CHESTERTOWN - JAN. 12, 1889.

Farmers' Houses Unhealthy, and Why.

From the Baltimore Sun.

In a lecture before the New York Academy of Anthropology, recently, Dr. Lucy Hall, of Brooklyn, attributed the bad health of the country people to the unsanitary condition of their houses.

The vine-clad, shade-embowered country houses, sung of by the poet and sketched by artists, are really, says Mrs. Hall, the most unhigienic in existence, being far less healthy than the average city houses.

The typical country house she describes as surrounded with dense shade trees, producing gloom and mold.

The best parlor is always shut up closely to prevent the carpet from being faded by the sunshine and the furniture from being [illegible]ct by the flies.

[illegible] for the bedrooms they are often on [illegible]nd floor over a damp cellar, and [illegible]ntilated.

[illegible]n occupied by the father, mother [illegible]hildren as a sleeping apartment [illegible] more than one window, and [illegible]d with curtains, shades, &c., [illegible]od office is to obstruct some[illegible]s of odors and disease germs [illegible]f kitchen garbage near by.

[illegible]ed by the lecturer with re[illegible] houses in New England, the [illegible]e Western States show that [illegible]s of health are more dis[illegible] the farmers of New England [illegible]se of the other sections.

[illegible]eping apartments of all the New [illegible] houses, for example, were on the [illegible]d floor, while in the Western States [illegible] percentage was but 84 per cent.

The percentage of "shut-up" parlors was for New New England 85 per cent., for the Middle States 68 per cent. and for the Western States 60 per cent. In damp or wet cellars the Middle States led with 93 per cent., the Western States followed with 80 per cent. and New England closed the line with 60 per cent. Shade about the house was excessive in the West and New England and at the minimum in the Middle States.

Of the New England farmers' houses 18 per cent. had wells in them, and the average distance of the well from the barn in that section was but 46 feet. The Middle and Western States had much better arrangements in this respect.

They used better judgment as respects the location of water-closets. The distance of the water-closet from the well averaged 29 feet in New England, 33 feet in the Middle States and 66 feet in the West.

One-half of the New England farmers' houses have barns joined to them, and the same proportion have water-closets joined to them. Slops were thrown from the back door of 77 per cent. of the New England houses, from 40 per cent. of the houses of the Middle States and from 26 per cent. of the houses of the Western States. The families occupying these houses complain frequently of sickness.

Some member is always ailing, but the idea seldom occurs to anybody that the doctor's bill could be saved by some attention to the construction and surroundings of the house.

Of the diseases found to exist in these dwellings rheumatism was, upon the whole, the most prevalent.

Next after rheumatism, came diseases of the lungs, then diphtheria, typhoid fever and bowel troubles.

Lung troubles, typhoid fever and diphtheria are specially abundant in New England, as was to be expected from the facts recited above.

It is in the Middle and Westers States that rheumatism most abounds. But, besides diseases, there are frequent cases of kidney trouble, nervous debility, melancholia, throat affections, &c.

The remedy is to build country houses with large and sunny rooms, with shade trees at a due distance; to have the well safe from the drainage of water-closets and stables; to put all outbuildings at proper intervals; to use only the rooms on the second floor as bedrooms; to cement the cellar and extend it under the entire house, and to use temporary awnings instead of permanent projecting porches.

The average woman has a mania to keep out the sunlight. She is to be withstood, and windows are to be used for the purpose for which they were originally constructed.

Above all, if it is desired to improve existing country dwellings, it is necessary to demolish contagious barns, pig-sties, henneries, and other like offensive outbuildings.

[illegible] advance such improvements, accord[illegible] Dr. Hall, is the duty, if not the in[illegible] of the country doctor, who, when [illegible] educated, cannot but be aware of [illegible]nitary condition of his patients'

[illegible] suggested by a sagacious anthro[illegible]t the conclusion of the lecture, [illegible] duty of educating the country [illegible] sanitation rests on the pulpit and [illegible] as much as on the doctors.

[illegible], no doubt, the fact.

[illegible] one who understands the ruinous [illegible] of living, or trying to live, with un[illegible]ry surroundings should join in the [illegible] of reform.

This is Also True of Other Counties.

