How to Get Good Horses.

The following address was made last week at the meeting of the Rich Neck Farmers' Club by one of its bright, aggressive members:

MR. PRESIDENT, MEMBERS OF THE CLUB:

I believe the standard bred trotter and pacer to be the most profitable horse that the farmer in this section can raise. They are the most perfect combination of style, action and weight known to the world, and fill the farmers needs at home and abroad. There always will be an active demand for driving horses that have speed, style and endurance, and the average farmer cannot afford to breed for speed alone. He had better leave that to men of wealth who can and do purchase the choicest of brood mares and stallions together with every appliance for successful training. Even with this most complete equipment the percentage of failures in a short time would mean financial ruin to the farmer. The farmer must raise horses that he can sell and use, he must do the farm work with his brood mares that will each year produce colts that should be broke and trained on the farm at little expense. In selecting this type of horse the farmer has three markets from which to draw his profit, for example: first, the largest and most stylish goes to the coach horse trade; second, the medium size, carrying with it style, speed and endurance, goes to the roadster trade; third, from the large to the small sizes, that are lacking in the above requirements, go to the farmer.

Having given my reasons for advising the members of the club to select this type, let us proceed to discuss how best we can produce it. We are unable to trace the pedigree of the average horse that we are using today, and if we could trace his or her pedigree we would very likely find a mixture of all the known breeds and types. With such an ancestry is it any wonder that our disappointments and failures far outnumber our successes. Many people think there is some mystery involved in the selection and management of horses for breeding purposes, this is a mistake as it is only the application of good, common sense and familiarity with the points of a horse with thorough knowledge of the best methods of feeding and managing horses in general. We must use good judgment and discriminating intelligence in selecting sires and dams for heredity transmits with certainly only what has become a fixed characteristic, and any constitutional defect, weakness or infirmity in the near ancestry presents so great an element of danger that the wise breeder rejects those individuals for breeding purposes.

Under this head we might name soft, spongy bones and joints, contracted feet burbs, ring bones, weak tendons and feeble lungs. If we look after these details in selecting our brood mares and stallions there will soon be a marked improvement in our horses for there is not a single defect mentioned above that is not liable to be transmitted to the offspring.

A pedigree is the genealogy of an animal. As usually understood it consists of the names of the ancestors for one or more generations, and no pedigree can be a good one that does not produce good animals and no pedigree should be prized above others unless it produces better animals no matter what it may have been many generations ago if from a wrong system of breeding or lack of care in selection or from any other cause it has ceased to be superior it is worthless and is surrounded by an imaginary halo that attaches to a name handed down from the musty and foggy past.

VALUE OF SNOW.

It Protects The Wheat And Grass At Critical Times.

The first heavy snowfall of the current winter brings relief to those who have seen danger in the effect of an open winter upon the crops. Chief among these is winter wheat, the culture of which in the United States is found in some 30 different States. It comprises nearly two-thirds of the entire wheat crop of the country. On the character of the winter, therefore, depends mainly the price of wheat for the next year, and the price of wheat is the chief crop factor affecting speculation in staples directly and the security market indirectly.

Winter wheat needs more than anything else the protection of a liberal snowfall. Without it the thawings from sunshine through the middle of the day and the freezing during the night alternate to injure the crop, not only by disturbing its growth, but also by enabling pests to get a better hold on it, or to survive the winter all the more successfully. There are already at hand enough reports to show that unless a harder winter comes to the rescue of the wheat in the ground insect pests are likely to figure much more largely than usual in the wheat territory south and west of the Missouri river.

The grass crops also share materially in the protecting cover of snowfall. The yield of hay of the growth of 1907 was valued at $743,507,000. Next to corn this is the most valuable crop of the American farm. If exposed to the winds and changes or temperature of an open winter, the setting of the turf is disturbed by the alternations of freezing and thawing and much injury is done to the producing capacity of the 44,000,000 acres now in the turf. A closed winter, on the other hand, not only shelters these fields, but permits of growth slowly but under favorable conditions, thus improving the chances of the fields for the stimulus of warmer weather when the break of the winter comes. To these two winter crops of the country timely snows are worth many millions of dollars.

