May 29, 1852.

Baltimore, May 24, 1852.

Having this day associated ourselves in the Grocery and Commission business, under the firm of Coleman & Richardson, we take this method of informing our friends in the country, that our intentions are to sell at the lowest cash prices, Groceries of all kinds and of the best qualities. Also, a Commission and Produce Store, for the benefit of Farmers residing on the Eastern and Western Shores; so that produce of all kinds may be consigned to us with safety, and the proceeds remitted promptly as ordered by Captains of vessels, or owners of produce may require. We intend charging a small commission on all marketing, so that the Farmers will get more for their produce than they have been getting heretofore.

We shall also pay strict attention to the sale of Tobacco, Grain and Country Produce generally, also the purchasing of Clover Seed, Plaster Guano, Lime Coal, Bone Dust, Ashes, &c., and we respectful solicit your consignments or Orders, assuring all that no effort shall be spared on our part to give entire satisfaction.

F. E. FOREMAN,
PRODUCE & COMMISSION MERCHANT
BALTIMORE.

THE undersigned begs leave to inform his friends and the public, that he is still at the old stand No. 93½ Light st. Wharf, opposite the wharf of the steamers Hugh Jenkins and Osiris, and within a few yards of the wharfs of the steamers Champion, Cecil and Dupont, being the most central place for an Eastern Shore Depot for trade and business of all kinds, and to travelling community that can be found; and where the undersigned has succeeded in building up a market for all kinds of trade that the farmers of the Eastern Shore may send to our market, and from his promptness and business capacity he flatters himself to be able to please all who will patronize him.

He will sell grain of all kinds—Fruit, such as Peaches, Apples, Plums, &c.—Potatoes will receive his special attention and all kinds of produce will be made to bring the highest market prices. He will also fill all orders for merchants or farmers, (accompanying the cash) with despatch, for Groceries, Lumber, Lime, Plaster, Bacon, Flour, Guano, Clover seed, &c., &c. at the lowest price. He wishes the public to bear in mind that having five years experience in the active part of the above business, that their property has not been, nor shall be sacrificed, if consigned to me, and that prompt sale and honest returns will invariably be made, as heretofore, that he has [illegible] found on the wharf, to store whatever may be ordered, and at the same time keep as much goods constantly on hand in this city; and it is well known that I have labored hard to build up a house, yes the house for the interest of trade, and by so doing, Produce has acquired a notoriety not before possessed, and the interest of farmers has been promoted. I therefore solicit the patronage of a generous public.

The public's obedient servant,

F E FOREMAN.

The Tomb of a Friend.

BY MINNA.

O! plant the fairest flowers upon that sacred spot,
The lily white and roses, with the sweet forget-me-not;
And let the trailing arbutus its tendrils soft entwine
Around the bright carnation and the blushing eglantine.

There let the passion flowers spread o'er the velvet sod,
Whose cross upon its bosom proclaims the love of God;
And plant the modest violet with [illegible] blue,
The emblem of a faithful heart constant sincere and true.

Then bloom ye there sweet flowers, bloom 'round that sacred tomb,
And breathe upon his lowly bed your soft and rich perfume;
While in the shades of evening ye drink the purely dew,
Then bow your blushing heads and drop for me a tear or two.

I would no source of merriment break on the silence deep,
Where one so dear, so much beloved, in death's embraces sleep;
None but the murmuring river with its crystal stream roll by;
And the low winds of heaven to breathe a plaintive sigh.

Tread lightly! O ye visiters! upon that hallowed ground,
Nor with unholy steps pollute that lowly sacred mound;
Pull not a little flower that grows upon the sod,
But let it bloom and fade like him who lies beneath the clod;

And sweetly sleep departed one, on death's cold bosom sleep;
While stars, like eyes of heaven, their nightly virgils keep;
Thy sorrows now are o'er and soft repose is given
Unto thy wearied body while thy soul exults in heaven.

Adieu 'till life has ended, we then shall meet again,
Where death nor separation can ever more give pain:
With this blest anticipation, I bow beneath the rod,
And own that a deserve this chastisement from my God;

☞An old joker, who never yielded the palm to any one in relating a knotty yarn, was put to his trumps a hearing a traveller state, that he once saw a brick house placed upon runners and drawn up a hill to a more favorable position some half a mile distant. "What do you think of that Uncle Ethiel?" said the bystanders. "O, fudge," said the old man, "I once saw a two story house down east drawn by oxen three miles." A dead silence ensued; the old man evidently had the worst of it, and he saw it. Gathering all his energies, he bit off a huge bit of pigtail by way of gaining time for thought: "they drawed the stone house," said the old man—(ejecting a quantity of tobacco juice towards the fireplace) "but that warn't the worst of the joe; arter they had done that they went back and drawed the cellar." The stranger gave up.

