BALTIMORE MARKET.—The Baltimore papers of Thursday quote as follows:

WHEAT—Longberry $1.37@1.40; Fultz $1.30@1.35, for fair to good. CORN—White, prime, 65@66; yellow 66@68. OATS—Maryland 55c.

Letter from Millington.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—It is with much regret I note the sudden death of our esteemed friend and neighbor Lewis F. Cole who departed this life on Sunday morning, 11th inst. He had been unwell for several weeks, but not confined to his bed or house until within a day or two before he died, and on Tuesday preceding his decease, he went to Philadelphia and consulted Dr. Agnew, who we believe advised him about the same as Dr. E. J. Power had done. He leaves a wife, one child, and many relatives and friends, to lament his unexpected death.

It now appears to be an established fact that a telegraph wire will soon be extended from Massey's to Centreville, the poles being already up as far as Sudlersville and it is said the new Company intend to run two passenger trains on this road in a short time.

Business seems to be livening up in our town, especially in the mercantile trade; Mr. John C. Johnson, one of our young and enterprising merchants, has recently erected a commodious storehouse on the lot at the northeast corner of Express street and the railroad, which he now occupies; it is nicely finished with handsome counters running back on either side and grocery counter in the rear, lighted with three handsome chandeliers giving the whole a brilliant appearance at night resembling in style some of the finest city stores. The second-story is well lighted and furnished with tables, for clothing and other goods, and we predict for John a lucrative business.

Mr. Walter A. Harper has removed from Massey's and taken the store-house recently occupied by Thomas Hill where he has opened a full stock of goods. We heartily welcome Mr. H. hoping he will adopt the motto of quick sales and small profits.

A large supply of evergreens have been shipped from this depot to Philadelphia, perhaps not less than twenty thousand yards; a number of our townsmen have collected and fixed up from ten to fifteen hundred yards of liberty-vine and crow-foot a piece, from which they expect six to seven cents per yard net returns. For fear of taking up too much space I bring this broken epistle to a close wishing the editors and all their patrons a merry Christmas and happy New Year.

Millington, Dec. 20. TRAVELER.

LETTER FROM ROCK HALL.

Messrs. Editors:—Your correspondent in his last letter neglected to state that Mr. C. Ayres has just finished and occupies a neat cottage in the northern end of the village, and adjoining Mr. Henry Urie, jr., has purchased the Vickers property, paying six hundred and fifty dollars cash for it and now has a nice comfortable home where he has recently taken his pretty bride and commenced house-keeping. To keep up with the times our barber E. Swan has recently opened an eating-house, and the following sign hangs in front of it, "Rock Hall Hotel, on the European plan." He serves up roast turkey, fried oysters, coffee, &c., and seems well satisfied with the venture. So drummers take notice and remember where you can get a good meal for twenty-five cents.

Miss Downey and Miss Leary who run the millinery establishment, are doing well, the former having learned the business in a fashionable house in Baltimore gets up bonnets in the latest style, and the moderate prices draw trade from a distance. Capt. Young is busy at work cutting salt grass and within the past few years has sent hundreds of tons to the Baltimore market giving work to the boats which in turn bring considerable money for what has heretofore been burnt to get rid of. He has a good big pile waiting shipment. It is all baled and the freight is twenty-five cents on each. It is no uncommon thing to ship 40 or 50 bales a trip. It is extensively used in the city for bedding horses and cows, also for packing, and city cars in winter. Many of the wells in the village are entirely dry—something never before known and proves how dry the season was last Summer. We hope the Fall rains will soon reach the flowing underground springs so our usual supply may be obtained. As a general thing our water is good and soft, but our pastor the Rev. Mr. Green is trying to raise funds to have an artesian well sunk on the church property, which if successful will be of great advantage, as the parsonage is built on the old grave yard and many think an ordinary well would not be desirable.

The mild weather keeps the ducks, swan, and geese up the bay, hence there has been very little gunning this winter, rabbits and birds being very scarce.

The oyster business still continues lively and they have brought better prices on the shore this season than for some years. Those who took advantage of good weather and planted beds have made money.

The stores are getting in their holiday goods and hope to have a good trade.

Accept the wishes of the writer that the editors of the NEWS may have a merry Christmas, happy new year and a big list of new subscribers with pay in advance. MORE ANON.

