The officers broke and endeavored to escape, the mounted riflemen, however, soon overtook all but one who distanceed the rest—him they ran fifteen miles, when his horse bogged down in the prairie, near the Brassos timber—he then made for the tin ber on foot.

His pursuers in the eargerness of the chase, dashed into the same bog hole, left their horses and continued the pursuit on foot, following the trail of the fugitive, (which was very plain, owing to therecent rain) until they reached the timber, where it was lost,

—The pursuers then spread themselves, and searched the wood for a long time in vain, when it occurred to an old hunter, that the chase might, like a hard pressed bear, have "taken a tree."—The tree tops were then examined, when lo! the game was discovered snugly ensconced in the forks of a large live oak.

The captors did not know who their prisoner was, until they reached the camp, when the Mexican soldiers exclaimed, "El General! El Gefe! Santa Anna!"

RETIREMENT OF MR. CLAY.

By the subjoined extract from a letter written by Mr. Clay to the citizens of Bolivar, Indiana, it appears that he intends to leave the Senate and retire to Ashland, his farm in Kentucky.

Mr. Clay has been thirty years in the service of the people, and his talents as an orator and statesman have been justly and honorably acknowledged by his appointment to several high and distinguished offices under the Federal Government. But in an evil hour he deserted the principles for which he was so able and conspicuous an advocate; yielded to the influence of an ambition that has finally wrecked him in the estimation of the great body of the American people, and now in the shades of retirement can he watch the going out of his own fame in the political horizon of his country.

RETIREMENT—OF MR. CLAY.

The citizens of Bolivar, Indiana, understanding that Mr. Clay is about to retire from public life, recently addressed him a letter, in which, after many complimentary remarks, they express their hopes that he may find it compatible with his private inclinations to continue in the service of the country. The following extract from his reply discloses his designs, and will be read with interest:

"This is the thirtieth year since I first entered the service of the Federal government.—Only labors for the public have been various and often arduous. I think they give some title to repose, which I feel to be necessary on many accounts. I believe with you that the present period in the affairs of our country is eminently critical. It requires all the wisdom and virtue and energy among us to avert impending danger. If I were persuaded that by remaining longer in the public service, I could materially aid in arresting our downward progress, and in communicating additional security to civil liberty and our free institutions, I should feel it my duty not to quit—But I am not sure that my warning voice has not been already too often raised. Perhaps that of my successors may be listened to with more effect. I sincerely hope it may

These, gentlemen, are briefly my motives for retirement. It is my purpose, if my health will allow me, to remain in Congress during the present session. I reserve for future consideration whether I shall serve out the term for which the Legislature of my State did me the honor last to elect me; and your wishes will have due weight in any decision I may form. Beyond that term, I can conceive of no probable contingency which would reconcile me to a further continuance in the Senate.

I request you, gentlemen, to communicate my grateful acknowledgements to the citizens of Bolivar, and to accept for yourselves assurances of the esteem and regard of

Your friend and obedient servant

HENRY CLAY.

FOR THE WHIG.

To the citizens of the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

As the time has arrived for us to maturely reflect, and well consider the great and important question of the system of Internal Improvement in Maryland, we think it not amiss to offer a few remarks upon the subject of the contemplated rail road on this Shore.

According to the provisions of the law incorporating the rail road company, and the contemplated route for the said road, provided for therein, it is to run as near the Delaware line as practicable, North and South, so as not to sacrifice the great interest of our shore. Let us for a moment take a view of the local situation of the different parts of the Eastern Shore, and we will find it to be one of the most beautiful watered sections of the country probably in the world; we think the world could hardly produce its equal, God and nature, has been all bountiful in their dispensations towards the peninsula. We find more of the Counties on this Shore, highly favoured in those respects, and we would particularly take a view of the local situation of our sister county Talbot; of all the Counties on this Shore she is the most highly favoured, and if you will take a view of the map of the Eastern Shore, you will find she is almost surrounded by water, and enjoys to the greatest extent all the luxuries of life.—Fish, oysters and fowl are boundless, in and on her waters, the greatest advantages of an abundance of marl and other sources to improve her soil, if the hand of industry is properly applied, while some other counties enjoy but very limited advantages in comparison to Talbot, and much farther from the great market of our State (Baltimore.) Look at the interior of Queen Ann's, Caroline, Dorchester and Somerst Counties, and they dwindle into a small scale in point of their local advantages. And can it be possible that Talbot county has any right to complain because there is a prospect, if the road is located where the original law intends it, to place her neighbours in some measure upon an equal footing with her self? does Talbot wish to make all other counties tributary to her interest? would this be generous in her citizens! The very idea is absurd and ridiculous in the extréme, to suppose such things. The other counties are not to submit to such dictation, they will assert their own rights and let the great purposes and intention of the law be carried out, as enacted. They ask for no exclusive benefits—but wish in some measure to be placed on an equal footing with their neighbours. Suppose for argument sake that Talbot county, was gratified in all her views what would be the result; in the first place gross indignation to the counties. Secondly, the road from Easton to Watkins Point would cost more than the whole length of the other route together Look at the local situation of the country through which it would have to run. You would have to cross several large water courses, marshes, cripples, &c. almost numberless, where it would be impossible to make any thing like a permanent road at any price. Are all these difficulties to be encountered, to gratify one particular county. We say the great interest of the State of Maryland would thereby be injured and the other stockholders at large. Has not the State a great interest in this work, as well as all the others of a similar character in the State, doubtless she has, and such an interest as will not tamely be surrendered to gratify any particular sectional feeling. We should rejoice to see harmony prevail on the Eastern Shore on this subject. All cannot be gratified in the work. This is impossible; and we should all feel a disposition to sacrifice some personal and sectional feeling for the public good. This is the true republican feeling that we should be actuated by.—We hope that every editor of newspapers on this shore, will insert this in their papers for the public good.
