Children Must Be Vaccinated To Enter School

Maryland Law Requires It. State Free From Smallpox Since 1935

"Don't forget your youngster will have to be vaccinated against smallpox before he or she can be enrolled in any public school in Maryland. Have it attended to without any further delay, if it has not already been done", is the advice of Dr. R. H. Riley, Director of the State Department of Health to parents of children who have reached school age this year.

"Our Maryland law" Dr. Riley continued "requires every child to be vaccinated against smallpox before he or she can be enrolled in any public school in the State. Physicians are expected to vaccinate all babies under their care before the children are a year old. Until the children are of school age, the responsibility for having it done rests with the parents. After that it is shared by the teachers and other school authorities. Any teacher, school trustee or commissioner of a public school who admits a child who has not been successfully vaccinated against smallpox is liable to a fine of $10.00.

"Smallpox is very contagious. Anybody who has not been protected against it is likely to contract the disease if exposed to it. It is much more prevalent than any one is likely to realize who does not keep in touch with health nad sickness conditons in other parts of the country. The only way to avoid having the disease is through vaccination.

"We have had only two cases of smallpox in Maryland in the last eight years, one in 1931 and the other in 1935. Our slate is clean and unblemished for 1930, 1932, 1933, 1934, 1936, 1937 and up to the present for 1938.

"Our Maryland vaccination laws were enacted in 1864 and our freedom from the disease is due to careful observance of the requirements. We rarely have to 'enforce' the smallpox laws because parents, as a rule, or other for whom vaccination may be required, cooperate very willingly with the health authorities in having it done. But parents sometimes put off having it done. Consequently a great many children have 'not vaccinated against smallpox' checked up against them on the health conference records.

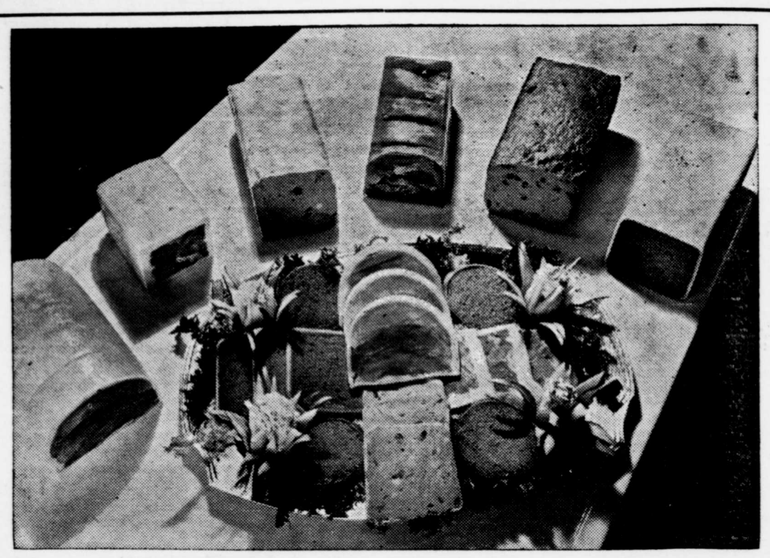
COLD CUTS



Entertaining in summer can be an arduous task or a real pleasure, depending on the way it is done and the amout of effort required. In discussing this problem, Inez S. Willson, home economist, suggests that one of the easiest main dishes to prepare is the cold meat platter; in fact, it requires so little preparation that entertaining is not bother at all when this is the choice. And a cold meat platter always is enjoyed!

There are many kinds of cold meats available, ready for slicing and serving. Veal loaf, corned beef, jellied tongue, liver sausage, minced ham, and spiced ham are among the favorites for the cold meat platter. These may be arranged in symmetrical design, with meats of different colors, some light and some dark, lending the contrast. The platter can be garnished, if desired, with cucumber flowers, filled with tinted cream cheese.

Choosing Cold Meats

In choosing an assortment of ready-to-serve meats for a cold meat platter, it is well to choose some light and some dark meats, some round and some square ones, some which are highly seasoned and others which have only shape and flavor adds interest. Also, it is wise to have cold meats sliced a little thicker than usual, so that they hold together well, and can be rolled if desired. For decoration, some may be rolled cornucopia style and the centers filled with cream cheese, sweet pickles, olives or carrot slivers.

Served with the cold meat platter, you will want to have the makings for sandwiches, including an assortment of breads and salad dressing or relish. One hot dish, such as a creamed or escalloped vegetable, is a good suggestion, with perhaps a cool, crisp salad, and ice cream or other frozen dessert as a fitting climax to the warm weather meal.