Prof. Rivers' Address.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—The address of Prof. Rivers on the subject "Shall we abandon our Faith because Science appears to be in conflict with it," delivered Friday evening, Dec. 16, in the College Chapel, before the Mount Vernon Literary Society, occupied from three quarters of an hour to an hour in delivery, and was listened to with quiet attention by the audience which, though comparatively small and composed mostly of young persons, seemed to be appreciative.

The speaker appeared earnest, and deeply interested in the theme. He paid high tribute to science, remarking with emphasis, "I honor science;" and he acknowledged fully half of our civilization due to its triumphant achievements. He touched lightly upon evolution, which he called evolutionism, and, as partly illustrating it he set forth the origin of the solar system on the "Nebular hypothesis." He spoke of the revelations of geology, the vastness of the universe, and the littleness of man, which minuteness he illustrated by the fact that he could not be seen from so near a body as our moon by even the most powerful of our telescopes, yet has he the audacity to assert "there is no God," claiming matter and force as the "All-in-All," and leaving no room for an all-wise Deity. Darwinism, with its missing link, leaves room for doubt, and lends encouragement to the antecedent probability of the continued security as well as correctness of our faith. He said it was preposterous to deny to design a designer, and unwise to accept the undemonstrated theories and conclusions of scientists, since what appears to be philosophical truth in one age gives way to more plausible appearances of philosophy in the next.

He acknowledged himself no scientist, being merely a desultory reader of its literature, and, consequently, not versed in its practical methods, he is unacquainted with the full strength of the supports which underlie its far-reaching generalizations. His, on the contrary, he said, has been rather the lot of a student of "humbler things". There were some good thoughts in the address.

VISITOR.

A QUARREL RESULTING IN DEATH—Particulars of the Caroline County Affair.—John Blanche, aged sixty, and son this year carried on a farm for Jas. L. Payne, in the fourth election district of Caroline county, Md. Between the landlord and the tenants there was an unsettled and disputed matter in connection with rent, and Payne appointed a day on which the father and son were to meet him at his house to straighten the matter up, which was not done at the appointed time, and all three met Thursday last at a public sale on the farm of one Voorhees, near Upper Hunting Creek. Young Blanche was asked here by Payne why he had failed to put in appearance at the appointed time, and he answered that he did not intend to come; that they never intended to settle in the way proposed by Payne and used abusive language. Payne moved off, but while talking with a gentleman was again confronted by the young man, who had become violent and abusive, until Payne struck his assailant with a bean pole. This was witnessed by the old man, who came to his son's assistance, and hurled a heavy stone against Payne's head with such force as to stagger him. Recovering Payne grappled the elder Blanche, who, violently mad, became suddenly speechless, and sank limp and almost lifeless against the side of the house. He was borne home and died the next day.

IT will take something more than Presidential messages, Congressional bombast or newspaper manifestoes to frighten the Mormons. Three magnificent temples are now building in Utah and one in Southern Idaho. If the government does not turn them into prisons ere long for the confinement of the leacherous polygamist it will fail in its duty and disappointed the law-abiding people, who have faith that the present administration will uproot this growing evil.

GUITEAU NOTES.

HOW THE ASSASSIN WAS FRIGHTENED BY THE MAN FROM LEADVILLE—A CAST OF HIS FACE TAKEN —INTERVIEW WITH HIS FORMER WIFE.

It will be remembered that some ten days ago in court Guiteau, who had just read in the newspapers that his divorced wife—now Mrs. Dunmire—had been summoned by the prosecution as a witness against him, made various vulgar remarks concerning her, and threatened that when she came upon the stand he proposed to "rip up her record," as he termed it. Mrs. Dunmire did testify on Friday, and although her evidence went very far to show him up as a sane scoundrel, it was noted with surprise that he never interrupted her, and that, as she went out of the court room, he spoke of her as a "high-toned Christian lady," to whom he wished well. It was also remarked that during her examination he exhibited an extraordinary degree of nervous fear, his hands trembling as he held the paper which he pretended to read and behind which he was concealing himself, and that he breathed a long sigh of relief when he induced Mr. Scoville to cut short the cross-examination. The throng of spectators that daily crowd the court room were disappointed in their hope of a sensation, and there has been a great deal of conjecture as to what influence abated the ordinary truculence and blackguardism of the murderer and forced him to behave himself decently toward Mrs. Dunmire. The explanation is that when Mr. Dunmire arrived in Washington with his wife he heard of the threats that Guiteau had made, and at once sought an interview with Mr. Scoville, to whom he declared most emphatically that if the assassin attempted to blacken his wife's character or subject her to the slightest inconvenience while she was on the witness stand, he would shoot him down as he would a dog. Mr. Dunmire is a big, stalwart man, of the typical character of the men of Leadville, where he resides, and there is no doubt that if the occasion had offered itself, he would have been as good as his word. Mr. Scoville communicated to Guiteau the warning that Dunmire had uttered, and hence the wretch treated her with courtesy.

