Strong Character.

Strength of character consists of two things—power of will and power of self-restraint. It requires two things, therefore, for its existence—strong feelings and strong command over them. Now, it is here we make a great mistake; we mistake strong feelings for strong character. A man who bears all before him, before whose frown domestics tremble, and whose bursts of fury make the children of the household quake—because he has his will obeyed, and his own way in all things—we call him a strong man. The truth is, that is the weak man, it is his passions that are strong; he mastered by them, is weak. You must measure the strength of a man by the power of the feelings he subdues, not by the power of those which subdue him. And hence composure is very often the highest result of strength. Did we never see a man receive a flagrant insult, and only grow a little pale and then reply quietly? That is a man spiritually strong. Or did we ever see a man in anguish stand, as if carved out of solid rock, mastering himself? Or one bearing a hopeless daily trial remain silent, and never tell the world what cankered his home peace? That is strength. He who, with strong passions, remains chaste; he who, keenly sensitive, with manly powers of indignation in him, can be provoked and yet restrain him, and forgive—these are the strong men, the spiritual heroes.

SPEND WISELY.—Look most at your spending. No matter what comes in, if more goes out you will be poor. The art is not in making money, but in keeping it; little expenses, like mice in a barn, when they are many, make great waste. Hair by hair, the heads get bald; straw by straw, the thatch goes on the old cottage, and drop by drop, the rain comes into the chamber. A barrel is soon empty, if the tap leaks but a drop a minute. When you mean to save begin with your mouth; there are many thieves down the red lane. In other things keep within compass. Never stretch your legs further than the blanket will reach, or you will soon be cold. In clothes, choose suitable and lasting stuff, and not tawdry fineries. To be warm is the main thing, never mind the looks. A fool may make money, but it needs a wise man to spend it. Remember it is easier to build two chimnies than to keep one going. If you give all to back and board, there is nothing left for the savings bank.—Pare hard and work hard while you are young and you have a chance of rest when you are old.

INFLUENCE OF COLD ON MILCH COWS.—Cows that are in milk, or have been milked late, are peculiarly sensitive to cold; and they are frequently injured by being exposed to storms. By getting wet and becoming chilled, pulmonary complaints and other diseases are induced and thus the farmer has a sick animal on his hands, which is a source of trouble, anxiety, and not unfrequently a total loss. Many of the troubles that come upon cows at the period of calving may be traced directly to exposure during the winter, and therefore, on this account alone, will it pay the farmer to shelter his stock on the approach of storms, either of wind, or snow, or rain. During those days in winter that are sunny and warm there may be no objection to allowing stock to run at large in the yard the greater portion of the day, in extreme cold weather, three-quarters of an hour in the morning and the same length of time in the afternoon to slake their thirst at the trough, will give them all the exercise needed. The remaining portion of the time they will be better in a warm, well ventilated stable, where they can quietly ruminate without fear of being hooked and driven away by master cows.—Exchange.

TO YOUNG MEN.—Don't rely upon friends. Don't rely upon the name of your ancestors. Thousands have spent the prime of life in the vain hope of those whom they call friends; and thousands have starved because they had a rich father. Rely upon the good name which is made by your own exertions; and know what is better than the best friend you can have is unquestionable determination, united with decision of character.

Among the many methods for the preservation of eggs, one highly recommended consists in rubbing them over with linseed oil. Immersion in salt water or lime gives to the eggs a disagreeable taste, the water penetrating the shell after a time, spoiling them; while, if kept in ashes, sawdust or bran, they dry up. It is said that eggs keep three or four months after being coated with linseed oil, retain their original weight very nearly, and are of excellent flavor.

THE MOON DEAD.—The German astronomers and physicians have, after prolonged observation, arrived at the conclusion that the moon is a dead planet; that is, it has "cooled off," and now is without heat, water or atmosphere, and consequently without life of any kind. The earth is undergoing the same process, according to these learned philosophers, and will eventually be without life or light. But we who now live may take no fears to heart on that account, as the earth can cool off, say the geologists, only at the rate of, fifteen degrees in 9,000,000 years.

THICKNESS OF THE EARTH'S CRUST.—To enable the earth to resist the tide-generating force of the sun and moon, so as to leave the phenomena as they are actually found, Professor Thompson considers that its crust must have a thickness not less than two thousand or two thousand five hundred miles. Such a conclusion is of course quite inconsistent with the hypothesis that it is a mass of molten matter inclosed by a thin solid shell.

A CURE FOR LOW SPIRITS.—Exercise for the body, occupation for the mind; these are the grand constituents of health and happiness, the cardinal points upon which everything turns. Motion seems to be a great preserving principle of nature, to which even inanimate things are subject; for the winds, waves, the earth itself, are restless; and the waving of trees, shrubs, and flowers is known to be an esential part of their economy.

PRINCE & CO.

Improved Patent Prize Medal
ORGANS AND MELODEONS,

Are still ahead of all others.

They have taken the first premium wherever exhibited in competition with others. Some Instruments have a very good tone when first manufactured, but keep them in constant use for five or six years and the tone will become harsh and unpleasant. This however, is not the case with Prince's Instruments of their make—ten years old—can now be shown with as good a tone as they had when first bought.

They also contain the following improvements: Automatic Swell, Divided Swell, Graduated Swell, Basso Tenuto, Manual Sub Bass. Read what Frank Leslie says in his Illustrated Newspaper of August 31st, 1867:

"G. A. PRINCE & CO's Automatic Organs and Melodeons are among the proudest triumphs of this musical age. It is estimated that there are over forty thousand of these excellent instruments now in use. It is also a remarkable fact that not one of this enormous number has ever been returned, a sure proof of their surpassing excellence. For the past six years the enormous sales has made it impossible to supply the demand promptly, and every year increases the number of orders. Their manufactory is in Buffalo, New York."