A ROUND BILL.—Tom presented his bill to his neighbor Joe, for service rendered, the latter looked it over and expressed much surprise at the amount.

"Why, Tom, it strikes me you have made out a pretty round bill here eh?"

"I am sensible its a round one," quoth Tom, "and I have come for the purpose of getting it squared!"

SHORT DRAMA IN TWO SCENES.—First Scene.—Millionaire seated in an easy chair. By him stands a poor man in a supplicating attitude.

Millionaire—"Ahem!—Very sorry, my young friend, that I can do nothing for you; but I will give you a word of good advice—"Economize!"

Poor Man—But when a man has nothing to—"

Millionaire—"Non-sense!—Under certain circumstances a man must know how to save."

Second Scene—The millionaire drowning in a pond, the poor man calmly regarding him from the shore.

Poor Man—"Sorry my friend that I can do nothing for you; but I can give you a word of good advice—Swim!"

"Millionaire—(choking)—"Bub-bub-bub wh-when a ma-man can't swim!"

Poor Man—"Nonsense!—Under certain circumstances a man must know how to swim."—Union Magazine.

THE UGLY FAMILY.—In one of the lower districts of the Palmetto State, there once lived a family of some six or seven persons, who were known far and wide as the 'Ugly Family." One of them, Jake, was so "onspeakably" hard favored, that it made one feel as if he had bitten a green persimmon to look at him, and whenever he walked through the streets, the dogs slung their tails and sneaked off, too scared to bark.

The fame of this family spread through the country, and at last reached the ears of a Georgian who, for a long time; had held undisputed possession of the celebrated penknife. The individual at length determined to pay a visit to the ugly family, and endeavor to dispose of the aforesaid knife; so, one morning he crosssed the Savannah. About noon, he saw a wagon ahead, and rode up to inquire the where-about of "the family."

"Hello, stranger!" said he to a man walking by the side of the wagon.

"Hello, yourself!" exclaimed the wagoner, turning around and disclosing a countenance so tremendously plain that the Georgian almost dropped from his horse.

"I say, said the Georgian, recovering, a little from the astonishment, "are you not Ugly Jake himself?"

The wagoner shook his head, and grinned a ghastly smile," that made him look like the nightmare personified.

"I'll bet you ten dollars that you are the ugliest man in the State," said the Georgian.

"Done!" said the wagoner; "come here." And going to the back of the wagon, he called out," Wake up, Jake, and put your head out here."

The Georgian, burning with curiosity, leaned forward as the cover was raised slowly up. Suddenly his eyes fell upon a physiognomy so awfully, boundlessly, overpoweringly ugly that it seemed to be formed out of the double extract of delirum tremens.

The horse snorted and started back in fright threw his rider over his head, but the latter had scarcely touched the ground, before he was mounted again. Throwing down the ten dollars and his penknife; without saying a word, he struck a bee line for the Savannah, looking alternately over each shoulder, as long as the wagon remained in sight.

A YOUNG GOOSE.—A market girl sold a gentleman a fine fat goose, warranting it to be young. It turned out, when roasted, to be unmanageably tough.—The next day the gentleman said to the market girl—

"That goose which you sold me for a young one was very old"

"Certainly not," said the girl; "don't you call me young?"

"Yes."

"Well, I am but nineteen, and I heard mother say often that that goose was six weeks younger than me.

An English tombstone bears the following inscription:—'Sacred to the remains of Jonathan Thompson, a pious Christian, and an affectionate husband. His disconsolate widow continues to carry on the tripe and butter business at the same place as before the bereavment.

"I require," said a sage of the tribe of Penobscot, "but three things to make me happy." "What is the first?" inquired a searcher of wisdom. "Tobacco" was the reply. "What is the second?" "Rum" "Well, what is the third?" "Why" said the philosopher, "a little more rum!"

"Go it Bobtail, he's gaining on you." is now rendered, or ought to be—"Go it Robert's extremity, the gentleman in the rear is approximating to an inconvenient vicissitude of the longitudinal appendage which subsends the lower extension of your caudel elongation.

A person being asked the other day whether he was in favor of the Maine liquor law, replied, 'Partly—I go for the liquor—barring the law."

"I feel for you," as the pickpocket's fingers said to his neighbor's watch.