Clark Mills, the sculptor, called on the prisoner Friday afternoon, and took a plaster cast of his face. At first Guiteau objected, and for a time it looked as if the cast would not be made. He was impervious to argument, but when Mr. Mills tickled his vanity by telling him he had made casts of the heads of Webster, Calhoun, Garfield and other great men, he consented. After examining his face Mr. Mills told Guiteau it would be necessary for him to allow his beard to be shaved off. Guiteau put in another objection to this, but finally consented. A barber was secured, and in a few minutes Guiteau's face was shaved clean, his moustache and beard being shaved off. The work of taking the cast occupied nearly one hour, during which the prisoner kept remarkably quiet, assisting in every way he could, so that a "good job" would be the result.

On Saturday Mrs. Dunmire, Guiteau's divorced wife, her husband and little daughter called at the city jail to bid him farewell before starting for their home in Colorado. The scene in the assassin's cell is thus described: At first Guiteau appeared oblivious of their presence, but raising his eyes suddenly, they fell upon the lady's face, so, to his surprise, proved to be Mrs. Anna Dunmire, his divorced wife, her husband and their little daughter. This unexpected visit rather unstrung the prisoner, and for an instant he hung his head, but brightening suddenly, he walked forward, took the lady's hand and said he was pleased to see her. The lady was visibly affected, and tears welled up in her eyes, overflowing the lids and rolled down her cheks as she said, "Charlie I am sorry to find you in this condition."

"Oh! never mind that," said the prisoner, calmly. "I am very sorry that the whelp (evidently referring to District-Attorney Corkhill) brought you here. But he was disappointed in his purpose, you see, to embarrass you."

"I have called to say good-by, Charlie," Mrs. Dunmire said, evidently, desirous of ending the interview, "for I may never see you again," and then, weeping, she held out her hand to the prisoner, as if to say farewell. Guiteau was not satisfied, however to stop the interview there, and as if to prolong it, turned towards the lady's little girl and asked how old she was, asking as a peculiar look passed over her face and his thin lips twitched nervously, "Annie I can wish you no harm. I hope your life may be prosperous and happy."

Mr. Dunmire, who had been a silent spectator all that time, then walked over to Guiteau and said:

"Guiteau, I must bid you farewell also. We may never meet again."

Guiteau took the proffered hand, but turned his head away, and it was evident that he was impressed with the truth of the visitor's remarks. Without waiting for Guiteau to reply Mr. Dunmire added: "We say good-by now, for I hope we will be off to Leadville again by Monday. It's too close around here for me."

"It's too close hereabouts for me also," broke in the prisoner with a ghastly smile. "I wish I was a laborer out at Leadville." The Dunmires then departed.

DEATH OF ONE OF THE JUROR'S WIFE.

It was very generally known in and around the City Hall Monday morning that the wife of one of the jurors in the Guiteau case had died some hours previously, and that consequently there was little or no probability of the trial being proceeded with to-day. Nevertheless, the crowd waiting for the opening of the doors was as large as usual, and the court room soon after the doors were opened were filled to overflowing. The court was formally opened, and the jury were soon in their places, but there was one vacant chair. Before the court opened the bereaved husband tottered through the room blinded with tears, and falling into his chair covered his face with his handkerchief and bowed his head upon the chair in front of him. It is creditable to the throng that chatter ceased, and the silence of the room respected the private sorrow which cast its shadow into the court-room. The presence of Mr. Hobbs, as well as that of the prisoner, was needed before proper consent to his absence from the jury could be given, and a formal postponement took place. Both the District Attorney and Mr. Scoville concurred in authorizing the freedom of Mr. Hobbs all restraint to return to his home until after the funeral. The prisoner's consent being also essential, he gave it with great willingness, and was enough impressed with the situation to behave with great decorum. The adjournment of the court until after Wednesday, and a holiday which will probably be taken next Monday, will throw the trial beyond Christmas in a condition not much more advanced than at present. The advices from the mother of Mr. Scoville indicate her death as likely at any time, and it is thought that this would delay the trial a week or ten days.

