest about the year 110. Its cures were so numerous and many so seemingly miraculous, that the remedy was officially proclaimed from every shrine in the Empire. Still unknown to Western skill for over 800 years, no deafness has existed among the Chinese people. Sent, charges prepaid, to any address $1 per bottle.

Only Imported by HAYLOCK & CO., SOLE AGENTS FOR AMERICA, 7 Dey St., New York.

[illegible] character absolute, as the writer can personally testify, both from experience and personal observation.

Among the many readers of the Review in one part and another of the country, it is probable that numbers are afflicted with deafness, and to such it may be said: "Write at once to Haylock & Co., 7 Dey Street, New York, enclosing $1, and your will receive by return a remedy that will enable you to hear like anybody else, and whose curative effects will be permanent. You will never regret doing so."—Editor of New York Merchants' Review, Sept. 25, 1880.

BEGS to announce that he has received another invoice of the celebrated Waltham watches, all sizes and grades. These watches are now used on the principal railroads in England in preference to any other make, being more reliable time keepers. They are the most popular watch in the market. Two years guaranty with each watch. Patronize home-made watches, they are both better and cheaper than foreign watches. may31-1yr

HELP

Yourselves by making money when a golden chance is offered, thereby always keeping poverty from your door. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. We furnish an expensive outfit and all that you need, free. No one who engages fails to make money very rapidly. You can devote your whole time to the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

Collins & Wilson will not be undersold by any house on Boots and Shoes. Give them a call.
