MUDDY REFLECTIONS.

BY ANON.

Mud to the right of us,
Mud to the left of us,
Mud all around us—
Through it we blunder.
Everywhere we hear the cry,
With many a heartfelt sigh,
That it might soon get dry,
So we could plunder.

No one will shed a tear,
All will half with welcome cheer,
When it shall disappear,
Though we may wonder.
Long has it lain around,
No where will it be bound,
Everywhere can it be found,
Through it we wander.

Everything must have its day,
And mud must e'en give way,
Though, no doubt, it fain would stay,
Wherefore! we wonder.
For be the day so ever drear,
And heavy clouds hang in the air,
Sometime its sure to clear—
Sometime or other.

FACE POWDERS.

It is necessary to raise a warning cry against a most mischievous statement which has recently been circulated, and has already done harm, to the effect that "arsenic in small doses is good for the complexion." It is not difficult to imagine the risks women will incur to preserve or improve their "good looks." No more ingenious device for recommending a drug can be hit upon than that which the authors of this most baneful prescription of "arsenic for the complexion" have adopted. Suffice it to recall the fact that for many years past chemists and sanitarians have been laboring to discover means of eliminating the arsenical salts from the coloring matter of wall papers, and certain dyes once largely used for certain articles of clothing. It is most unfortunate that this hopelessly antagonistic recommendation of arsenic to improve the complexion should have found its way into print. Those who employ the drug as advised—and there are many either already using it or contemplating the rash act—will do so at their peril. So far as they are able, however, it will be the duty of medical men to warn the public against this pernicious practice, which is only too likely to be carried on secretly. It is not without reason that we speak thus pointedly, and urge practitioners to be on the qui vive in anomalous or obscure cases.—Lancet.

WHY OYSTERS SHOULD BE EATEN RAW.—Why oysters should be eaten raw is explained by Dr. William Roberts, of New York, in his letter on "Digestion." He says that the general practice of eating the oysters raw is evidence that the popular judgment upon matters of diet is usually trustworthy. The fawn-colored mass, which is the delicious portion of the fish, is its liver, and is simply a mass of glycogen. Associated with the glycogen, but withheld from actual contact with it during life, is its appropriate digestive ferment, the hepatic diastase. The mere crushing the oyster between the teeth brings these two bodies together, and the glycogen is at once digested without any other help than the diastase. The raw or merely warmed oyster is self-digestive. But the advantage of this provision is wholly lost by cooking, for the heat immediately destroys the associated ferment, and a cooked oyster has to be digested, like any other food, by the eater's own digestive powers.

A VALUABLE EXPRESS PACKAGE. — A remarkable express package passed through Roanoke, Va., a few days since on the Norfolk and Western Railroad in charge of an agent of the Southern Express Company. It was a beautiful girl, about 19 years old, well dressed, and billed from Selma, Ala., to New York, with a tag marked "C. O. D., $45," fastened with a blue ribbon around her neck. The young lady was very modest and quiet in her demeanor. The first-class passenger fare from Selma to New York is only $33, but, this being the first time she had been sent far from home, she elected to go as an express package, thinking that she could travel more safely. Her express receipt showed that her value had been placed at $5,000.

FEEDING A REGIMENT.—Eight hundred employes of the Western Union Telegraph Company in New York regularly eat in the great building corner of Dey and Broadway. To feed these the meats are put on the fire every morning at 4 o'clock, and when cooked are carried on to the steam tables. Beef, ham, tongue, vegetables, tea, chocolate and milk are the ordinary dishes served for dinner, which is charged at cost price of ten cents. This meal is served to all, no distinction is made from the lowest to the highest official in the company. No wine, liquors or ale are allowed. The men are waited on by men and the women by women. If any one desires a steak, an extra charge of ten cents is added.

GOV. STEPHENS is receiving earnest praise from the press of Georgia for the industry exhibited in the discharge of his official duties. While other Governors have accepted the consolidated reports of heads of departments, leaving the question of details to subordinates, Gov. Stephens goes through all details himself, and especially is this true where there is an expenditure of public money. He devotes his whole time to the service of the State, and evidently intends that Georgia shall not be disgraced with a defaulting official during his administration if he can prevent it.

HE WANTED TO SELL.—A Point Road boy came along to one of our neighbor's houses, a few days since, holding a very dirty dog, and asked the gentleman of the house:

"Don't you want to buy a dog, Mister?"

"What kind of a dog is it?" asked the gentleman.

The boy looked puzzled. "Well," said he, "it is part terrier."

"And what is the rest?" queried the gentleman.

"The rest," answered the boy, "why, the rest is dog."—Easton Star.

A NEW rival band was hired to play at the funeral of a Connecticut deacon. They were playing a slow and solemn dirge at the grave, when suddenly the trombone man shot out a blast that startled the hearse horses and broke up the whole procession. The leader, turning upon him fiercely, asked him what he was doing that for. He answered, with a smile: "Wall, I thought it was a note, and it wan't nothing but a boss fly, but I played it."

Cow-Pox is the same disease as small-pox, but not so virulent. It appears on the udder and teats in young cows, and a stable in which it has been once introduced will always have it. It requires no treatment, although half-ounce doses of hyposulphite of soda will ease its course. It passes off in three or four weeks; it makes the teats sore sometimes and a milking tube is required.

THE New York Sun makes a very sensible suggestion. It says while pilots have been examined as to color blindness nothing has been done to ascertain their hearing power, something very necessary in the dense fogs we have had lately when fog-horns and whistles were all that could be depended upon for guidance. In such cases the ability to rightly determine the direction of sound is of the greatest importance.

MISS MILLER, of Ferris, Texas, chloroformed her father's dogs and eloped with the young man whom her father had forbidden the premises.—The probabilities are that about a year hence she will conclude that her life would have been less miserable if she had chloroformed the young man and eloped with her father's dogs.
