THE OTHER SIDE.

The campaign in Delaware for Prohibition waxes warm and evidence is being searched in all the local option counties. Kent has been visited and convincing arguments gleaned from many reputable citizens. The NEWS some weeks ago published Sheriff Medders' practical interview on the local option side which was unanswerable and is a knock-out blow to the one here given. Last week the NEWS gave Mr. Thomas W. Eliason's views.

The visitor looking for evidence against local option has the following from a well-known citizen:

Hon. Garrett Foxwell, ex-county treasurer, and at present a state senator, who resides near Black's, on one of the finest farms in Kent county, was most cordial. "Prohibition," he exclaimed, as the question was put to him, "is the biggest farce in Kent county. It is a fraud and a pretense. A drag on the tax-payers and a temptation to the boys and the weak men. Our court expenses have been doubled and one-half of them go for the trial of violators of the liquor law and without results. You can convict but a very few men. I have been on many juries, grand and petit, and I know.

"I think the people are getting tired of the farce and I believe that high license will carry at the next hitch. I am ready for the contest. I have eight men here. If four of them put 50 cents each into the pot they can get a gallon of whiskey from Baltimore or Wilmington, and a gallon of that whiskey means a big drunk. On Monday morning they are still drunk.

"Men and boys get drunk. A child of ten or twelve years can easily get a drink at a Speak Easy. Five boys with five cents each can buy a bottle of the stuff and go behind the barn and drink it. This is often done at Chestertown; but there are no convictions. Boys and men will tell any lie to shield the seller of this whiskey.

"Financially and morally the system is a failure. With high license this county could readily collect $6,000 a year from decent men, the proceeds of a business decently and openly conducted.

"It makes hypocrites of all. Last winter at Annapolis, I stepped into a saloon and saw an acquaintance of mine, a superintendent of a Sunday school of this county, who was at Annapolis to ask me to vote for more restrictive liquor legislation. He was just swallowing a drink of whiskey. When he saw me, he began to tell of a great misery in his breast. I assured him that an apology was unnecessary, and he never asked me to vote for his bill. That was worth something.

"I know a fellow over here at Betterton who is said to be worth from $15,000 to $20,000, every dollar of which he has made since 1879 by selling illicit whiskey. He has been caught several times and fined as high as $1500, or imprisonment in the House of Correction. He always goes to the House of Correction. He violates the law at Betterton during the summer. If caught he is tried in October and spends six months in jail. When Betterton wakes up in the spring there is this fellow, named Lamb, I believe, with a new supply of whiskey. Oh, it is a farce!

"I came from Delaware, was born near Odessa and have more or less business in Smyrna. I tell my friends right along to vote for license, for high license, for strict license laws, and by no means to fool with this farce called prohibition.

"My interests take me to Smyrna, to Middletown and to Dover in Delaware. In all my visits for years I never saw a drunken man in any of those towns. Last Saturday I saw four drunken men on the streets of Chestertown; you see, when a man, just like a child, is forbidden a thing he wants it all the more and as much of it as he can get. So our people partake of the forbidden liquor at every opportunity and take too much; but in Delaware where you can take a drink whenever you please, men don't think about it and even if they take one occasionally they keep sober. In Delaware the men are free and upon their own resposibility. Here they are not free, and, therefore, not responsible, as they look at it. It is a natural view. It is human nature. Inborn, which continues through childhood and manhood."

GOVERNOR SWANSON, of Virginia, is one of the great men of the South. His speech at the Bankers' convention at Atlantic City last Wednesday was a thrilling voice of courage and determination from that section. He closed with these words:

"At the close of the war the ballot was given to the vicious and debased, but after years of self-sacrifice we have recovered. By legislation we have practically eliminated the negro from Southern politics. We will stand together on this question as we have never stood on any other. We will treat the negro kindly, but, so help us God, we will hold him in his place for his own good and for the South's salvation."

THE Republican State candidates were officially notified of their nomination Monday evening at the Hotel Rennert, in Baltimore. The main point of Mr. Gaither's speech of acceptance was to declare the election law to be the great issue in this campaign,—that is, the reestablishment of the emblem principle by which the ignorant negro, by placing a mark opposite Lincoln's nose, may have his vote counted for the Republican ticket.

Democrats, see that your neighbor is registered.

THE will of Robert Anderson, late of the First district of Cecil county, was probated in the Orphans' Court for Cecil county, on Thursday. The testator bequeaths all his property to his wife and children, and names his wife and son, Robert, and daughter, Elizabeth, as executors.
