BY THIS DAY's MAILS.

NEW-YORK, March 29

The French ships Alexandre of 80 guns, Le Brave 74, and Jupiter 74, captured in the engagement off the city of St. Domingo, have arrived at Kingston, Jamaica.

The British sloop of war, Driver, capt. Simpson, last from Bermuda, anchored within the Hook yesterday. Two officers came up from her last evening, but they furnish nothing new. She left Bermuda the 20th inst.

Francisco Son, a native of Portugal, convicted of the murder of Archibald Graham, in June last, was yesterday executed pursuant to his sentence.

Capture of the Cape of Good-Hope.

By the ship Æolus, capt. Mather, arrived yesterday from Canton and St. Helena, we have received the particulars of the capture of the Cape of Good-Hope, by a British force under the command of sir Home Popham and sir David Baird.

On the 23d of January, the English brig L'Espoir, arrived at St Helena from the Cape of Good-Hope, and brought intelligence of the surrender of that place to the English on the 10th of January. The English troops were landed about the 5th of January, on the Hottentot shore.—They were much annoyed in landing, by the Duch light troops, and so on attacked by the whole Dutch force under the command of gov. Yansen. A sharp engagement took place. Various were the reports at St Helena respecting the number killed and wounded; but it was generally supposed that 1000 Dutch, and from 600 to 800 of the English were killed and wounded The Dutch troops were finally defeated, and gov. Yansen, with about 3000 troops retreated to the country, and the place capitulated.

The force sent against the Cape, consisted of 7,300 troops, under the command of general Sir David Baird; and the following ships of war under the command of sir Home Popham, viz Diadem, 64 guns; Raisonable, 64; Belliqueux, 64; Diomede, 50; Narcissus, 38; Leda, 38; another 36 gun frigate; L'Espoir brig, 18; and another brig of 18 guns; 3 Indiamen and 38 transports.

The Britannia, a fine ship belonging to the company, having, as report says 300,000l. sterling, in specie, on board, and a transport, were totally lost off St. Roque—two lives only were lost, one of which was colonel Yorke, of the royal artillery.

Saturday, 10th January, 1806.

Articles of capitulation proposed by the lieutenant-colonel Hieronimus Castmicus Von Prophalow, commandant of the town, castle, &c. circumjacent fortifications of the Cape of Good Hope.

To the major general, in the service of his Britannic majesty, sir David Baird, K. B. and commander in chief of his majesty's forces, and commodore sir Home Popham, K. M. commander in chief of his Britannic majest's naval forces in Table Bay.

Art. I. The capitulation being signed, the Cape, town, castle, and circumjacent fortifications shall be immediately surrendered to the troops of his Britannic majesty. The fortifications of the king's block-house, Craig's tower, and all the batteries within that circuit, on the other side of Camp's Bay.

Art. II. The garrison shall, at the surrender, march out with all the honors of war; and shall then lay down their arms and become prisoners of war; but such officers as are natives of the colony, or married with natives, or in possession of sufficient landed property to become regularly, and bona fide domiciliated, shall be at liberty to continue here so long as they behave themselves as becometh good subjects and citizens; or proceed to Great-Britain with regular passports, having previously passed their paroles not to serve until regularly exchanged.

Art. III. All officers, who, according to the previous article must go to Europe, shall be provided with passages at the expence of his Britannic majesty, and shall have leave to realize their property previous to their departure, and receive the same pay as they did in their own service, till the day of their embarkation.

Art. IV. The French subjects, who belonging to the stranded frigate le Atalante, and the stranded privateer le Napoleon, were casually here, and comprehended in the capitulation, shall be treated on the same footing as the garrison, but they must all be embarked for Europe, as well as every other French subject in the colony.

Art. V. The inhabitants of the town, who have borne arms to be considered as belonging to the town, and may immediately return to their former occupations. But the distinction between the burghers and other inhabitants is to remain the same, and subject to the same restrictions as under the Dutch laws.

Art. VI. All bona fide private property, whether belonging to the civil or military servants of the government, to the burghers and inhabitants, to churches, orphans, and other public institutions of that kind, shall remain free and untouched.

Art. VII. Public property of every description, whether consisting of treasure, or naval, or military stores, buildings, estates or merchandizes belonging to the Batavian Repnblic or the government of France, shall be delivered up, and proper inventories given of them as soon as possible.

Art. VIII. The burghers and inhabitants shall preserve all their rights and privileges which they have enjoyed hitherto; public worship as at present in use, shall also be maintained without alteration.

Art. IX. The paper money, actually in circulation, shall continue current as heretofore, until the pleasuare of his Britannic majesty is known.

Art. X. The lands and houses, the property of the Batavian republic, which must be delivered in consequence of the present capitulation, shall remain as security for that part of the paper money which is not already secured by mortgages upon the estates of individuals, by its having been put to them. This is however to be without projudice to the free use to be made of the said lands and houses for public purposes.

Art. XI. Prisoners of war, comprehended in the present capitulation, shall not be pressed into his Britannic majesty's service, or engaged against their own free will and consent. With respect to other persons, they are provided for in article V. of this capitulation.

Art. XII. The inhabitants of Cape-Town shall be exempted from having troops quartered on them.

Art. XIII. Two ships having been sunk in Table Bay, to the great detriment of the Roadstead, either after the Bavarian republic had sent out a flag of truce, or whilst it was in contemplation to do so, they are to be raised again and delivered over in an entire state of repair; this having been done without the sanction of the commandant, the raising of the said ships, shall be incumbent on those who sunk them.

Art. XIV. The capitulation shall be signed at Fom-Oltto, this afternoon, when the Castle of Cape-Town, and all the adjacent forts, previously mentioned, shall be surrendered to his Britannic majesty's troops.

Given under our hands and seals, this thirtieth day of January, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and six, at Papendorp, near Knocke.

(Signed)
H. C. Baron Von Prophalow.

From the Mediterranean.

Extract of a letter from an Ameriean captain in the Mediterranean, dated Jan 21, 1806.

"On my passage I was boarded by five cruizers, two British, two French and one Spaniard; from all whom, I received the most gentlemanly and polite treatment. I was first boarded by the Unit, British frigate; not a question was asked relative to the origin of the property, but merely whether the ship and property were neutral; and the register, bills of lading and the invoice of the cargo, were with them sufficient evidence. I concluded from this gentle treatment, they were ignorant of the late decisions of the British courts, and ascribed my easy escape to their want of knowledge. I soon after fell in with the Ætna bomb-ketch, right out of Gibraltar. "It is now all over with me," said I; "this fellow has a lesson from a different school; he has studied too deep to let me pass without molestation;" but the same questions were made, and the same treatment shewn me by the latter as were by the former, and I was suffered to proceed with the least hindrance possible. The two French cruizers merely asked for the evidence of the neutrality of the ship, and the French consul's certificate; and the Spaniard, in a little dirty felucca, to my great astonishment, came on board bowing and scraping, curving his body into an obtuse angle of at least 30 degrees, and was perfectly satisfied with the examination of the passport in four languages, and declared there was no document like that; it was sufficient, he said, to convince a Turk. This same fellow, seven years ago, when all manner of crimes were committed in the Straits with impunity, would most likely have taken a man's teeth out of his head, if he could have found nothing of more value. Since the commencement of the French revolution, I have not witnessed so much respect for the American flag, as I have this passage, nor can I learn that any of our vessels in this quarter have experienced a different treatment of late."
