The Kent News.

SATURDAY ..... AUG. 13, 1881.

Kent Co. Agricultural Association.

CLUB ROOM, Aug. 8, 1881.

Messrs. Editors:—The communication from the club, intended for last week's paper, was mailed before 12 o'clock on Thursday last at Worton postoffice, and you should have had it by 2 o'clock the same day. Postmasters and mail agents cannot be too careful; every letter should be considered by them of the utmost importance. The neglect in this case caused us to have a very small meeting to-day, when in view of the rapidly approaching exhibition, it is desirable that as many members as possible should be present.

Several incidental questions were briefly discussed. Plowing peach orchards in the fall was considered hurtful to the trees, and if persisted in would kill them, and that the less plowing an orchard has the better, provided it can by other means be kept in good tilth and clear of grass and weeds.

Cutting off corn high up the stalk or close to the ground was considered. The lower part of the stalk is useless for provinder, and worth little for manure, being very heavy to handle, but cutting close was held to be the best farming, as the stalks made the rakings hard to thresh.

An essay from the Massachusetts Farmer was read by Mr. Henry Massey on the destruction of weeds and the better cultivatian of the soil, and defending farmers of limited means from unjust comparisons with those who are so fortunate as have bank stock, dividends, &c., to farm with. All honor to that farmer who with a poor farm, a large family, and it may be interest on a large part of the price of his farm to pay, raises his family creditably, and meets his obligations promptly, and it is also honorable to the man of wealth to improve his land to the highest point, showing the ultimate capacity of the soil and beautifying his neighborhood, but the weight of honor is due to the former; with the latter farming is a pastime, attractive as well to his mind as his money; with the former it is a stern duty, on which the very being of himself and his loved ones depend. If owners and tenant could change places at times, and each learn by experience something of the duties and trials of the other, mutual blessing would result. How often men of the broadest philanthropy are called cold and unfeeling simply because they have never "been there," and not from want of feeling.

The question which is the most profitable, wheat at $1, or corn at 50 cents? received some consideration, but the conclusion of the whole discussion was that it all "depends."

A piano and organ agent was present and gave notice that he intended to have a superior piano and organ at the fair, with a competent performer to bring out the merits of each.

Those in authority decided to have a plowing match at the fair and having offered the magnificent sum of $20 as a premium, ($1200 for agricultural horse trots), and have appointed your correspondent as superintendent. "Great oaks, &c.," who can tell. However he has very modestly as becomes the amount of premiums accepted the position and intends by the aid of your columns and the good plowmen of Kent, if sustained by the Club, to make it a success, and an attractive and useful feature of the fair. The rules will probably be given out next Monday, and the "trial" is intended not only to show the skill of the plowmen, (and old Kent has some splended plowman) but the relative value of the different plows. On one thing you may rely, it will be a fair field and no favors.

A member briefly described an invention of his, and on which he has applied for a patent, to regalate the depth at which drills deposit seed wheat and fertilizers, and said he would explain the same more fully at the next meeting of the Association, and would like the views of the members and farmers generally upon it. That much of the seed and fertilizers is wasted by being planted too deep is absolutely certain, and as this invention can be applied to any drill, if it will do what is claimed for it, (and all who have examined it say that it will) it will meet a very great want, felt by every man who uses a drill. It will cost about $1 a tooth, is not in the way, will cause the drill to run much lighter, and it is claimed will cause the seed and fertilizer to be deposited accurately at any desired depth; come and see it and hear about it.

Have you seen the pamphlet containing the "premiums and regulations" of the 11th annual fair of the "Kent County Agricultural Association?" It is a very creditable effort, and if the lower two-thirds of page 18 had never been in it, it would be very complete indeed. PARTICEPS.
