BOSTON, October 23.

LATE EUROPEAN NEWS,

By the Boston, capt. Trott, from Liverpool—last dates, Sept. 8, 1805.

LONDON, September 8.

Dispatches have been received from admiral Collingwood, informing of the arrival of the combined fleet at Cadiz, the 20th August, consisting of 28 sail of the line. Sir Robert Calder and admiral Cornwallis had been made acquainted with the fact.

The homeward bound Jamaica fleet of 156 sail, has arrived; without the loss of a single ship, or at most but one.

Our letters from Falmouth state, that the homeward bound East-India fleet were within sight.

The Rochefort squadron, it is said, slipped into Brest, when Cornwallis had hauled off to intercept the combined squadron.

VIENNA, August 17, 1805.

DECLARATION

OF THE EMPEROR OF GERMANY.

"Altho' the emperor has not as yet taken any direct part in the different efforts which have been made, in the course of the present maritime war, to reconcile the belligerent parties, and effect the re-establishment of peace, his majesty has not been the less ardently desirous that an object so beneficial should be obtained by the exertions of the powers whose mediation was particularly solicited for that purpose.

"This desire on the part of the court of Vienna, was necessarily increased from the time that events, involving directly the interests and the balance of the continent, were produced by the subsequent consequences of the war between France and England, and from the time that his majesty, the emperor of the French, had publicly declared that the final settlement of the affairs of Lombardy, should be deferred until the conclusion of this war, when it would be included in the negociations which would take place for its termination. From that time the court of Vienna, who has possessions in Italy, and towards whom engagements were entered into respecting that important part of Europe, found herself immediately interested in the success of the negociations for peace; and she has, in consequence, declared, on different occasions, how anxious she was to have it in her power to contribute to accelerate their opening.

"It resulted from this disposition on her part, that nothing could be more satisfactory to her than the intelligence of the pacific proposal made at the beginning of this war by his majesty, the emperor of the French, to the court of London—and of that of this latter power, in which she referred upon that point, to the interference of his majesty, the emperor of all the Russias; proposals, which announced on the part of both powers, a moderate and conciliating disposition, which it was hoped the mission of M. Novosiltzoff to Paris, offered and accepted with equal alacrity, would realize.

It is therefore with the deepest regret that the emperor has learned that this mission has been cut short by the recent changes in the condition of the republics of Genoa and Lucca. Finding on his side, in these late changes, reasons of additional weight for desiring the speedy commencement of conciliatory measures, and not being willing to relinquish the hopes which he had built upon the spirit of moderation professed and solemnly confirmed by the French sovereign, the court of Vienna hastens to offer its good offices, in the hope that the general expectation which was entertained from the conciliating temper of all the powers, should not be again disappointed. She, therefore, invites the courts of St. Petersburg and the Thuilleries to immediately renew the negotiation which was on the point of being opened; being ready to lend her most earnest assistance to this desirable object, flattering herself that the court of Berlin will also contribute towards it on her side, as a necessary consequence of the lively interest which she has always professed to take in the re-establishment of the public repose."

August, 1805.

☞ The authority of this state-paper is doubted. It ill agrees with the preparations for war making throughout Germany—and has not appeared in the Paris papers.

AUGSBURG, August 19.

It is stated that the king of Prussia is assembling troops in Franconia, in Anspach and Bareuth, to support the neutrality which the Princes of the South of Germany are determined to maintain, in case Austria goes to war. A treaty between Prussia and Bavaria for this object is talked of.

A large body of men is to be stationed in the environs of Lintz. The court of Vienna are taking very strong measures for the safety of the capital of the empire.

The last letters from Venice state the amount of the garrison there at ten thousand men.—The greatest activity is using in fortifying the Isle of St. George. Orders have been issued to repair, as speedy as possible, all the forts and places in the Venetian territories, as well as those which cover the Venetian passes in the Tyrol and Carnivola. The troops in Austrian Italy, as well as the line of post along the Adige, have been reinforced. At the same time we hear, that the Austrians in the Brisgaw have been ordered to march to the Voralberg.

STUTGARD, August 25.

The elector of Bavaria, it is said, will, with his family, remove to Wurtzburg, in Franconia.

BERLIN, July 20.

The baron de Hardenburg, in his note to M. Laforet, the French minister, expresses the deep regret of his Prussian majesty at the return of the passports by M. Novosiltzoff; and at the same time time observes, that the union of the Ligurian Republic (Genoa) with France, was an event much unexpected.

PARIS, Aug. 31.

The frontiers of the empire seem to be menaced by the movements of the Austrian armies. Thirty thousand men are to march from the camps of Boulogne to the banks of the Rhine. This intelligence may surprise those who have even foreseen it.

