NEW YORK FASHIONS

New Millinery; Crowns; Trimmings; Flowers; Taffeta Ribbon; Thin Fabrics; Mirrette; Tailor Suits; Jackets.

A defthand maiden may be her own milliner if she can (successfully) line a brim with silk, satin or velvet, as all trimmings are now on the outside, and brims are turned up to suit the wearer. Crowns are very high on large hats, and ostrich plumes are in great demand, however, Tam crowns are shown, as well as some of moderate height. Either a high branch of foliage, an aigrette, or feathers or a high mass of ribbon at the left side, marks the stylish hat. Ostrich feathers are clustered at ons side, or are used in pairs when very broad, and not unfrequently four and even six shaded feathers are on a hat.

EXTREMES IN SIZE.

Black hats are (so far) the largest, but white chip or milan are not very far in the rear; and white and colored lilacs form a very high branch. Crimson poppies and buds are beautiful on a brown straw (the sole trimming) the edge of the brim bound with brown velvet. White and yellow buttercups are used with fine effect on black straws. A great deal of wide taffeta ribbon, artistically adjusted is a substitute for feathers and roses may be added or wings if preferred. Many pretty toques of white lace straw are among new millinery and fancy brims of jet passementerie, lace embroidered in silver, corn-flower buds, rose petals or roses sprinkled with rhine stone sparks, are universal and always a high feather or aigrette.

SHEER DRESS FABRICS.

Swiss muslins are very attractive, coming in floral stripes, small sprigs or openwork "all-over" patterns, or in squares with a tiny, raised leaf in each corner. Pretty color blendings are shown in striped silk voiles, as for example on a white surface are inch wide stripes in two shades of tan. Two shades of Copenhagen blue arranged in a similiar manner are quite effective as this color is in great vogue this season.

MIRRETTE.

The clever woman who is able to appear daintily dressed at all times without too much strain upon her dress allowance, will welcome the new sheer, dress fabric called "Mirette." This looks exactly like fine silk, but launders like muslin without losing a bit of its lustre or finish so that it is as practical as pretty for lingerie waists, and every sort of dressy gowns. Party frocks for grown ups or children made after some of the fashionable lingerie models are particularly nice in this sheer, dainty material that comes in white and all the newest colorings.

The above design is by the McCall Co. of New York, Fashion Publishers and Manufacturers of McCall Patterns.

TAILOR SUITS.

The domestic tailor suit reveals no novelties, unless the varied length of jackets may be classed as such. Skirts are either gored, circular or else plaited, and an innovation is a skirt opening at the side front. Bias bands not meeting in front and finished with buttons afe quite, and very smart on white wool, stripped with black. Striped wools with plaided borders make up handsomely and accord with prevailing fancies.

SUIT JACKETS.

When a figure is shapely, the suit jacket is closely fitted in the back and the fronts are cut away. Otherwise the back is semi-fitted, and the fronts remain straight. Some are quite long with the lower edge plain, or others have slashings outlined by braid which give a showy effect. A short jacket is cut in scallops trimmed by braid, with a band of colored embroidery around the V neck, which is almost univeral on dressy jackets. Vests in contrast impart a touch of color, placed very low on the front, and colored velvet collar and buttons also give a brightning effect.

VERONA CLARKE.

Mr. Carnegie has settled an income of five thousand dollars a year on a young woman who for years was in charge of the Carnegie library in Atlanta, Georgia. She is to be married and to give up library work and enjoy herself. There are a great many folks in the United States who are never to forget the name of Carnegie.

PROF. BROWN WILL WINTER AT THE HOUSE OF CORRECTION.

The Baltimore News, Wednesday of the present week, contained a very readable article in its columns in reference to a former resident of Queen Anne's county. The person referred to in the article was the famous "Prof." Thomas R. Brown. It will be remembered that Brown was tried in the Circuit Court for the killing of Samuel Rash several years ago, and after a sensational trial was acquitted. Brown later went to Baltimore, and from time to time has been giving the police of that city much trouble, in one way or another. The newspaper article referred to as follows:

"Professor" Thomas R. Brown, "London's Famous Medium," will spend the rest of the winter at the House of Correction. "Professor" Brown, who conducted fortune telling parlors on West Fayette street, admits that he did not care particularly about leaving Baltimore at this time, but Judge Wright, in the Criminal Court, today prescribed the rest for him, after he had been convicted of fortune-telling by a jury. When his case came up for trial he straightened out his white vest, arranged his black tie and winged collar, and told State's Attorney Owens that he was not ready. He said that his lawyer had not appeared. The State's Attorney has met the "Professor" under similar conditions in the Criminal Court before, and he ordered his trial to go on.

