The Republican Citizen.

[From the London Standard.]

General Lee.

The announcement that General R. E. Lee has been struck down by paralysis, and not expected to recover, will be received, even at this crisis, with universal interest, and will everywhere evoke a sympathy and regret which society to the deep impression made on the world at large by his character and achievements. Few are the generals who have earned, since history began, a greater military reputation; still fewer are the men of similar eminence, civil or military, whose personal qualities would bear comparison with his. The bitterest enemy of his country hardly dared to whisper a word against the character of her most distinguished general, while neutrals regard him with an admiration for his deeds and a respect for his lofty and unselfish nature which almost grew into veneration, and his own countryman learned to look up to him with as much confidence and esteem as they ever felt for Washington, and with an affection which the cold demeanor and auster temper of Washington could never inspire. The death of such a man, even at a moment so exciting as the present, when all thoughts are absorbed by a nearer and present, conflict, would be felt as a misfortune by all who still retain any recollection of the interest with which they followed the Virginian campaigns, and by thousands who have almost forgotten the names of Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville, the Wilderness and Spottsylvania.

Truer greatness, a loftier nature, a spirit more unselfish, a character purer, more chivalrous, the world has rarely, if ever known. Of stainless life and deep religious feeling, yet free from all taint of cant and fanaticism, and as dear and congenial to the Cavalier Stuart as the Puritan Stonewall Jackson; unambitious, but ready to sacrifice all at the call of duty; devoted to his cause, yet never moved by his feelings beyond the line prescribed by his judgment; never provoked by just resentment to punish wanton cruelty by reprisals which would have given a character of needless savagery to the war—both North and South owe a deep debt of gratitude to him, and the time will come when both will be equally proud of him. And well they may, for his character and his life afford a complete answer to the reproaches commonly cast on money grubbing, mechanical America. A country which has given birth to men like him, and those who followed him, may look the chivalry of Europe in the face without shame; for the fatherlands of Sidney and of Bayard never produced a nobler soldier, gentleman, and Christian than General Robert E. Lee.

While most of the questions at issue in the coming Congressional election have been fully discussed throughout the country in years past, and are subjects on which the minds of a vast majority of the community are finally made up, there is in the Southern States at least one broad issue which has entered into the canvass, which, we take it, is very soon to be one of the great questions on which political parties in this country will divide. That, is whether or not this Government is to be ruled by the Anglo-Saxon race, by Teutons and Celts or whether it is to be governed by Africans.

In South Carolina this issue has been forced upon the people. Unable, without the assistance of military force, to obtain any foothold in any State south of Pennsylvanian, except by an appeal to negro suffrage, the Radicals have used every possible effort throughout the South to cajole the blacks and to obtain their support. They have thrown open the public schools to them, they have admitted them to the jury box, they have granted them privileges and and protection which are denied to the whites, and they have left no stone unturned to excite and encourage an antagonism to the white race which would ensure to the Black Republicans the only support, in that section of the country, they could expect to obtain. Regardless of consequences, they have adopted a policy which, if not defeated, must, in the end, lead to the most serious results. This has already become apparent even to many who most strongly supported the Radical party after the close of the war. They see, in the admission of children of both races into the public schools, an experiment which can only have the effect of lowering the whites without elevating the blacks, and one which must eventually lead, if persisted in, to amalgamation. They see in the admission of negroes into the jury box, for the trial of American citizens, an innovation which can only produce antagonism instead of harmony, and they see in the protection given to blacks, at the expense of the rights of other voters, an effort to control elections and retain power by force, which must, in the end, inevitably produce a collision. This is what South Carolina sees. Amalgamation or collision. The former she abhors. The latter she seeks to avert, and in order to do it she rallies every white man under one standard, and calls upon the people to protect their rights and their liberties.

It is useless to attempt to skirk this question. It has to come. Indeed it has come, and the only way now that is before us is to meet the issue boldly. The great party which opposes military usurpation, and seeks to maintain civil liberty in this once free country, is already speaking out on this point. It guarantees protection, freedom, and all the rights to which it is entitled, to the negro race. It does not cajole it to defraud it. It does not court it to make use of it. It relies on its own manliness and its own honesty, and it knows that in the end, after the blacks have been betrayed and deceived and laughed at, by the Radicals, who have only made tools of them to accomplish their own selfish perposes, they will learn who are and who are not their true friends—a discovery which, we trust, for the interests of our fellow-countrymen, is not far distant.—Balt. Gazette.

According to the census returns for 1870, Harford county has decreased in population since 1860, there being 865 persons less than ten years ago, and, what is more remarkable, there are 137 less dwellings. In Talbot county, on the other hand, there has been an increase in population of 1,363.

Beginning with the late Geo. D. Prentice, ten newspaper men have died in Louisville during the past year.

PRINCE & CO.
Improved Patent Prize Medal
ORGANS AND MELODEONS,
Are still ahead of all others.

They have taken the first premium whenever exhibited in competition with others. Some Instruments have a very good tone when first manufactured, but keep them in constant use for five or six years and the tone will become harsh and unpleasant. This however, is not the case with Prince's Instruments of their make—ten years old—can now be shown with as good a tone as they had when first bought.

They also contain the following improvements: Automatic Swell, Divided Swell, Graduated Swell, Basso Tenuto, Manual Sub Bass. Read what Frank Leslie says in his Illustrated Newspaper of August 31st, 1867:

"G. A. PRINCE & Co's Automatic Organs and Melodeons are among the proudest triumphs of this musical age. It is estimated that there are over forty thousand of these excellent instruments now in use. It is also a remarkable fact that not one of this enormous number has ever been returned, a sure proof of their surpassing excellence. For the past six years the enormous sales has made it impossible to supply the demand promptly, and every year increases the number of orders. Their manufactory is in Buffalo, New York."

ACHILLES BALLARD'S
CHAMPION SHOE,

Pattened May 29th, 1866, designed especially for Farmers, Mechanics and Laborers' use.

No more Lacing or Breaking of Laces.

Here we have reached the great desideratum—a Shoe doing away entirely with lacing, m de so as to be absolutely secure against ripping, and with seams at such points as can never hurt the feet; formed precisely on the same principle as the ordinary boot, and needing only to be closed at the top by a simple Buckle and Strap, thereby saving time, trouble and vexation. Go and see them. For sale only by
