BE FAIR.

We do not think that the factional political warfare now being waged in Kent county will be brought to a close favorable to either side by reason of the part which the local newspapers are taking in it. Not that the press is a weak influence in determining most questions of public polity, but because there is much controversial unfairness, we think, characterizing the discussions of issues by the Barroll organ. The junior editor of that weekly dodges questions, misconstrues opposing arguments, creates foolish material, and plays the bluff game to such an extent as to make those believe who credit him with the intellect he should have, that he is consciously making efforts to deceive the people.

It was once told of a very popular preacher of Chestertown that his wife knew when he had a poor sermon; she told by the way he yelled. The editorial page of the Transcript reminds us of that yelling preacher trying to impress his audience with the idea that his arguments were as heavy as his voice.

A glance at the political page of the Barroll news sheet will reveal a fancy assortment of italics, small caps, large caps, and almost all other kind. These are for the purpose attracting the attention of the reader to some special point which the editor thinks might be missed. If it is missed then it can't be very potent; consequently the Barroll scribe does the best he can to yell it at you by this wonderful type display. Any argument that appeals to the eye instead of the brain must be weak indeed.

We stated that controversial unfairness characterized a great deal of the editorial matter of the opposition. This can be easily shown.

The junior editor is unfair even to himself. Those who read the article he published on the first page of the Transcript two weeks ago could not help but notice the light, flippant tone of persiflage which sounded in the first few sentences. "Were you ever arrested?" "A novel sensation," etc. This could not help but impress the public that the arrest referred to constituted a pleasant diversion to the humdrum life of a literary editor.

But it was not long before he begins to whine; soon we notice the reference to personal persecution, and his real feelings are shown when he refers to the arrest as a humiliating and disgraceful occurence. Why not be honest with himself and either say nothing at all, or meet the situation in a dignified, sincere style. Be fair.

Then, too, he is unfair to his opponents. Unfair in diverting arguments into channels they were never intended to navigate, and where no man with his intellect could possibly steer them.

What is he appealing to? To prove this, note his analogical mind when he seeks to foist upon us the attempt to conceal the fact that Mr. Ahern was in the same class as Mr. Caldwell because, forsooth, he sells lumber to the farmer. He insinuates that we made the assertion Mr. Ahern was a great friend to farmers because of his lumber business. We made no such statement. It was said that Mr. Caldwell was of great benefit to the farmer, and as his sole occupation was a cattle buyer and seller, we concluded the advantage arose from that. Then we are knocked into a cocked hat by some more yelling type by that wonderful analogy of Mr. Ahern when no claim had been made of any advantage he was to the farmer by reason of his lumber yard. Be fair.

Then again, great capitals are used to sound the tocsin of alarm because we made the statement that if our delegates to the legislature were elected, they would legislate in the interest of the Organization faction, because they are a part of the people.

He attempts to make the public believe we considered the Organization all the people and our delegation would legislate only for them. If the delegates of the antis are elected would they deny that they would look after the interests of all the people? Or only the Barroll faction? The construction put upon our "fatal admission" leads one to believe that only Barrollites would be considered if the Antis are successful in the primaries. We emphasized the word part, they metamorphosed it into whole. Be fair.

Again, they profess to see some sinister motive in our defense of Mr. Turner from the attacks of the Barroll organ. They claim to reveal in due time that we are giving Mr. Shallcross the go-by. Wonderful penetration! Perhaps in the near future we shall have to defend Mr. Shallcross from Barroll innuendo. But surely the most gigantic intellect can see no exploitation of Mr. Turner to the neglect of Mr. Shallcross. That's one of the ruses of the opposition. Be fair.

Again, he says that all we say against the Barroll candidates is gaining them votes every day. Will he admit that all he says against ours is gaining us votes? Hardly; it is a case of the woman who said to her husband, "What's yours is mine, and what's mine is my own." What we say against the Barroll candidates is gaining them votes, and what he says against the Organization candidates is gaining Anti-Organization votes too. Be fair.

And so we think no man with a mind of his own will pay the slightest attention to these very, very small attempts to influence votes. They are not worth the energy expended either to originate them or to answer them. It will be the policy of this paper in the future to ignore them, and if the political scribe of the Barroll organ gets any fun playing with big and little type—let him enjoy himself to his hearts content.

