A HORSE-THIEF'S REVELATIONS.

An Oath-Bound Gang Operating on the Borders of Maryland.

A dispatch to the Baltimore Sun from Frederick, Md., says: The arrest of a man giving his name as John Wilson on the charge of horse-stealing, furnishes the clue to a band of oath-bound horse-thieves, if there is any truth in the prisoner's statements. Wilson was arrested, after an exciting chase, in Frederick county, Friday, by John Franklin, a blacksmith of the vicinity. He was charged with having in his possession a stolen horse. The horse was identified by its owner and Wilson was brought to Frederick city and lodged in jail until Saturday evening, when he was taken by the sheriff of Washington county to Hagerstown.

Wilson is about 40 years of age, of swarthy complexion, has dark hair, and wears a full black beard. In height he is probably five feet six. When first apprehended he said he had purchased the horse for $100 from a person living on the National turnpike. Afterwards he stated that the animal had been transferred to him by one of a gang or band of horse-thieves, who infest Washington county and the border counties of Pennsylvania, and of which he was a member, and his instructions were to take him to Ellicott City, where another of the party would be on hand to receive and sell him. In reply to a question regarding the gang, he said it comprised a membership of about thirty, with places of meeting or headquarters in certain localities in Washington county, Md., and various parts of Pennsylvania. Some of the members, he said, are sons of respected farmers, and no suspicion of the work in which they are engaged has as yet attached itself to them. The band, he says, is bound by oaths not to divulge secrets or betray a confederate, and a violation of their obligation is severely punished when the opportunity offers. Its present field of operation is from Luzerne county, Pa., down through Maryland and Virginia. Horses stolen in these States are taken when necessary to Southwestern Virginia, Tennessee, exchanged with a gang operating in a similar way in those sections. In other words, an exchange system is carried on largely, the object being to elude pursuit or detection by getting the stolen property as far from the vicinity of its ownership as possible. Before joining the gang Wilson said he had been in the employ of Mr. Israel Rieff, a distiller and farmer, of Washington county. He claimed to be a native of Port Deposit, Md. He stated to some of the officials that if a guarantee was given him that he would not be prosecuted for the offense for which he was now imprisoned he would reveal the names and rendezvous of the gang with which he claims to be connected and give information that would lead to the recovery of a number of horses. An opportunity to do this will probably be given him by the Washington county authorities.

A GREAT HORSE SHOW PROMISED.

Members of National Horse Show Association of America are elated over the prospects of their first annual exhibition, which is to be held in the Madison Square Garden, N. Y., October 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26. The entries in the regular classes closed with about 400 names on the books. The list of entries embraces many famous and valuable horses. Goldsmith Maid, General Knox and Smuggler have been entered. Gen. Beale and U.S. Grant Jr., have entered the two full-blooded Arabian horses, Leopard and Linden Tree. Of coaching stallions and double teams there are full entries. Saddle horses, ponies and hunters will be very numerous, a large number of entries having been made by ladies. An interesting exhibit of mules and donkeys is expected. The managers of the exhibition say that something in the way of entertainment will be arranged for every hour of each day of the show. The large ring in the centre of the Garden will be put in condition to show all classes of entries to the best advantage, and there will be frequent exhibitions of trotting, high-jumping, and riding by professional riders.

A QUAKER WEDDING IN PHILADELPHIA.—Henry P. Brown, first assistant United States district attorney of Philadelphia, and Annie Gertrude Taylor were married at six o'clock Wednesday evening at the residence of the bride's father, Charles M. Taylor, president of the Philadelphia Grain Elevator Company, at 2022 Race street.—The family of the bride are among the oldest members of the Society of Friends in Philadelphia, and the marriage was consequently celebrated according to the Friends' ceremony. The bride was dressed in white silk, but did not wear a veil or orange blossoms. The groom was in evening dress. The marriage procession started from a second floor sitting room and wended its way silently down into the parlor. The five ushers went first, then the bride and groom, then the families of the contracting parties, and last the guests and a committee from the Race street meeting, who were present to see that everything was done in proper form. The bride and groom took chairs, which had been specially placed for them at the head of the parlor. After they had been seated all the company sat down, and for a few minutes there was silence. Then the bride and groom arose, and the groom, taking the bride's hand, declared that in the presence of the Lord and this assembly he took the lady to be his wife, and promised with the divine assistance to be unto her a loving and faithful husband until death should part them. The bride responded in kind, and everybody silently sat down again. A religious silence of three or four minutes was broken by the voice of Dellwyn Parrish, the head of the Friends' committee, reading the marriage certificate. After more silence the groom and bride signed their names to the paper. Then all the rest of the company signed their names.—There was a little more silence, and then the new made husband and wife received the good wishes of their friends.

HOW A CELESTIAL WAS MADE A CITIZEN.—Among the crowd of applicants for citizenship in Judge Arnold's court in Philadelphia Thursday was Chung Kee, a Chinese laundryman, in pigtail and tunic. He was fearful that some disciple of Dennis Kearney would crop up to forbid the bestowal of the honor upon him, and stood on the outer edge of the crowd timidly turning his broad felt hat round and round. At Judge Arnold's suggestion, Chung, with his head down, shuffled up to the bar. Not a word of objection was raised, and Chung Kee gained greater confidence as the proceedings went on. He said that he had come here in 1868. He was about 14 years old then, and repeatedly expressed his determination to become a citizen of the United States. From a journeyman washer he had become, he said, the proprietor of two laundries and a Chinese tea and dried-fish store. He did not own any property, but said that he intended to buy some after he had obtained the right to vote. He took the oath of allegiance upon the Bible. He reads and writes English well, and signed his name in a strong, clear hand. The papers were signed by the court, and the new citizen, with all evidences of timidity gone, followed his countrymen out, looking as happy as a bridegroom.

LARGER FACILITIES FOR BALTIMORE'S FOREIGN COMMERCE.—At the meeting of the board of directors of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Co. last week the president, Mr. John W. Garrett, who has just returned from an extended visit to Europe, made several announcements of the greatest interest to citizens interested in the expansion of Baltimore's foreign commerce. While abroad Mr. Garrett was able to make such representations regarding the depth of water in our harbor and the amount of freight which Baltimore offers that Liverpool capitalists have resolved to establish a permanent weekly line of steamers between Baltimore and Barrow and Liverpool. Mr. Garrett is of opinion that there is a favorable prospect also for the establishment of a line of steamers between the Mediterranean and Baltimore, which will bring direct to this port the fruits and other productions of Southern Europe, of Northern Africa and of the islands of the Mediterranean.—Sun.

THE LANCASTER TOBACCO MARKET.—The Lancaster (Pa.) Intelligencer says of the tobacco market of that county: "Reports from the county show that almost all the tobacco grown in 1883 is safely housed, though it was reported to the agricultural society on Monday that a few lots slightly frost-bitten remain as yet uncut. It is perhaps too early to tell how the crop will cure. Growers say that it is doing exceedingly well, but a few buyers who have been prospecting declare they see a good deal of white vein. We will know more about it by the holidays."
