A new and practical Work.

A PROPOSAL,

BY WILLIAM Y. BIRCH, & ABRAHAM SMALL,
Of the city of Philadelphia,

For publishing in volumes, by subscription, that useful and popular work, the

DOMESTIC ENCYCLOPÆDIA;

OR, A

DICTIONARY OF FACTS,

AND

USEFUL KNOWLEDGE:

Comprehending a concise view of the latest discoveries, inventions, and improvements, chiefly applicable to rural and domestic economy. Together with descriptions of the most interesting objects of nature and art; the history of men and animals, in a state of health or disease; and practical hints respecting the arts and manufactures, both familiar and commercial.

Illustrated with numerous engravings and cuts.

BY A. F. M. WILLICH, M. D.

Author of the Lectures on Diet and Regimen, &c.

First American edition,

With additions, applicable to the present situation of the United States,

BY JAMES MEASE, M. D.

Fellow of the American Philosophical Society, and corresponding member of the Literary and Philosophical Society of Manchester.

To the Public.

AS the practical tendency of the work here announced, must be evident from the contents of the preceeding title its peculiar nature scarcely requires further explanation.

When we consider the natural condition of man, the object of all his pursuits becomes at once manifest and defined. To live with satisfaction to himself and others; to procure as many comforts of life as are consistent with his mental and bodily constitution; and to avert impending danger, or, in other words, to preserve himself from the injurious attacks of external agents, are nearly the whole of what relates to the practical part of human life. The present work being exclusively devoted to the departments of health and general economy, no subject could with propriety be introduced, which had a reference to ethics or morals, to metaphysics, or the abstract and professional sciences.

In order to unite conciseness with general utility, the theoretical or speculative part of every invention, discovery, or improvement, forms but a small portion of the Domestic Encyclopædia; because the rationale, or elementary principles, are only inserted in those instances where the subject cannot be sufficiently understood without them—And as the alphabetical form possesses many advantages over the systematic division and subdivision of articles, it has in the present case, been preferred, as more eligible for a popular work.

It will be easily conceived, that the subjects treated of in this collection must be numerous and important; inasmuch as the economical sciences are intimately connected with natural and experimental philosophy, including the knowledge of useful animals, plants, and minerals; chemistry, agriculture, gardening, hunting, the cultivation of trees, rearing of cattle, fishing, &c. To enable, however, the reader to judge of the method by which subjects apparently intricate and abstruse, are reduced to the level of ordinary capacities, the following heads will furnish an outline of the economical dictionary:

1. A concise historical account of the subject under consideration, or the manner in which it is most advantageously produced, either by nature or art—for instance, fuel, candles, hats, shoes, wine, yarn, &c.

2. The most judicious and economical mode of applying every substance to useful purposes.

3. All the newly discovered methods of defending the objects of domestic and rural economy, from the effects of air, heat, and cold, the changes of climate, seasons, and other contingent causes; likewise, the most effectual way of preserving particular substances, such as seeds, roots, plants, &c. from the depredations of insects, reptiles, and other animals.

4. An explanation of the general effects which every article of food and drink, as well as all external and contingent causes, produce on the health of the human body; together with the most approved rules and directions for its preservation.

5. As the list of human afflictions contains many and obstinate diseases, such as cancers, consumption, epilepsy, gout, palsy, white swellings, &c. which have hitherto been for the most part considered as incurable, a concise and faithful account of the latest and most plausible remedies, or methods of treatment, is given.

FROM this account of the Domestic Encyclopædia, it must be obvious to all, that the nature of the work is peculiarly adapted to the present wants of the United States. Perhaps it contains a greater number of useful facts than have ever appeared in the compass of four moderate volumes. No pains, trouble, or expence appear to have been spared to render this economical dictionary as complete as the present advancement of agriculture, gardening, of the familiar arts and manufactures, as well as the imperfect state of medical science, would respectively admit. It includes almost every object more or less connected with rural, domestic, and animal economy. Hence the reader will find numerous experiments related, many hundreds of which have not hitherto been published in the English language.

With regard to the additions, the editor will observe, that no exertions shall be wanting on his part, to render them as useful as possible, to the people of this country—As no other diseases but those enumerated in article five, are introduced in the original work, and as it is peculiarly adapted to the situation of persons in the country, remote from medical aid, it has been deemed necessary in the present edition to detail the most approved methods of guarding against the attack of diseases, commonly prevalent in the United States, of curing them when actually present, and of treating the various accidents to which agricultural people are liable. There shall also be given, as full an account of all the poisonous plants growing in the United States, as can be obtained.