READ CAREFULLY!

And BE THOROUGHLY CONVINCED

THAT THE FIRM OF BORDLEY BROS.

Have decided from this date to offer to the community at large

Bargains in Clothing

AND

Gents' Furnishing Goods,

More Wonderful perhaps than has ever been seen in this or any other market.

Now, read attentively, and you will find out some facts that will really surprise you. We do not try to humbug the people by telling them that we manufacture all our Clothing: it would be false, for we manufacture nothing, neither does any other clothier in Chestertown; we all buy alike, except this difference, viz:

BORDLEY BROS. BUY MORE CLOTHING THAN ANY HOUSE IN TOWN, and because they buy larger they buy Cheaper. Another fact we wish the public to thoroughly understand; it is this: We do not sell Clothing or anything else on commission, but, upon the contrary we pay the CASH for every article we buy.

The season is late, and our stock is entirely too large. Now, in order to sell these goods more rapidly, we intend for the NEXT THIRTY DAYS to offer BARGAINS such as will absolutely surprise the people of both Kent and Queen Anne's. We have nearly 500 Overcoats on hand, and in consequence of the very mild weather they have not been going off as fast as usual. In order to hasten the sale of these goods we have Marked Down every Overcoat in the house to astonishingly low figures. Indeed we are selling a great many Overcoats far below what it cost to manufacture them. Just here we will name you a few prices in order that you may know how we are selling them:

A good heavy Overcoat, men's size, for	$2.00
" " " " boys' " "	1.75
A much better Overcoat, men's size "	2.50
A still better Coat, extra heavy "	3.00
A good Overcoat, fit for Sunday wear for	5.00

These Overcoats in any other House would sell for more money. Now, we do not put these figures here merely to catch the eye; they are the honest, legitimate price of our Overcoats, and you have only to walk into our Store to have it proved. We have also some VERY FINE OVERCOATS; indeed, some of the finest in the market, which we are selling extremely low.

WE MAKE A SPECIALTY OF

Youth's, Boy's & Children's Suits And OVERCOATS.

We have on hand a Large and Varied Assortment of these Goods. We buy them direct from New York, thus insuring to our customers the Latest Designs and Lowest Prices.

ALL DURING THE MONTH OF DECEMBER we intend to display a good many Goods on the Street in front of our Store, with Very Low Prices marked on them, so that people can see for themselves how low we are selling goods. But of course our Stock is entirely too large to show but few goods; so that in order to find out how exceedingly low we are selling Suit Goods and Overcoats you will have to come inside. Now we know that a great many people make their Children

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS

Of a SUIT OR OVERCOAT.

Now if you call at BORDLEY BROS'. CLOTHING STORE, you will find more Suits and Overcoats for Boys and Children than any other Store on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. Look at the following prices and compare them with any other house of your acquaintance, and see if we don't sell them cheaper than any other place you can buy them:

Solid Wool Kersey Suit, for Men	$6.50
A Splendid Suit, we guarantee to be Solid Wool, for Men, only	9.75
A good School Suit for boys, only	3.00
A fine solid wool suit for boys, only	5.00
A fine solid wool Overcoat for boys, only	4.75

These figures are so astonishingly low that you can hardly believe them, but we positively declare that if you will call at BORDLEY BROS.' CLOTHING HOUSE you will then become thoroughly convinced that what we here advertise is honest and correct.

WHY IS IT?

You ask, have BORDLEY BROS. so suddenly decided to sell their Clothing so remarkably cheap? We answer: because the season has been so late, and their stock is entirely too large; therefore they have decided to cut it down by cutting down prices. In short, they have determined to get rid of their ENTIRE WINTER STOCK even at COST, rather than carry it over.

We mean every word we say, and you have only to glance at the prices on the street, or come in the store to be convinced that what we here advertise is every word true.
