ENGINE LUBRICATION THAT 'Knows Its Bearings'!

Lubricating oil doesn't get "lost" or "detoured" from its duty in the "Caterpillar" engine!

The double-pump, gear-driven pressure lubrication system leaves nothing to guess-work—nothing to chance. One pump forces oil under pressure through the drilled camshaft and crankshaft—assuring complete and constant lubrication of these assemblies. Oil thrown out around bearing edges sprays the cylinder walls, piston pins and valve-lifter guides. Even the valve-rocker shafts and push-rod cups are fed oil under pressure!

The other pump constantly returns surplus oil from the front of the engine to the main pump. Thus, the system functions dependably whether the tractor is pulling its big loads uphill, downhill or around steep sidehills!

This full pressure lubrication system is vital for long engine life under the continuous heavy loads a track-type tractor must expect to pull.