Care shall be taken to detail all the discoveries which have been made in the United States—These will be found to be more numerous than is generally imagined—Many machines for diminishing labor, and which are peculiar to this country, shall be described and illustrated by plates.

The VETERINARY SCIENCE comprehending the application of the principles of medicine, to the preservation of the health of domestic animals, and the cure of their diseases, shall also claim a due degree of attention—That destructive and native disease, the yellow water of horses, shall be described, and a successful method of cure pointed out.

Lastly, the object of the work being to supply families with a compact guide, in all economical affairs, every useful fact in rural and domestic economy, omitted by Dr. Willich, and which may be known to the editor, shall be inserted; and in order to take advantage of progressing improvements, arrangements have been made to have all the periodical works on the above subjects, forwarded as soon as published in England or France.

The editor will thankfully receive any communications which may tend to improve the work, and he begs leave respectfully to solicit them.

The publishers have but little to add for themselves; knowing, that professions generally are, and, perhaps, ought to be, in a great measure, unavailing, they refer the public to the books they have already published. They have given to the world two editions of Dr. Russell's Modern Europe, within the last three years; the manner, therefore, in which they execute their undertakings, can be ascertained. In the present work, if they do not advance much, they pledge themselves not to degenerate. It shall be printed in the first style of uniformity and taste. The paper shall be superfine; and the engravings at least equal to those in the London copy.

CONDITIONS.

I. It shall be printed in five large handsome octavo volumes. One volume shall be delivered every three months. Price to subscribers, two dollars and fifty cents per volume, in boards, payable on delivery.

II. The first volume shall appear on the first of April, 1803, and a volume regularly every three months afterwards.

III. It may be had in one delivery when finished, at twelve dollars and fifty cents per set, or fifteen dollars well bound, payable on the delivery of the books. It will, however, be only obtained at these prices, by those who give the publishers their names during the process of the work, to take it when finished.

IV. At any considerable distance from Philadelphia, it can only be delivered in the last mentioned manner—the forwarding of single volumes to many places being impracticable.

N. B. The public will please to notice, that the amount in price of this improved and extended work, is not higher than the London work in four volumes.

 Among the numerous original articles which will appear in the first volume of this work, and the substance of which is not contained in any other Encyclopædia, we shall enmerate only the following: Abdomen, abortion, abscesses, abstinence, adulterations, agriculture (in general), agues, air, ale and beer, animation (suspended), anodynes, antidotes, apoplexy, apples and apple-trees, apricots, asparagus, baking, barley, barometers, bedsteads, beef, bees and bee-hives, beet-root, blacking (Frankford), bleaching, bleedings, books (popular), bread, breath (offensive), brewing, bricks (indestructible), buildings, burials, burns, butter, &c. &c.

☞ Subscriptions will be taken in at any of the bookstores in Baltimore.

THOs. & JOEL MORGAN

TAKE this method to inform their friends in particular and the public in general, that they still continue the manufactory of Stone Ware, at their old stand corner of Pitt and Green-streets, Old-Town, where they have on hand, a large quantity at present of the best kind, and well assorted; and as they have lately enlarged their works, so as to make double the quantity they have usually done, they expect to be able to supply any demand they may be favored with, at the shortest notice. They likewise return their thanks for former favors, and hope a continuance thereof, as they shall make it their constant study to merit it. July 2 1aw

PECK's HOTEL.

THE want of a proper house for the transaction of commercial business, at Fell's Point, being long evident and much called for; the subscriber, impressed with the idea that a more acceptable establishment could not be made for that part of the community, whose intercourse is so continual between the western part of the city and the shipping, has purchased the property heretofore owned by Mr. Archibald Stewart, at the corner of Bond and Fell's-street, Fell's Point, which he has now so nearly fitted up in a stile of gentility, as to be fit for the reception of those who may please to honor him with their company.

Having been for several years the keeper of the Columbian Inn, he feels too sensibly the favors of his old friends not to return them his best thanks, for their liberal patronage, and not to hope that in future he may still continue to receive their support. The encouragement of the public generally, and especially of merchants and captains of vessels, is also respectfully solicited in his new establishment, which, besides the customary accommodations of a public house will, as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made, be furnished with a Marine Register, and the best commercial papers of the union, as well as every other desideratum which can render more convenient an intercourse between the merchant and his captain.

☞ Stables and sheds are preparing for horses and carriages.
