SATURDAY.....JUNE 11, 1881.

GAMBLING.

"Yes," said a well-known gambler, in answer to an interrogation from a reporter, "Chicago is one of the greatest gambling centres in the United States."

"But," he continued, "it isn't now so much so as it was six or seven years ago. I tell you the 'boys' had a good time here when Jake Rem was Chief of Police, and Joe Medill and Calvin Mayors."

"How do the gamblers manage to get on their feet after they have once been broke," asked the reporter.

"Well, you see they borrow from one another, and then pay back when they make a winning. A professional gambler when he does win generally wins a large amount; but it is a fact that the majority are broke twenty-nine days in every month. I remember some five years ago that two waiters, who worked at the Commercial Hotel, went one evening to a game on Clark street, known as the 'Combination.' The extent of their assets was twenty-five cents; and they wished to make it a half a dollar to enable them to purchase two oyster stews. The game was a faro, and No. 1 sat down and soon ran the quarter up to 5. No. 2 was given a shake, and they both went in and soon had $200 out. Not yet satisfied, they laid down their money, and at 6 o'clock in the morning they had won between them $2,300. Being inclined to be sports, they opened a faro bank of their own, in the Nevada block, corner of Washington and Franklin streets. Everything ran along smoothly for a couple weeks until one night a drunken brakeman from one of the railroads went up and won the roll. The men went back to their old business, and though they often tried they never struck it again."

"There is a great deal of cheating done at faro, ain't there?"

"Yes; at the time of which I am speaking the West Side was filled with brace games, especially Halstead street. They usually had men to steer victims to the game. For instance, a man meets another on the street, enters into a conversation, treats him and then insinuates that he is going up to the faro-bank to try his luck and asks his friend to accompany him and look on. They go up, the 'capper' buys a stack of chips, with money which of course belongs to the bank; he stakes the victim. It generally ends in the 'sucker' losing every cent, and after he has departed the 'capper' gets forty per cent. of the winnings, the dealer ten, the remainder going to the bank. A good "brace" dealer commands a large salary in gambling circles."

"Who has made the largest winnings in Chicago at a legitimate game?"

"Well, there is a well-known member of a liquor firm here who drew out some $12,000. Al Smith won $9,000 one time in this town; and speaking of losses, a capitalist from England passed through this city four years ago on his way to Colorado to purchase land. While here he became acquainted with an obliging young man who talked about England to him and took him up in the Kentucky block where he finally lost over $30,000. It is needless to remark that he did not buy any land in Colorado."

NEGRO PROVERBS.—Negro proverbs are even more suggestive and speaking than the Spanish, which are famous the world over. Witness these: One-eyed mules can't be handled on the blind side. Moon may shine but lighted knot's mighty handy. De pig dat runs off wid de year er corn gets little mo' dan de cob. Likor talks mighty loud when it gets loose from de jug. Sleepin' in de fence corner don't fetch Krismus in de kitchen. 'Tween be bug and de bee-martin tain't hard to tell who's gwine ter get ketched. De proudness ub a man don't count w'en his head's cold. You'd see mo'er de mink ef he knowed whare de yard dog sleeps. Hungry rooster don't cackle w'en he fin' a wum. Fattening hog ain't in luck.

A FEW days ago a youthful African of about twelve summers, named Pea Blossom, was convicted of stealing in a Galveston court and sentenced to imprisonment in the county. "He is rather young to steal I should suppose," remarked a bystander to Uncle Mose. "No, sah, he's not too young to steal, but he's got cotched a little early."

"How came these holes in your elbows?" said a widowed mother to her only son. "Oh, mother, I hid behind the sofa when Col. Gubler was saying to Maria that he'd take her even if you had to be thrown in; and he didn't know I was ther'; so I held my tongue and I laughed in my sleeves till I burst 'em."

A LECTURER was once in a dilemma which he will probably never forget. While talking about art he ventured the assertion: "Art can never improve nature." At that moment some one in the audience cried out in a gruff voice, "Can't he? Well, then, how do you think you would look without your wig?"
