DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. LeClear's Health—Her Own Statement.

Detroit, Mich.—"I am glad to discover a remedy that relieves me from my suffering and pains. For two years I suffered bearing down pains and got all run down. I was under a nervous strain and could not sleep at night. I went to doctors here in the city but they did not do me any good.

"Seeing Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised, I tried it. My health improved wonderfully and I am now quite well again. No woman suffering from female ills will regret it if she takes this medicine."—Mrs. JAMES G. LECLEAR, 336 Hunt St., Detroit, Mich.

Another Case.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is all you claim it to be. About two or three days before my periods I would get bad backaches, then pains in right and left sides, and my head would ache. I called the doctor and he said I had organic inflammation. I went to him for a while but did not get well so I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking two bottles I was relieved and finally my troubles left me. I married and have two little girls. I have had no return of the old troubles."—Mrs. CHAS. BOELL, 2650 S. Chadwick St., Phila., Pa.

PUZZLING ECHOES.

The Riddle of the Gardens of Aux Rochers In France.

MYSTICAL TRICKS OF SOUND.

A Spot Where an Almost Inaudible Whisper Becomes Curiously Transformed Into Thousands of Hissing Responses—Other Famous Echoes.

Some echoes in their mystic character would seem to approach the domain of psychic phenomena, which are eliciting so much and such puzzled attention. One of these ghostly tricks of sound is to be found in the gardens of Aux Rochers in France, which was once the residence of Mme. de Sevigne. The chateau is situated near the old town of Vitre. A broad gravel walk on a dead level conducts through the gardens to the house. In the center of this, on a particular spot, the listener is placed at the distance of ten or twelve yards from another person, who addresses him in a low and almost inaudible whisper, when immediately, as from tens of thousands of invisible tongues, starting from the earth beneath, or as if every pebble was gifted with powers of speech, the words are repeated with a slight hissing sound, not unlike the whirling of small shot through the air. On removing from this spot, however trifling the distance, the intensity of the repetition is sensibly diminished and within a few feet ceases to be heard. Under the impression that the ground beneath was hollow the soil was recently dug up to a considerable depth, but without discovering any clew to the mystery.

Although the weird echoes of statuary hall in the capitol at Washington have been somewhat subdued since the structural modifications of the roof, they still haunt the chamber which was once the house of representatives. The capitol guides used to take great pride in the mysterious echoes of statuary hall, and they deplore their partial elimination. It will be recalled by many that there is a flagstone in the floor of the hall marked by a small black hole about as large as an umbrella end, on which, if a person stood and uttered a word, he heard a repetition of his voice proceeding apparently from the basement of the building just below him. An appreciable interval elapsed between the utterance of the sound and its echo, a circumstance that rendered the effect almost uncanny. To laugh was to prove a mocking rejoinder, and many persons, say the guides, were persuaded that a trick was being played on them. The same effect was noticeable on that part of the floor adjacent to the flagstone mentioned, but the farther away from the latter the less distinct became the echo until, at a certain distance, it was not perceptible at all.

Some of the most curious and beautiful echoes in the world are to be heard in the Luray caverns, which are only a few hours' journey from Washington. Numerous of the huge stalagmites here, when only gently struck give forth tones that in some instances resemble the chiming of great, sweet toned bells or a long melodic note like that of a church organ. A famous violinist is said, when visiting Washington, to have journeyed to Luray in order to test the effect of the playing of his instrument amid the singular acoustic surroundings. The tones of the violin are described as having been wonderfully enhanced both in sweetness and in volume.

Among the wonderful rock formations of the far west, notably in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, are said to lurk many marvelous echoes. The same is true of the great Niagara gorge, and, though few are aware of the fact, it is said that any one journeying to the falls and taking in the gorge—a superb piece of natural scenery in itself—will be well rewarded by stopping at Inspiration Point, walking forward to the edge of the cliff and here waiting until the first train, on nearing the level crossing, blows its whistle. The sound is caught up by multitudinous echoes until one would fancy that it was resounding through the universe.

One of the most famous echoes is to be heard in Woodstock park, Oxfordshire, England, which is said to repeat seventeen syllables by day and twenty by night. Although this statement is to be found in various standard textbooks and treatises on the subject, it has lately been contradicted by an investigator, who remarks, however, that the diminution of this classic echo is probably due to the removal of various buildings in its neighborhood.

A most striking interior echo is a feature of the Mormon tabernacle in Salt Lake City. When this hall is empty and quiet the ring of a pin falling on the floor can be heard from all points, and even the faint, rasping sound produced by rubbing the hands together is perfectly audible from one end of the building to the other.

In the cathedral of Girgenti, in Sicily, the slightest whisper is borne with perfect distinctness from the region of the great door to a location in the upper part of the church about 250 feet distant.

Although acoustics would seem to account satisfactorily for many echoes, there yet remains much that is mysterious and baffling concerning them.—F. V. Collins in Chicago Record-Herald.

Be as glad as you can. The merry heart lives longer than the sad.—Florida Times-Union.

Backing Up the Purchaser

IF we didn't have an eye to the future, and if we didn't care what you or anybody else was going to think of us, we could sell engines and other machines for much less money, but we could not put I H C quality into them. The kicks would start coming in right away, and soon there would be no market for I H C engines.

I H C engines stand for everything that is opposed to such a policy. The I H C way is to build always for the respect and good will of the American farmer, and to that end it has been successfully working for many years. The dealer who sells you an I H C engine expects on its merits to do business with you again. The purchaser of an buys security and safety with it. He banks on the many years of square dealing and the reputation back of all I H C machines. He knows it is the best engine bargain because it gives him efficient service in all kinds of farm work—pumping, sawing wood, spraying, running repair shop, grindstone, cream separator, etc. He knows that I H C responsibility for it lasts as long as the engine is in service on his farm.

I H C oil and gas engines operate on gas, gasoline, naphtha, kerosene, distillate, and alcohol. Sizes range from 1 to 50-horse power. They are built vertical, horizontal, portable, stationary, skidded, air-cooled and water-cooled. I H C oil tractors range in size from 6-12 to 30-60-horse power, for plowing, threshing, etc.

Look over an I H C engine at the local dealer's. Learn from him what it will do for you, or write for catalogues to
