HUBBARD'S Fertilizers

Stand the Test

TRADE MARK

Hear what some of our farmers have to says of Hubbard's Fertilizers as compared with other goods:

Mr. Jodn H. Jackson, of Kent Island, says in fall of 1905 he used 7 tons of our Victor alongside of 7 tons of another brand, and ours gave him 1100 bushels of wheat, and the other 7 tons gave him 600 bushels, and in fall 1906 he used 7 tons again of our goods along side of 7 tons of same as other goods, and made another trial to test matters a second time, and this year he threshed from our 7 tons 1400 bushels of wheat and from the other 7 tons 800 bushels, and says he had better paid the other man for his goods and not used it and then bought ours for he certainly believes Victor to be an excellent goods for wheat and grass.

Mr. G. Thos. Dewberry says he has made a test of our wheat goods now for two years, and this years ours alongside of two other brands he threshed 6 to 8 bushels more wheat per acre from the others and that he expects to use it again this fall.

FIGHT IN DELAWARE.

Interviews in Chestertown on Both Sides of the Local Option Question —Kent Enjoys the Present Condition and Would Not go Back to Old Conditions.

The Delaware papers print interviews from Kent's citizens as to conditions here. In addition to the ones heretofore quoted we reprint the following:

INTERVIEW WITH MARION DE KALB SMITH.

Few people are better known on the Eastern Shore than Marion De Kalb Smith an able lawyer and an astute politician. I had not the slightest knowledge of Mr. Smith's views about local option, when I entered his office. But I knew him to be a genial gentlemen, a man of decided opinion and a most interesting talker. This is the story he told me:

"In 1878, I think it was, the question of license or no license was first submitted to our people and, as you may imagine, it brought forth a lively contest. All through the campaign the saloon element was confident of winning, and, indeed, ts the observer, it really did look as though they would win out, But when the votes were counted, to the utter surprise of the whiskey people, the county voted dry by some 700 majority. I did not agree with the proposition at that time, and I voted for license.

"When the saloon doors were elosed and the blinds put up, those fellows were very angry and sore. They could not understand it, and they vowed that the question should again be submitted to the people. But they did not calculate that ten years should elapse before it came to a vote again.

"In 1888 or '89 the question came before the people again. The saloon people were jubilant. They declared that there was no doubt this time about winning. They could see the saloon thrown wide open again and hear the jingle of glasses once more. But, alas, again they were doomed to disappointment. This time they were fairly stnnned. The county went dry by more than 1500. That settled the question. The people had spoken in no uncertain tone, and the rum element bowed its head. No attempt has been made to submit it since then. It would be no use. As in 1878 I again voted for license."

"Both times!" I said with some surprise.

"Yes," he said, "purely for reasons of my own. But I would not do so again. I don't know whether it is because accumulated years have brought wisdom, or because my vision has become clearer, but I am now thoroughly convinced that the absence of the saloon, the prohibiting of the public sale of liquor, is a great benefit to a community.

"It manifestly helps trade, because the money wasted over the bar now goes into proper channels. It certainly improves the moral condition, because a great promoter of crime is removed. It surely helps the family of the workingman, since the convenient purchase of drink is stopped, and the wages squandered at the bar now go to make the home brighter.

"Crime and disorderly conduct were practically swept away with the saloons. In the old license days, when saloons flourished in this town, it was no unusual thing to see drunken men staggering along the streets, and street fights were common occurences. You may occasionally now see an intoxicated man here, but he belongs to the riff-raff, not to the respectable class, and a street fight or a disorderly gathering would startle the town."

"Does local option make your taxes higher, or in any way increase your county expenses?" I asked.

"Not in the slightest," he replied.

"I know that sort of argument is frequently used, but there is absolutely nothing in it.

"Let me tell you something else," he said. No man could get the support of the people of this county for any office if he should announce himself in favor of license."

I said, "They told me the same thing in Talbot County."

"Well, it is true," he said. "It has been tried here, and it met with the worst of failure."

"Another thing," he said, "to the surprise of the saloon people the colored men voted for local option. They were sure of the colored voters. They expected to corral them, but most of them voted for no license."

I said, "Perhaps the colored voters stopped long enough to think that the only benefit the rumseller was to them was to gobble up every cent they could earn, set them crazy with his poison, and then kick them out, to get into trouble."

As I rose to go, I said, "Then, Mr. Smith, your experience tells you that local option is a good thing for a community?"

"Yes," he replied; "decidedly, yes."

Contortional.

During a husking bee in Maryland two young people were missed.

"I wonder where Nellie and Jim are!" somebody exclaimed.

A small boy edged his way forward and, pointing toward the vague darkness beyond the barn door, said:

"They're out there kissin' theirselves."
