There are about 12,000 State Banks in the United States and of this number less than 650 are entitled to be placed on this Roll. Of this number the Chestertown Bank of Maryland and the Kent County Savings Bank are well up in the list. In order to be on the Roll of Honor a bank must possess surplus and capital larger than the authorized capital. Both of these home institutions have this honor and it shows these banks to be solid. "The Financier" well says, "It is not what you say about yourself that counts, it's what others say about you."