We give him credit of slipping from under very, very easily, and adopting a line of argument unanswerable at times because absolutely farcical. His debate is the sort that appeals to emotion rather than intellect; his is a campaign of temper and of brawl. He indulges in some ludricous expression reminding one of the modern day slang, "I gotcha." He is a humorist of doubtful merit, and a schemer showing the fruits of his boss' training. He can not be fair.

POLITICS MAKES STRANGE BEDFELLOWS.

The Transcript, at Chestertown, Kent county, whose editors are good citizens one of them at least being a church man and the other also, so far as we know, recently printed a pathetic, affecting little temperance poem, and in the same issue announced the determination of the political faction with which it is connected to return to the legislature, if possible, Mr. James Harris, who lined up with the Baltimore City liquor ring in defiance of the wishes of his constituents and to the great grief of his old father who, as a former representative of that county, had voted right.—American Issue, June 21, 1913.

HOWARD TURNER

A Word of Tribute to Mr. Turner, Candidate of the People in the Coming Democratic Primaries.

The Transcript seems to have a very wholesome respect for the candidacy of Mr. Howard Turner, who, at the solicitation of a large number of Democrats of Kent county, is a candidate for the House of Delegates. The notice given him in the Transcript, together with that of the KENT NEWS, had the effect of impressing the Democratic voters all over the county that this man (so well qualified to represent the county in the Maryland Legislature) is to be reckoned with.

The charge that Mr. Turner is not a full-fledged Democrat is so well known to be grossly false and is so plainly made for a purpose, that even a newspaper with a large circulation cannot head off the drift of the voters to Mr. Turner.

The writer har known Mr. Turner since he became of age, when he cast his first vote for the Democratic ticket. His friends and acquaintances throughout Kent county have always known him as a Democrat and the Transcript knows full well that he is—as intimately associated with the Transcript as he has been. During the years the Transcript was struggling for circulation and friends were needed, Mr. Turner was one of the young men of the county who hung up his coat in the Transcript office and asked his friends and acquaintances in the county to support the paper. Ask C. Cox Hopper and R. Harrison Collins what he did. They can best answer the question. And as to his Democracy, it was never questioned before. There have been but few Anti-Organization men running for office in the county who have not asked his aid. Ask Walter Hadaway, G. E. Noland, Harry Davis, W. J. Tarbutton, T. Ben. Crew, Jas. C. Harris and others. And there has never been an Anti-Organization ticket fully or partly nominated in Kent county which did not receive Mr. Turner's support in the election.

Mr. Turner has represented his district in the Democratic conventions in Chestertown, has been named as vice-president at some of the large Democratic meetings, has entertained prominent Democrats of the State when running for office—among them ex-Gov. Warfield—and in every way has been actively Democratic in his home neighborhood. Everybody who cares to find out can easily ascertain these facts in Mr. Turner's home district. Then what is the motive of the Transcript's attacks? Do they fear Mr. Turner as a candidate? They have good reason to, because the people of Kent county are back of him. He is a candidate of the people and all the attacks of the Transcript are futile because the people will seek the truth and the Democrats of Kent county will demand and give fair play to a man who is esteemed as a high type of citizen by the people who both know him personally and who know him by reputation.

Mr. Turner is a factor in this campaign, and the Democrats of the county are going to nominate him.

THIRD DISTRICT DEMOCRAT.

CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

If there is some one around with an inventive turn of mind kindly hear the plea of a hundred hard-working farm women!

We want an invention that will take up the lost time, lost patience, lost motion and lost energy which we are compelled to waste on the telephone. If the same amount of strength were used in some way, we could grind our coffee, do our washing and ironing and run a player-piano while we stand and try to "grind up" central. If a vote in the county were taken and all men and women gave their unbiased opinion of the telephone system we have in the rural districts, I am afraid it would not be fit for publication. Why he is so hard to wake up? I don't know. Why so hard to get after he is waked up? I don't know. Why the same thing happened on this line the following day and many other days to many other fools? I don't know. Does anybody?

I have retired from the hotel business and will give my whole attention to the UNDERTAKING WORK. Satisfaction guaranteed.

J. E. FERGUSON,

Wilmington, Del.