Seldom has farming land in Washington county been in so little demand. It is a matter of much surprise to us that there are no purchasers for farms, which we regard, at the prices for which they can be bought now, as the very best possible safe investment. There is scarcely a possibility that land will ever be cheaper than it is now and every probability that it will be higher. A good farm can be rented out so as to bring the landlord from six to ten per cent. interest on its cost and then be made more valuable each year. A gentleman who owns a farm of 150 acres in the eastern part of the county, which he values at about $80 per acre, or $12,000, showed us the other day his farm accounts. He rents the farm out for the half and has a good tenant who, so far from injuring the land, he thinks, is rather improving it each year. His expenses for the past year were: Phosphate $85, taxes $90, seed wheat $60, clover seed, fencing, repairing, &c., $100. Total, $335. His receipts were, from wheat $800, corn $480, rye, oats, potatoes, apples, &c., $125. Total, $1,404. In this calculation the corn crop is partly estimated, but the estimate which is based on what has already been cribbed, he assures us, is rather under than over the mark. His net receipts from his farm were, therefore, $1,070, or nearly 9 per cent. on his money. Besides this he received all his pork, apples and a great many other articles for the use of his family. But to accomplish this requires eternal vigilance and good management, and the right kind of a tenant. Under these circumstances we regard it as rather remarkable that our people are bidding and scrambling for bonds and stocks which pay not more than three or four per cent. interest, while they let these investments in good farm lands go begging. —Hagerstown Mail.

Smile.

Be sociable.

Don't go moping around with your head bowed down and half your countenance smothered behind a big black frown, so absorbed in your own affairs that you have not a smile or a word for anybody.

If you make acquanintances, recognize them in some way.

Don't act as though you were a deaf mute, but do something, it matters little what, to show that you are alive and conscious.

If you have said, "How d'ye do!" eight or ten time to the same persons within the last half hour, then nod your head, or smile if they still seem to expect recognition. It may not be etiquette, but it is harmless.

What if you have bobbed your head to people on the street until your neck is warped and lame, then bob it the other way until you straighten it again.

It is a little thing to be pleasant, though sometimes when you are mad, and bilious and blue, goes against the grain. The first word comes hard, and the first smile nearly cracks your countenance, but keep it up, and before you have smiled half a dozen times you would rather do it than not, and your blues will vanish like mist before the rising sun.

If anybody speaks to you on the street, and you keep your eyes stolidly fixed upon the ground, do you suppose that person will speak to you again? No! You must put yourself out of the way to pick up the thread of sociability which you so rudely snapped, and show yourself repentant before the old friendly relations are restored, and that will take four times as long as if you had spoken at the proper time.

Your face is bound to grow long, or broad. Smiles will take possession of it, or frowns will reign. Frowns are weeds which, if allowed to grow, will choke out the entire crop of smiles, and render noxious and disagreeable the garden that was meant to be fruitful and comely.

Financially considered, smiles cost absolutely nothing, so the poorest may indulge without limit.

YOUNG WIFE (at a ball)—You are improving wonderfully as a dancer. Don't you remember how you used to tear my dresses? Young husband—Y-e-s; I wasn't buying 'em then.

GENTLEMEN—I have been having chills for about three (3) years, and have tried several remedies but to no avail. About three months ago, I was prevailed upon to try Celore. I used one package of that never-failing remedy for chills and to-day I feel no symptoms of their return.

PEGG'S MILL, TEXAS, June 20, 1888—The Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: One of my children was troubled with rheumatism and boils for about two years. We gave her various kinds of medicine, but without profit, and began to despair of curing her at all. I was persuaded to try your Swift's Specific. After she had used several bottles the disease all disappeared, and she is now a hale, hearty and healthy girl twelve years old. Another child has just become afflicted in the same way, and I am using the S. S. S. and anticipate a prompt and permanent cure. R. C. WADDELL.

RICH HILL, MO., July 7, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: Our little girl was cured three weeks old broke out with eczema. We tried the prescriptions from several good doctors, but without any special benefit. We tried S. S. S., and by the time one bottle was gone her head began to heal, and by the time she had taken six bottles she was completely cured. Now she has a full and heavy head of hair—a robust, hearty child. I feel it but my duty to make this statement. Respectfully, H. T. STONE.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 27, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: In 1886 I contracted blood poison, and at once sought a physician, who treated me for several months. By his advice I went to Crab Orchard Springs, Ky., where his course of treatment was carefully observed. I recovered, as I thought, but the next spring pimples began to appear on my face and body. These gradually increased to sores and running sores. I was advised to try S. S. S., and immediately after taking it I commenced to improve, slowly at first, but more rapidly afterwards, and soon nothing remained to tell of my trouble. My blood is now thoroughly cleansed, and my system free from taint, and I owe my present condition—a perfect cure—to your medicine. I cheerfully give this statement that others who have suffered as I have may reap the same benefit.

HOMER, LA., May 25, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: About two years ago my general health gave way entirely. I was so debilitated that I almost despaired of ever feeling well again. All that the physicians done for me brought no permanent relief. Friends insisted that I should give S. S. S. a fair trial, although I thought it would be throwing away money. After taking a thorough course, my health and strength returned, and I must say that S. S. S. alone cured me, as I discarded all others while using it. As a tonic I can most heartily recommend it for general debility, it certainly is a specific. W. F. BAIRDEN, J. P.
