THE SECOND DECADE OF A WANDERING BOY

[Written especially for the KENT NEWS.]

Now Gen. Taylor was stationed on Nuses River the dividing line between Texas and Mexico as it was said then. Gen. Taylor was ordered to the Rio Grande near Port Isabelle opposite Matioros. Our soldiers got ready to go. Col. Watson and Major Ringgold loaded their troops a beautiful Sunday in May. Of the officers that went Maj. Ringgold, Col. Watson, Col. Sam Mills and Capt. Rigby. Maj. Ringgold was killed at Palalto. Col. Watson was killed in the streets of Monterey. Capt. Ridgly was killed at Buena Vista. Col. Sam Mills got back to Baltimore alive, and frequently came to Kent county. If I read right Gen. Taylor was a great man, and would have gone to Mexico if the government had backed him very much quicker than Gen. Scott, if he had not been headed off by the politicians of the country for fear that his popularity would make him a formidable candidate for the highest office in the gift of the people of our country. He was the father-in-law of Jefferson Davis and they had not spoken for years until the battle of Buena Vista when the old General congratulated him for his bravery.

We had another regiment raised in Maryland by Gen. Hughes of Southern Maryland, who I think went by steamer to Vera Cruz to join General Scott. I have never heard of but one man from Kent county going to the Mexican War. His name was John Miller and a relative of Eben Blackiston's who lived near Still Pond. The cars were hauled in the old Bolton depot and the old President street depot by horses. I did not go to Sunday school or church because I had not the one thing needful to go. On Sunday sometimes I went over to Federal Hill, where I knew two families, and how I knew them the son of one of them went over to work for my father when I was a little boy and finally he brought his mother over; this same young man afterwards moved to Rock Hall and died there a well thought of and well-respected citizen, and some of his descendents live there yet and are good people. Their property laid next to the valley as you go to the fort and from that valley to the fort there were but few houses and a commons. It is where Maj. Ringgold used to drill his artillery. I was out there one day and was struck by the appearance of a fine looking man riding in a chase and they told me it was Dr. Roberts who was one of the physicians who went to the fort to attend the soldiers. Daniel Haines came over to Baltimore and came to see me and said whenever I could arrange it to come back as he knew that my friends in the county were very much opposed to my being where I was. The man I was with treated me as well as he could; he had an interesting family but that demon, the destroyer of mankind, had firmly encircled him. My guardian came over, happened to find him in very bad condition and took me away. I happened to be in Baltimore a few years afterward and went up to his place, hoping to find him in better condition than I left him. He knew me but his condition was fearful, a man not fifty years old, gray headed, and looked as if he had the dropsy; not long afterwards he went the way of all flesh. Now this fine looking doctor I speak of, Dr. Roberts, in after years I got acquainted with; his son practiced medicine at Cecilton a number of years.

I have now got back to the neighborhood of Still Pond, going to school and walking 8 miles a day, and not long to stay. Now our new doctor is getting all the practice, that great and venerable man, Dr. Kennard, who might say is the greatest agriculturist in the county, who after many years of toil and practice has gladly given it up to attend to his estate. Our young doctor married the youngest daughter of Benj. Price, the older, who was one of the most prominent citizens of his day. Our young doctor was raised in Lancaster County, Pa., of one of the best families in that County. He had relatives in Harford and Cecil counties the Magraws and the Stumps; he was a God-loving and God-fearing man, perhaps never lived among us a more true-hearted and benevolent citizen, his hands being always open to help the needy, and with his daily practice whether the patient was able to pay him or not he attended him; his companion whom I knew from my early boyhood, was generous and kind to everybody and a christian lady. She was a sister to that great and good man Rev. Benj F. Price. He left a son who use to practice with him; he and his father attended our family for forty years or more. The son stands at the head of his profession beyond denial, his generosity and kindness to the people, his sympathy and help in time of trouble no one recollects better than myself.

My dear companion whom he attended for over thirty years, always loved and respected him as I do, and always in her bad spells used to take his advice; when he came he did not treat her as a patient but as a mother. His companion whom I have known since she was a little girl, a good and noble hearted woman, my uncle married her aunt, he who was the greatest friend I had on earth. My uncle had a sister, whose husband was a good and true man and a Christian and I loved them as much as I loved myself; may I never forget them.

Now we have a post office at Still Pond; the feeling of the north was slowly coming down to our good peope. A forerunner of the irrepressible conflict was approaching. The New York Tribune was circulated freely, free love, literature with its abomination was sent to our office and that infamous book called "Danger in the Dark," was circulated among the people, and that book, the greatest of all books, was greatly discarded. With all of this came jealousy, envy and strife to a people who had lived in prosperity in the fear of their Creator for years.

LIFE.

FOUNDED ON SPECULATION.

Crumpton is the only town in Queen Annes county, the founding of which was the direct result of Wall street speculation. The town was laid out by Maurice Welch and Joseph Sheppard, and theirs were the first two families that established homes there. After buying the land which is now the site of Crumpton from Michael Newbold, they laid out the lots and placed them on sale in Wall street, New York. The heaviest investor was Jeremiah Councler, who again sold them to individual buyers.

For many years the fish industry engaged the majority of Crumpton's inhabitants, but as there were no restrictions placed by law, the fishermen abused their privileges and as a result the industry today is only one-fourth as extensive.

H. B. Slaughter, of Crumpton, was the founder and sole owner of the Chester River Steamboat Company in 1800. The first steamer of that company was "The Arrow," which was built at Crumpton.
