C. Lucas, also an associate judge of the same courts, from addressing, as of right he might do, a grand jury, then and there assembled & sworn or affirmed respectively, thereby abusing and attempting to degrade the office of associate judge as aforesaid, to the denial and prevention of public right, and of the due administration of justice, and to the evil example of all others in like cases offending: Therefore,

Captain Welch, from New-Orleans, arrived at New-York, informs, that on the 25th December, a French commissioner arrived there from Havanna, to claim the prizes taken by French privateers, and which were in the governor's possession. The port of New-Orleans continued shut; but the governor had given permission to the lighters to come down the river, and discharge their cargoes on board American vessels only—but for some time back the lowness of the tides had prevented the lighters from getting to New-Orleans. French troops were expected there daily.

Extract of a letter from the captain of an American vessel at New Orleans to his owners in New-York, dated December 18th, 1802.

"On my arrival here, I found the port shut against American vessels, without allowing them even a place of deposit. We are permitted the free navigation of the river, and are not required to report at the town, but discharge in the stream. I have discharged part of the cargo, and shall have another boat along side to-day to take in for the Natchez. The George Clinton, has just unloaded. I am told by the best informed merchants here that vessels are not lyable whilst lying in the stream, but such goods only as are seized whilst landing. I hope to be able to obtain a return freight as soon as my cargo is out."

[Much has been said of Mr. Jefferson's agency in and controul over the libellous paper published by little Philip Freneau, whilst the former was secretary of state and the latter his clerk. Freneau, some time since, publicly contradicted, by a long affidavit, all that his opponents had advanced on that head. The matter, however, is not likely to rest here. A respectable writer in the Virginia Gazette, in speaking of the tyrannical proceedings of George Hay, esq. and his party, and of the vile calumny of the democratic prints, lets out the following secret, which must startle not only Freneau and Jefferson, but the most humble and zealous minions of the President:]

"Who, let me ask them, were the first to indulge in this free and licentious use of the press, now so much complained of by them? Have they forgotten the introduction of Freneau into the office of state—the battery of scurrility by him erected, under the immediate inspection, pay and patronage of the officer then at the head of that department? If any are disposed to doubt these facts, let them recollect, before their passions hurry them into any more rash denials, that the person alluded to is possessed of an uncommon fatality in furnishing the most ample proofs from under his own hand, of his own guilt, and of the folly and falsehood of the defences set up for him by his friends. To prevent the fresh mortification and future disgrace of all such in that way, I will now warn them, that I am in possession of the most conclusive PROOFS, not of a private or confidential, but of a public nature, of the descent of that HIGH PATRONAGE, into the low and servile office of an agency in obtaining subscribers and collecting the subscription money for that very paper; while the same person was employed in writing the most friendly and solemn assurances to general Washington, that he had no hand in its encouragement."

Improved method to fine wine.

TAKE half a pint new milk directly from the cow, mix it with half gallon of water, then put the whole into quarter cask wine, take a long stick or cane and run into the bung hole, and stur it well for 8 or 10 minutes; when done, put away the cask to stand steady, in six or eight days it will be perfectly clear for use. If the wine should be high colour'd as sherry generally is, I would recommend double the qdantity of milk, and also of water. The mixing water with milk instead of wine as usual, it incorporates better and of course makes a nice fine.

ROBERT LLOYD NICOLS.

Easton, Jan. 12, 1803.

Died yesterday, the 2d instant, Mr. F. Deluce, long a resident of this city, after a severe and painful illness. Mr. Deluce possessed all those virtues which could dignify human nature. He was strongly attached to the interest of his country—a warm and sincere friend—his enemies, (though few) he pitied. He departed this life with the happy reflection of enjoying a blest immortality, where the wicked cease from troubling and where the weary are at rest.

WHEREAS Clement Waltham did, on the 3d of November last, execute unto us a conveyance in trust of all his property, for the use of such of his creditors as should sign his release, agreeably to the same—And whereas, three-fourths of his creditors in amount, have duly signed and sealed said release, and appointed Mr. William Lee and Mr. James Strong, trustees for managing the said concern for their use—This is therefore to give notice, that we have this day, agreeably to the powers vested in us by said conveyance, assigned unto the said William Lee and James Strong, all the said property; and that they are the only persons authorised to receive any property or debts belonging to, or due the said Clement Waltham; and that the said release is lodged at the house of Lee, Brook and Dillon, Baltimore, for such others of his creditors as chuse to sign and seal the same, until the third day of January next; after which all such as do not execute the release, will be utterly excluded from all the benefit of said assignment.
