In a Strasbourg hotel some Algerian tirailleurs, officers, sous officers and privates were all at breakfast, the first they had eaten in peace for a week. An intruder came in with many bows and begged permission to place himself at table, offering to pay his share. "You don't know me, but I am not quite a stranger to the great army family.—Captain Brunet, Twenty-one of the line, is known to some of you, I dare say. He is my very dearest friend, almost my brother." Nobody knew Captain Brunet, but his name was a passport among soldiers. The stranger took his cotelette, and was chatting easily with his companions, when an officer of the Twenty-first came in. "Parbleu! here is the very man to tell you all about your friend. Lieutenant, allow us to present a friend of one of yours; you knew Captain Brunette?" "What Brunet?" "Brunet of the Twenty-first." "No such man in our regiment since I joined it ten years ago." The stranger is confused. His lively tone is changed. Some Turcos asked the Lieutenant: "Are you sure there was no such man as Captain Brunet?" "Just as sure as that you are standing there." "Why then he must be —" and they began to close round the stranger. "Monsieur is in my company," said the captain of the tirailleurs, a solid man. "Go on with your breakfast, sir; shall I hand you the cheese? Take some of this conserve." Coffee and chasse—breakfast over. The big tirailleur called for the bill and paid. Taking the strangers arm, he walked outside on to the sidewalk, drew his revolver and blew out the spy's brains.

What Does Reason Say?

The little mongoose when bitten by a deadly serpent resorts to a certain plant, eats of it, and escapes the effect of the poison. That is instinct. Human beings on the other hand, must depend on reason and experience in selecting the means of protecting health and life against unwholesome influences. Now, what does reason say on this vital subject? Does it not tell us that to invigorate and purify the system is the best way to protect it against the invisible poison which generates disease? Surely it does. The next question is, what guide shall we follow in choosing a medicinal safeguard? Reason replies let your monitor be experience. Well, the experience of eighteen years comprised in one unbroken series of satisfactory testimonials assures us that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters possess strengthening, regulating and antiseptic properties which are not combined in the same happy proportions in any other preparation extant. This therefore is the antidote to which reason bids us resort when our health is imperilled either by the malaria which produces epidemic disorders, or by any other cause, whether inherent and constitutional or connected with our habits, occupations and pursuits.

The venom of a noxious reptile is scarcely more subtle and dangerous than that which lurks in foul air and impure water. To escape the fevers, bilious disorders, disturbances of the bowels, and other serious maladies produced by these insalubrious elements, it is absolutely necessary that the stomach and all the secretive organs should be, so to speak, in a robust condition. Upon the amount of resistance which the vital system can oppose to the deleterious influences that assail it, the safety of the health depends, and it is because the GREAT VEGETABLE INVIGORANT imparts energy and regularity to the most important functions of the body, that it can be recommended and guaranteed as an invaluable preventive medicine.