In fact, we might foresee that the envious hatred of the British cabinet, and the fear with which the genius of the emperor Napoleon fills it, would induce Mr. Pitt to exhaust all the efforts of intrigue and corruption, to divide the dangers that menaced England, and make the continent share them with her; but we may well be astonished that Austria should have so soon forgotted the lesson of experience, and that she should give herself up to those sinister councils which have twice dragged her to the brink of a bottomless abyss.

Vanquished for several years, she had received from the magnanimity of the conqueror more advantages than she would have dared to demand after victories; and it is against the hero, who, respecting courage and misfortune, stopped to his triumphs, and twice saved her by a generous peace, that she is going to rekindle, at the voice of a perfidious ally, a war which to her will have neither legitimate object nor no end.

But there is in future more than one day of Marengo to France and Austria.

The Hungarians and Germans, will perhaps be tired of shedding their blood to preserve to the English the commercial and naval despotism which has so often insulted the Austrian flag. The French will never be tired of fighting for the freedom of the seas, from which it wished to banish them; for the defence of their property, which it is wished to destroy; for the prosperity of their manufactures, which it is wished to stifle; for the majesty and greatness of the empire, which only wound the pride of their enemies; they will be faithful to the remembrance of their past glory, and to the sentiment of their present happiness.

In the storm of the revolution, when we were without chief, without laws, without union, without government, and without bread, we made coalesced Europe respect the independence of our territory. The revolution is at an end, order is restored, the state flourishing; he who restored laws, victory and honor, leads on our soldiers, and presides over our destinies. Half Europe is for us—the other will breathe wishes for our success, even though it is fighting against us. It is easy to see on which side the danger will be. [Bulletin de l'Europe.]

A decree was made by his majesty, at the imperial camp of Boulogne, on the 26th, concerning the levy of the conscription for the year 14. Pursuant to this decree, the 30,000 conscripts for the year 14, which, by virtue of the law of the 27th Nivose, year 13, are to be raised to complete the army to its establishment, and the thirty thousand destined to remain as a reserve, or to raise the army to the war establishment, are to be put into actual service.

VIENNA, August 12.

We learn that government has given orders for marching 15,000 men to reinforce the troops in the Tyrol. They are composed of veteran infantry and hussars. The archduke John is to command in Tyrol, with general Mack for his second.

The troops vestined for the camp of Badwein are on the march; to which the regiments in Bohemia are to be united. Three other camps are forming; one near Gratz, another near Luzemburg, and another near Luetz. [Moniteur.]

August 14.

On the 12th inst. the levy of recruits commenced here, and in all the hereditary dominions of the emperor, with great activity: The movements of troops are also continuing.

August 15.

Notwithstanding all the appearances of an approaching rupture, many people are of opinion, that war will not take place, but that more probably a congress will be held. However, it is very likely, that the whole army will be placed on the war establishment, by the first of September. Moreover, it is positively asserted, that several battaljons of the frontier troops are already on their march to Italy, pursuant to orders; and that 90,000 Russian troops are ready on the Austrian frontiers. A great military promotion is also spoken of, in which a field marshal, some generals, and major-generals, will be appointed.

On the 13th inst. a train of 102 pieces of cannon, with the necessary ammunition, left Vienna for Italy; and the roads from Vienna to Baden is so covered with troops, that travellers can hardly pass that way.

On the 20th of this month, the archduke Charles, will set out on his journey to Italy.

They write from Milan, the 30th of July, as follows:—"The French troops in Italy have been in constant motion, for this month past; and they assemble in great numbers, on the Austrian frontiers, especially on the river Chiese, where, near Mount Chairo, an army of 30,000 men is already assembled; the destination of which is not yet known. The fortifications of Turin and Mantua are also placed in the strongest state of defence.

INSPRUCK, (Tyrol) Aug. 12.

All the troops of the monarchy are on the march. Various camps are forming. Prince Charles has purchased the horses for his suite: The archduke John sets out in 20 days.

[Moniteur.]

The "Clef du Cabinet"—a Paris paper, edited at the office of M. Talleyrand---thus characterizes the democrats of the United States:---Speaking of Mr. Munroe, this paper adds, "He is very popular and powerful with his party---the antifederalists---whose attachment to France, and hatred to England, do them equal honor in the eyes of all persons abhoring the tyranny of Great-Britain, and loving the liberty and independence of mankind." Talleyrand resided some years in the United States, and knew the antifederalists well. But when one of his licensed writers talks of "liberty and independence:" after that, to use a vulgar phrase, "a horse next came in to be shaved."

A gentleman from Marblehead yesterday, informs, of the arrival there of schr. Hiram, captain Hooper, from Bilboa, 33 days; and that the captain saw posted at Bilboa, an order forbidding Spanish privateers to molest American vessels.
