A Story About Gen. Grant.

When Gen. Grant was returning from Long Branch, a cavalry captain, a major, and judge advocate in the late war were on the same boat. They had both served and won some distinction in the Army of the Potomac. Seeing the General smoking, as usual, in a chair on deck, the Major said to his companion:

"Do you know who that is?"

"Yes," replied the Captain, "of course; that's Grant, that's the President."

"Yes," said the Major, "I'll go and pay my respects to him."

"You had better not," said the Captain.

"Oh, yes," said the Major, "he's an excellent man, and a great general; besides, I want nothing from him, so I'll go."

He went, and getting near the General's chair said: "I believe I have the honor of addressing the President of the United States?"

The great man looked lazily up from his chair, and simply said: "Yes, you have."

The Major felt astounded; he expected the next sentence would be that of Lord Doherty in "The Heir at Law"—"as sure As eggs is eggs;" but the General is a man of few words, and he said no more. The Major, however, returned to the attack.

"General," said he, "I served under you at the Potomac, and I came to pay you my respects; I want nothing from you, sir, in any way, and therefore am disinterested."

The President looked up, drew the cigar from his mouth, gave a whiff into the Major's face, and without rising or even extending his hand simply said:

"All right!"

The Major bowed and rejoined his friend, saying; "I have changed my opinion since I went over there."

"How?" asked the Captain.

"Well," said the Major, "when I went there I believed that Gen. Grant was an excellent man and a great general, but now I think he's a fool."—N. Y. Sun.

What a Drink Costs.

The New York World has been figuring up the cost of an occasional drink and says:

"Once in a while a pensive man may be heard to say, I wish I had all the money back that I have spent for drinks for the past ten years." No one man in twenty, who, retrospectively gazing, gives utterance to that wish, has in his mind any approximating estimate of the amount of which a person of even moderate bibulous propensities may spend upon drinks in the space of ten years. Leaving wines and expensive liquors out of the question, let us see what a plain cocktailest, or modest imbiber of old rye, is likely to disburse on his favorite refreshments in the course of a year.

"Take a very modereate man for a sample. Assume that he drinks every day one glass of ale at ten cents, and four glasses of whiskey at fifteen cents. That amounts to seventy cents a day, which makes four dollars and ninety cents a week. Multiply by four and you have $10,60 a month, which comes to $235.20 a year. Thus, if the man who had gone on at this rate for ten years had his money back, his pocket would be inflated to the tune of two thousand three hundred and fifty-two dollars. This is only a small-beer calculation; but think of those who spend five times this sum on liquors, and remember that their name is legion."

PROPOSALS FOR WOOD.

The undersigned Committee on behalf of the "Association for the relief of the Poor," will receive proposals until the first day of November next, for furnishing 100 cords of Dry Oak Wood, to be delivered at the yard of Mr. Henry Shook, West Second street, Frederick. The wood to be subject to measurement. The right is reserved to accept or reject any proposal.