THE KENT NEWS "AD."

Messrs. Editors:

Noting the answers to your "ad" for a farm-hand, especially the one from the old farm hand, I cannot refrain from making a few remarks upon this vital subject to farmers. Methinks it was rather absurd that offer of yours, for are you not aware that 'tis impossible to satisfy his honor—the farm hand?

Still, on second thought one cannot blame him, for has not the farmer placed him upon his throne, bowed down and worshipped him, lo, these many years as faithfully as ever any slant-eyed Celestia ever worshiped Budda or Po?

While at present I am a member of the triumphant army of farm helpers, I have not always been such and during my wanderings throughout the country have marveled at the ever-increasing plaint of the farmer—scarcity of help. Now what I wish to ask is, what on earth ails the farmer? Is he becoming an imbecile? It so appears, to anyone who will notice the shiftlessness and incompetency he puts up with daily without complaint. In the past five years I have talked with many farmers throughout the Eastern Shore on this subject, and find everywhere a tendency of fear toward the hired man which to me seems deplorable when one considers that the farmer should and easily could by proper organization and regulation be dominant. I will not at this time go into detail upon the remedy I have in view, but if so requested by anyone interested will gladly do so at any time, but will merely deal with conditions as they now confront us.

Some days ago while hauling fodder, I called my employer's attention to the large amount of corn left unhusked in it and inquired why he had not insisted that the help husk all the corn instead of leaving half of it in the fodder. Imagine my surprise in hearing him state that he dared not complain lest his help leave him. This I would like to ask: Would that man not be better off without help than with help that wastes more than enough to pay their wages?

I am sorry to state that this view of affairs seems to hold good with farmers in general and my friend of the unhusked corn is not alone in his cringing attitude.

The letter of last week's issue by a brother farm hand, which fact I am ashamed to own, rouses my ire to its highest pitch. If his experience has been such as he claims, I doubt not but that he has fortunately met some of the few farmers bold enough to give him no more than he deserves.

He speaks of fat meat and corn-pone as a farm diet. In my experience I find that the average farm fare is beyond reproach and perhaps his employer will tell us that he is only a poor specimen of a fat-meat and corn-pone hand anyhow. As to the mule he uses on his periodical trips to town we do not even know that he is to be trusted with the best horse and carriage on the farm, and anyhow, is not a mule the fitting companion to a chronic kicker?

As to his using the wheelbarrow automobile after supper, do not fear that he will injure himself by overwork, as I judge by his letter the hardest work he aims on doing is chewing that corn-pone and chasing his employer for his wages every Saturday. I'll warrant he is on time there. In conclusion I will say that I believe in good wages (but not exorbitant, and a square deal on both sides. Respectfully yours,

THE WAYFARER.

THE RYAN BANQUET.

A banquet of much interest was given at the Houston Club in honor of Miss Ella Isabelle Ryan, the accomplished daughter of Mr. J. R. Ryan, Sr., of Rock Hall, Md. Miss Ryan received a degree of nurse at the annual mid-year commencement of training school for Nurses and Physicians, of Baltimore. She won the second honor badge of the entire school, she will enter the University of Penn in Philadelphia, next fall to take a course in medicine. Among those present were: Prof. and Mrs. Wm. Johnson, of Florida, in whose family Miss Ryan nursed in July; Prof. and Mrs. J. R. Evans, Prof and Mrs. Evans McBoy, Dr. and Mrs. H. S. Hill, Dr. J. and Miss Adrain Hill, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Camden, Mr. and Mrs. A. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Long, Miss Tessie and Dr. F. Stone; Dr. and Mrs. J. FINED $300 FOR WHIST PARTY.

Whist is a game of chance and all persons running whist clubs, whether for churches, charitable or other institutions, where prizes are given are guilty of gambling. This was the decision of Judge Wentworth in the Superior Court of Wilmington, and he found guilty six women who arranged a charity Whist party in connection with the aid society of the Main Street Baptist Church, and fined them $50 apiece.

The women made about $200 by the party. They charged a dollar admission and gave out three prizes. All of the women declared they would appeal the case and were released on their own recognizances.
