A CARD.

To my Old Patrons and Friends on Miles, Choptank and Wye Rivers.

For the past 30 years I have diligently and faithfully, to the best of my ability endeavored to serve my customers to their entire satisfaction, and this is to inform them and the public generally, that notwithstanding the untrue report that I have sold out and quit, I am still in the boating business, and expect to remain in it, as long as the public sustains me. The Poetry.

A WOMAN'S AGE.

How old am I? Oh, how can I say?
How know my age, will you tell me, pray?
The day I was born I forgot, you see,
It seemed not so important to me.

I may be old, oh, so terribly old,
If I count by the sorrows my life has told;
Or very young, by the youthful glee
The sound of your footsteps awakes in me.

Will you measure time by the sorrows endured,
Or the exquisite bliss your love has assured?
I mind not the years, be they many or few,
I only care what I am to you.

Am I old or young, will you tell me, dear?
Not counting by day, or month, or year,
It matters not what others may deem,
I am just as old to you as I seem.

AGRICULTURAL.

Stable Ventilation.

There is no greater mistake made than not to allow fresh air to stock shut up in a stable. Cattle and horses require fresh air as much as human beings, and says a contemporary, if deprived of it the same evil results are as likely to happen, as in the case of men and women shut up in a confined atmosphere, which has been breathed over and over again until it becomes changed into a foetid poison. Under a long confinement to such air the constitution of the animals becomes debilitated and tendencies to disease are engendered which might have remained latent, or under more favorable circumstances have been outlived by the animals. Even strong, healthy cattle lose vitality in close, unventilated stables. It is economy, therefore, to provide suitable ventilation, and in doing so it should be remembered that without if, it is not only confined air that animals are compelled to breathe, but the exhalations from the excrements also. Nor should it be forgotten that while an abundance of fresh air is essential to health, warmth is equally so. Especially should draughts at the feet—as through cracks in the floor communicating with the outer air—be carefully guarded against. It is true all this involves some expense, but it is soon amply repaid in the health, the better assimilation of the food and, consequently, the better condition of the animals. Not only so, but work animals are stronger and better able to do a day's work on the same expenditure of food, while the liability to disease is greatly reduced.

Sunflower Seeds for Poultry.

There is a popular belief in some parts of the country that the sunflower is very useful in the poultry yard; and this is not without foundation. The following remarks, supplied by a correspondent, will give some idea as to the manner of its cultivation: About one and a quarter bushels of the white streaky variety are required for sowing one acre. The soil should be good—not too strong or too cold—well worked, and well manured. It will grow very well in a soil suitable for potatoes. The crop will be greatly improved by the addition of some kind of potash, kainit, etc., at the rate of about three hundred weight per acre, to be drilled in at the time of sowing, about April or May. The seed is dibbled in, in rows thirty inches apart, the holes being eighteen inches deep. Four seeds are put in, and the superfluous plants are hoed out as soon as possible, to prevent their spoiling one another. The average yield is forty bushels per acre. Sunflower seed is supposed to impart to poultry a glossy plumage, and to increase their prolificness It is also an excellent food for cattle who eat it, leaves, stems and all. The bark is used for paper making, and the stem, when dried, for fuel. The ashes contain ten per cent, of potash. Sunflower seed, if you can sell it, is much more profitable than buckwheat.

Keeping Sheep.

Every farmer, however few the acres, may profitable keep a certain number of sheep, for not only in summer, but also in winter, will sheep consume fodder otherwise wasted. Many persons suppose that it is not feasible to keep sheep with other stock in the same pasture or feeding yard. It is not safe to keep sheep in the same pasture with young horses. Both animals feed on short grasses and also weeds, and playful young horses sometimes injure sheep by racing them. With cattle the horns are the only danger, and sheep soon learn to keep out of the way of them While it is better that sheep should be kept by themselves, especially in winter, and in the case of large flocks decidedly so, yet when few sheep are kept they may be safely allowed to run with cattle in the pastures, and also in the feeding yards in the winter. Indeed, sheep soon learn to follow the cattle rather closely, especially in regions where predatory dogs are common, and instinctively so for protection. It is a fact that dogs seldom attacks sheep kept with cattle, unless in the case of some old rogue, and then only when the sheep are found at a considerable distance, for the instinct of the cattle is to attack animals found chasing or worrying other stock near them.

The American Dairyman says there is one point that should be deeply impressed upon the dairyman's mind, and that is if he wants to make a first-class article of butter he must churn often. Never let the cream get over three days old, no matter how cold it may be kept. If cold, it will get old, flat and frinky. If sour, the whey will eat up the best butter globules. Churn as often as you can.

Treat the poultry as well, or nearly as well as you do your cattle, sheep and horses, and you will have no reason to complain that they are a losing investment.

A Life Doubly Assured.

A RESIDENT of Bangor, Maine, writing to C. N. Crittenton, New York, for a supply of HALE'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR, mentions incidentally that three months ago a New England life insurance company refused to grant him a policy on the ground that he was consumptive. "But," he adds, "thanks to the healing properties of that inestimable preparation, my lungs are now perfectly sound, and I yesterday passed a medical examination without an objection, and insured my life for $5,000." Preventive of Malarial Diseases.

OPINION OF EMINENT DR. H. R. WALTON, OF ANNAPOLIS, MD.

"COLDEN'S LIQUID BEEF TONIC is a most excellent preparation. It is, as per excellence, superior to cod liver oil or anything I have ever tried in cases of impaired constitutions, and extremely beneficial as a preventive of malarial diseases." HENRY WAIKART'S

ICE CREAM SALOON!

AND

BAKERY,

AND

OYSTER AND EATING HOUSE,

Next Door to the Frame Hotel, Easton.

HENRY WAIKART

Having moved into his new quarters and fitted up his new Saloon and Bakery, next door to the European House of Mr. Haddaway, invites the public to call and see him.

His long experience as a Baker justifies him in claiming that his bread and cake are excelled by none. Fresh bread and cakes baked every day, Sundays excepted.

Meals served at all hours, from 6 A. M. to 11 P. M. Oysters by the plate, fried, roasted or stewed.

A good beef steak always ready, and French coffee a specialty.

Ice Cream made to order in winter, and kept constantly on hand in summer.

Terrapin and Game suppers furnished, but they must be specially ordered a few days in advance, so as to give time to procure the game

He will do his best to give satisfaction, and hopes the Easton people and visitors to town will encourage the effort to establish a first-class saloon in Easton. feb1,83
