How a Woman Does It.

Some crusty old curmudgeon thus tells how a woman goes to work to mail a letter. It is a libel on the sex. Some of the girls will make it red hot for him if he is discovered. Any day when you have time you can see how she does it by dropping into the postoffice. She arrives there with a letter in her hand. It is a sheet of note in a white envelope. She halts in front of the stamp window, opens her mouth to ask for a stamp, but suddenly darts away to see if she has made any errors in the names or dates. It takes her five minutes to make sure of this, and then she balances the letter on her finger, and the awful query arises in her mind: "Perhaps it is an overweight." She steps to the window and asks the clerk if he has a three-cent stamp, fearing he has not. She looks over every compartment in her portmonaie before she finds the change to pay for it. The fun commences as she gets the stamp. She fiddles around to one side, removes her gloves, closely inspects the stamp and hesitates whether to "lick it" or wet her finger. She finally concludes it would not be nice to show her tongue, and wets her finger and passes it over the envelope. She is so long picking up the stamp that the moisture is absorbed, and the stamp slides off the envelope. She tries it twice more with like success, and getting desperate she gives the stamp a "lick" and it sticks. Then comes the sealing of the letter. She wets her finger again, but the envelope flies open, and, after three minutes' delay, she has to pass her tongue along the streak of dried mucilage. She holds the letter a long time to make sure that the envelope is all right, and finally appears at the window and asks: "Three cents is enough, is it?" "Yes, ma'am." "This will go out to-day?" "Certainly." "Will it go to Chicago without the name of the county on?" "Just the same." "What time will it reach there?" "To-morrow morning." She sighs, turns the letter over and over and finally asks: "Shall I drop it into one of those places there?" "Yes, ma'am." She walks up in front of the six orifices, closely scans each one of them, finally makes a choice and drops—no she doesn't. She stops to see where it will fall, pressing her face against the window until she flattens her nose out of shape, and she doesn't drop it where she intended to. She, however, releases it at last, looks down to make sure that it did not go on the floor, and turns away with a sigh of regret that she didn't take one more look at the superscription.

Premium on Marriage.

A new society has recently been organized in Pennsylvania, and is gradually making its way down in Maryland, known as the "Mufflin County (Pa.) Mutual Aid Society for Unmarried Persons," which will enable our bachelors—old and young—to contract the marriage state without apprehensions of future financial trouble. The object of the organization is as novel as it is laudable, and promises to supply a want long felt by young persons about to cast themselves upon the often turbulent sea of matrimony. Its purposes are to provide a benefit for persons of limited means who desire to marry, but who are prevented from doing so because of a sad lack of cash. The cost is not near so great per year as life insurance, and has the superior advantage of contemplating life, while "life" insurance contemplates only "death." The advantage of such an organization will at once command itself to the unmarried of both sexes. We learn from the Cecil Democrat that a lively business is being done by the agent in that county. Why not some enterprising person take out an agency in this county? It is approved by prominent Pennsylvanians.

A GERMAN lately married says: "I'd vas yoost so easy as a needle cood valk out mit a camel's eye as to get der behindt vord mit a womans."

IF you want to make a seaside hotel-keeper as mad as a Texas steer, circulate a report that a shark has beeen seen near his bathing grounds.

THE New Haven Register man is inventing an automatic housekeeper, which is to be wound up at night, and at six o'clock in the morning it will kindle the fire, get breakfast, ring the bell, wash the dishes, sweep the floor, make beds, dust the furniture and do all the cooking, washing and ironing. Such a contrivance will certainly fill a long-felt want, but if the Register man will put on an attachment that will pull off a man's boots when he comes home at midnight full of business cares and beer and lend him twenty-five cents next morning to get his bitters, he can sell them for more than two dollars and a-half a piece.

WET BOOTS.—We give the following advice to farmers, who next to fishermen are apt to get their boots wet through: When the boots are taken off, fill them quite full with dry oats. This grain has a great fondness for damp, and rapidly absorbs the last vestage of it from the wet leather. As it takes up the moisture it swells; fills the boot like a tightly fitting last, keeping its form and drying the leather without hardening it. In the morning shake out the oats and hang them in a bag near the fire to dry, ready for the next night, draw on the boots and go happily about the day's work.

"VALL, my mercy goodness me!" exclaimed Count von Fiddlestickski, as he gazed for the first time at Niagara Falls. "I haf never in the whole course mit my experience seen der vaterfall liker dot. I fell mit mineself all full up mit excidemend. Vere ish de par-room?"

SQUIRE'S DAUGHTER: "What is this we hear about your father and mother quarrelling so Peggy?" "They've each had a little money left 'em, miss, and I think feyther he wants the lot. Anyways, they can't agree nohow whether her money is his'n, or his hern, or his'n and hers hern."

"SAM you are not honest. Why do you put all the good strawberries on the top of the measure and the little ones below?" "Same reason, sah, dat makes the front of your house marble and de back gate chiefly slop bar'l, sah."

DU MAURIER has a barber saying, "You're very bald, sir. Have you tried our tonic lotion?" And the bald-headed patient in the chair replies, "Oh, yes. But that's not what's made all my hair fall off."

A MAN in love may be likened to a fly in a spider's web, entangled by one of the most fragile substances yet most difficult from which to escape.

BALTIMORE is trying to form a new crack militia regiment in time for it to participate in the Yorktown centennial.

Among the guests at Ocean City is a young Parisian widow of reported beauty and "untold" wealth.
