FARMERS' CLUB HOLDS NEIGHBORHOOD SHORT COURSE.

Value Of Lime And Legumes In Building Up The Soil Is Discussed.

The Progressive Farmers' Club of Prince Georges County held a most successful neighborhood short course at T. B., March 16-20, the subjects being "Farm Crops" and "Poultry Husbandry." This was the last of a series of such courses which the Extension Service of the Agricultural College has held in a number of neighborhoods this winter in co-operation with local farm organizations such as Granges and clubs. It has enabled many to have the benefit of teaching that the Agricultural College has never before brought directly to them.

Those attending the sessions of the short course were members of the club and their families, as the women folks as well as the men are enthusiastic in their attendance at the lectures. Demonstrations were given in selecting eggs for market, operating an incubator, mixing poultry rations, testing soil for acidity, judging seed corn, and in comparing different kinds of lime. Especial interest was taken in what Prof. W. T. L. Taliaferro, of the Agricultural College, had to say of the value of legume crops and lime in building up the soil for better production.

He said in part: "Nothing will help more in building up the yielding power of the soil than the use of legume crops, such as the clovers, alfalfa, cow peas, vetch and soy beans. These can be used for turning in as green crops or in growing a heavy sod as the case may be which fills the soil with humus and nitrogen plant food. It is not economy to buy commercial nitrogen at 15 to 20 cents a pound when the same results can be gotten by the use of legume crops, at the same time improving the moisture-holding power of the soil. Any of these crops can be easily grown on our Maryland soils, and with frequent applications of lime will give most of the plant food that our farm crops require.

The mistake, however, is often made of using too light an application. Not less than a ton of burned lime or two tons of ground lime stone or oyster shells should be used per acre. Such an application as this need not be given oftener than every once in five or six years so that the cost for lime would not be more than 50 to 60 cents an acre per year.

"In buying lime it has been found that if pure burned lime costs $2.75 per ton at the kiln, then hydrated lime or slacked lime should be $2.10 and ground limestone $1.50 per ton. What kind you should use depends entirely upon its quality, price, and the distance it can be hauled to advantage."

DO YOUR HENS LAY IN WINTER?

ROY H. WAITE,
Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

When eggs are high in price, during the winter, do your hens lay? If they do, wouldn't you like to be able to sell most of them? If they don't, wouldn't you like to have eggs to use without paying a high price for them? You can keep the eggs laid by your hens in the spring, when eggs are cheap, until winter if you wish. Of course, these eggs cannot be sold as fresh egs, but you can use them yourself, for they are perfectly good for cooking purposes. Then you can sell the fresh eggs at the advanced prices.

The best method of keeping eggs is by cold-storage, but this is not available to most poultry raisers. There is a method, however, that can be used by anyone—the waterglass method. The directions are as follows: Make up a solution using one part, by measure, of waterglass (sodium silicate) and nine parts of ordinary water which has been boiled and allowed to cool. An earthenware jar is usually considered best to keep the solution in. The eggs are put into the solution in as fresh a condition as possible.

It is best, where possible, to put the eggs in the day they are laid. It is also better to have them clean so that washing is unnecessary. They will also keep longer if they are sterile; no male birds running with the flock. Keep at least two inches of the fluid above the eggs, cover the receptacle to prevent evaporation and store in a cool place. Waterglass can be obtained either as a liquid or dry powder. The powdered preservative was put on the market the past year.

TOPDRESSING WHEAT WITH COMMERCIAL FERTILIZER IN SPRING.

Where the soil is rather poor and deficient in nitrogen it will usually pay in a normal season to topdress wheat in the spring with 75 or 100 pounds of nitrate of soda and the same amount of acid rock per acre. If the soil is fertile so that there is no question of a good growth of straw being produced in a normal season, it is not worth while to fertilize. The fertilizer should be applied early in the season, the first part of April, in order that the early spring rains may dissolve it and carry it down to the roots, where it must go before it can be utilized by the plant.