Marie Howard said that she went to the "famous medium's" parlors on February 4.

"He told me that I would have a long and pleasant life," she said. "He said I would get a good bunch of money later on."

"Did he say that you would get married?" asked State's Attorney Owens.

"Not just that," she chirped between blushes. "But he said if I would give him $5 he would bring the man I loved before me."

She said she did not give him the $5, but she crossed his palm with a 50-cent piece.

Catherine Gilbert, who went to the "Professor's" establishment at the same time, declared that her fortune was similar.

"No different?" put in the State's Attorney.

"Only in one thing," she said. "He offered to produce the man I loved for $10. He wanted $5 more for my sweetheart, but I didn't have it to give."

The medium admitted that he had advertised as "London's famous medium," but declared he advertised only as a consultor and advice giver—not as a spiritualistic medium. He said that the women went to him for love charms and powders to capture the affections of the men with whom they were in love.

"I told the second one that I recognized an officer—a man in uniform about her. She said it was a train conductor.

The man in uniform turned out to be Sergeant Glenn and Patrolman Garrigan, of the Western district, who approached the medium's apartments armed with a warrant issued by Justice Loden.

In conclusion the "Professor" attempted to impress upon the jury that he is a firm believer of Spiritualism as a religion.

"Every day," he began, "I sing hymns and say prayers; why I"——

"Go ahead with your testimony," put in Judge Wright. "Tell what happened.

But the "Professors" was undone when Mr. Owens flashed a record, which took up two pages of writing.

The jury returned a verdict at once, and the man with the white vest was ushered below to the lock-up.

A FAMOUS HORSE DEAD.

Belton, 2:17¼, owned by Mr. D. B. McMenamin, one of the best known horses on the Eastern Shore is dead. The old horse had retained his soundness and vigor to an unusual degree, but succumbed to an attack of pneumonia while being wintered by Col. John F. Godwin, whom many horsemen will recall owned and raced him several years ago. Romola, an offspring, has succeeded in winning the world's record in England by lowering the record to two minutes.

Belton No. 2256 was bred by Col. R. G. Stoner, Paris, Ky., and was foaled in 1882. He was a son of the famous trotting horse sire, Belmont No. 64, he a grandson of the great progenitor of the American Trotting Horse family, Hambletonian No. 10. Belton's dam was Sally D., a daughter of Strathmore No. 408, a son of the famous Hambletonian 10, and a direct male line ancestor of Lou Dillon, 1:58⅝, holder of the world's record for the fastest trotted mile.

Belton was purchased in 1882, when about six months old, of his Kentucky breeder, by Mr. E. B. Emory, then a resident of Queen Anne's county. Mr. Emory sold Belton to Mr. Samuel Jester, of Queen Anne's county. Trainer Frank C. Johnson, gave him a record of 2:31 as a three year-old. Recognizing the merit of Belton, Col. J. F. Godwin, in the early fall of 1885, purchased the horse of Mr. Jester in 1891, in turn was purchased by Mr. E. H. Tyson, of Chester, Pa., and by Herman R. Tyson, driven to his record of 2:17¼ in a race on Belmont track near Philadelphia, October 18th, 1892, to an old-fashioned sulky.

Belton's racing career continued with considerable success through 1893 and 1894 and in November 1895 passed to the ownership of Mr. James S. Tyson, who retired him to stud service, and April 1904, resold him to Col. John F. Godwin who on Feb. 22nd, 1906, sold the horse at public sale to Mr. D. B. McMenamin, Chestertown, Md., in whose ownership he made several remarkably successful seasons. Circumstances suggesting such a course for the greater comfort of the horse during the winter, Mr. McMenamin arranged with Col. Godwin for the removal of Belton to Queen Anne county, where he remained till his death, which occured, December 20th, 1907, Belton, 2.17¼, was about 15¼ hands tall and weighed usually from 1065 to 1080 pounds. He was remarkable for his gentle disposition and superb legs and feet; and his great flights of speed are well remembered by many horse-lovers.

Belton sired, Calmo, 2:13¾; Little George, 2:18¾; Johhy B., 2:19¼; Frank P., 2:20¼; Polka Belton, 2:21¼ and Daisy B., 2:25, pacers; Belton G., 2.19¼; Romola, 2:20¼; Victor B., 2:25¼, and Belton R., 2:27¼, trotters; and was sire of the dams of Maydel, 2:12¾; Little Belle, 2:13¼; Josh Raughley, 2:16¾, and Russell B., 2:19¼, pacers, and James Dudley, 2:19¾; Water Lily, 2:27 and Edgar Bell, 2:29¾, trotters, and many others.