Monday was Resurrection Day for Wilmington, Delaware. The Chamber of Commerce evidenced this fact by inviting all the editors of the Peninsula to come to Wilmington and see what they had worth seeing. We went and certainly was surprised at the beauty of the parks, the luxuriousness of the homes, the hospitality of the people and the splendor of the DuPont Hotel.

We were met at French street station by a reception committee of Wilmington newspaper men, and were taken to the Hotel DuPont in automobiles. There we were turned over to the tender mercies of another committee of newspaper men, who passed us on, after introduction all around, to Manager Ernest S. Taite, of the Hotel Dupont, who with his assistant, Mr. Bullwinkle, and the hotel staff were only too eager to do all they could for our entertainment. We were presented with a badge with the words "Guests of the Chamber of Commerce" and a key to the city. The badge meant that everything was free.

We were greatly interested in the beauties of the new hotel, and inspected it from the grill room to the roof garden. It is one of the most wonderful strides Wilmington has made and will do much to help in the general advancement of the city. Wilmington newspaper men, John S. Hamilton, publicity manager; Robert M. Pindell, manager, George H. McGovern, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; W. F. Metten, Geo. Carter, J. S. Mullin, Frank Davis and others greeted us at the hotel.

At 7.30 o'clock a dinner, which will go down into history, was served to 35 editors and over 100 members of the Chamber of Commerce. Recognition of newspaperdom was manifest at the first glimpse within the dining room. About the walls were shields of red, white and blue, across the front of each shield being emblazoned the name of a newspaper, the headline of the newspaper being reproduced as far as possible. There were fifty of these shields, surely a novel decorative idea, in which everybody manifested keen interest. At the tables, too, the newspaper theme was kept paramount. At the place of each diner was a wrapper not unlike those in which some newspapers are mailed, and on being opened the wrapper was found to contain a copy of the Peninsula Press, published by the Chamber of Commerce, with the names of the officers of that organization at the top of the editorial column and with John S. Hamilton as editor. The front page of the Peninsular Press contained reproductions of the headings of practically every newspaper on the Peninsula. Throughout, the Peninsular Press contained extracts from local newspapers about the dinner to the editors and publishers, and the menu also was inset as if in a torn section of a page.

Aside from sprigs of ferns at the guest table, there was no other attempt at decoration, the beautiful dining room of itself being sufficient.

Seated at a long table were Judge George Gray, who was toastmaster; Joshua Marvel, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Governor Charles R. Miller, Mayor Harrison W. Howell, Congressman Franklin Brockson, and officers of the Chamber of Commerce and some of the speakers. The other diners gathered about smaller tables, forming their own parties. We were seated at a table with J. S. Mullin, who has made Wilmington famous on this Peninsula, and his right-hand man, Frank Davis, Joshua Conner, Wm. C. Mairgatroyd, Wm. Beadenkoff, O. L. Vincent and our cotemporary. The Rev. Dr. Rushbridge, of Delaware City, a clergyman-editor, made the invocation. The menu, typical of what the Delmarvia Peninsula produces, was as follows:

(To be concluded next week.)

Mr. Frank H. Ruth, of Galena, was the poet of this occasion; his most excellent production will appear in the NEWS next week. He was the guest of honor at the banquet being the first to enter the dining room and his production was favorably received.

To The School Trustees and Teachers of Kent County, Maryland.

On the third day of June, 1913, the Board of County School Commissioners through Professor Jefferson L. Smyth, Superintendent of the schools for Kent county, submitted at their request, to the Board of County Commissioners, Messrs. Wood, Crew, Melvin and Nichols being present, a statement showing the following facts:

That under the first year of Supt. Smyth's administration of the school affairs of Kent county the expenses were less than the previous year.

That notwithstanding this economical administration, a considerable deficit for the year will exist and the probable expenses of the following year will still further increase this deficit.

That to maintain the schools at the present standard of efficiency the County Commissioners were asked to appropriate the sum of $5000. This request the said County Commissioners have ignored.

Therefore the School Trustees and Teachers of Kent County are hereby notified that the school term and salaries of teachers for the following school year are dependent upon the action of the County Commissioners in furnishing the funds to meet this deficiency and that all contracts for service as school teachers in Kent County must be made with this understanding.

By order of the Board of School Commissioners,
