WHAT 1,000,000 MEN UNDER ARMS MEANS

Vast Quantities Of Things An Army Must Have In Case Of War

LINE 400 MILES LONG

What does an army of 1,000,000 mean? One million men marching four abreast would extend over a line 400 miles long, practically from Kansas City to the Colorado border. Some of the things that these 1,000,000 men must be provided with before they can fight are:

Seven hundred and fifty thousand bayonets for them to fight with.

Two hundred and sixty-five thousand pistols, little brothers of the rifle.

Eight thousand machine guns, the military scythe.

Two thousand one hundred field guns to batter down attack.

One hundred and sixty-five million cartridges to carry them into their first fight, and as many more for each succeeding fight.

Two million five hundred thousand shells and shrapnel for our field guns for every hour they are in action.

One hundred and ninety-six thousand horses to carry them and pull their carriages.

One hundred and twenty-seven thousand mules to haul their supplies and pack there guns.

Eight thousand wagons to transport their supplies and ammunition.

One million cartridge belts for their ammunition.

One million first-aid packets to bind up their wounds.

One million pouches to keep them dry.

One million canteens.

Each of them must have uniform and equipment.

One million shelter halves to protect them from the weather.

Two million blankets to keep them warm.

Two million pairs of shoes.

Two million uniform coats, breeches, leggings, suits of underwear.

One million hats.

Two million shirts.

Four million pairs of socks.

One million haversacks.

Finally they must eat:

One million pounds of meat each day.

One million pounds of bread each day

Two million pounds of vegetables each day.

Three million pints of coffee or tea each day.

All this must be purchased, transported, prepared and cooked each day, and to eat it they must have:

One million cups

One million plates.

One million knives.

One million forks.

One million spoons.

To provide for proper care, training and lead in battle they should have:

Twenty-five thousand trained officers.

The calling into service of 1,000,000 men would mean the organization, equipping and training of 10 armies the size of the complete regular army of the present time. If 1,000,000 men should apply at the recruiting officers it would require the uninterrupted effort of 1,000 recruiting parties working day and night for more than 10 days to enroll and enlist them. It would require a week to move them to camps, provided all the suitable railroad equipment of the country were given over to this work alone.

One thousand men would have to work day and night for 10 days to erect the tents for them, and when completed this camp would amount to a city of 8,000 acres, an area equal to the size of St. Joseph.

A Question on Behalf of

W. CABELL BRUCE

Democratic Candidate for United States Senate

Is such a Senatorial candidate as David J. Lewis in touch with the temper of the time? In the light of the ruthless spirit of rapacity and carnage now raging in Europe, the perilous diplomatic negotiations in which we are involved, and the innocent blood just drawn from the veins of our people on our own soil by Mexican anarchy, OUR PARAMOUNT NEED AT THIS HOUR IS FOR AN ARMY AND NAVY UNQUESTIONABLY STRONG ENOUGH TO MAINTAIN OUR HONOR AND SELF-RESPECT, REPEL INVASION, SAFEGUARD OUR PROPERTY AND HOMES, AND PRESERVE INVIOLATE OUR PRICELESS LIBERTIES.

For some calmer and less dangerous moment, to say the least, should be reserved such questions as to whether the Government should take over the ownership of the telephone system of the country at a cost of one billion dollars, or extend the weight limit of the parcels post to such an extent as to be driven to the necessity of either organizing a system of its own for the transportation of freight, or of taking over the ownership of the present railroad system of the country, too, at a cost of fifteen billion dollars or more.

HIS RECORD IN RELATION TO OUR NAVY.

Our Naval Board, consisting of some of the ablest men in our Navy Department, adopted in 1903 a wise program, providing for the construction of two battleships a year until 1919 It is due to the group of Congressmen known as the "LITTLE NAVY GROUP," of which Mr. Lewis has been a consistent member, that this program is now ten battleships short.

When the question was whether we should build two battleships or one, he voted "ONE"; when the question was whether we should build one battleship or none, he voted "NONE."

Witness the Congressional Record (1912, May 28, p. 7355; Aug. 17, p. 1189; Aug 20, p. 11391; 1913 Feb. 26, p. 4107; Mar 3, p. 4810; 1915, Feb 5, p. 3152).

The vagaries of pacificism assume many inane and fantastic forms, but their broad range has been illustrated anew by the fact that since the beginning of the present all but world-wide war, and even since he announced himself as a candidate for the United States Senate a few months ago, Mr. Lewis has repeatedly and gravely suggested as a practical and rational plan for the exclusion of war from the universe a scheme of International Government, under which all the great empires and republics of the earth including Germany, Russia, Great Britain, France, Italy, Austria, Turkey and the United States, would voluntarily come together as a single federal society with a written constitution almost exactly like our own "With the elimination of about 100 words from its clauses, and about 50 words added here and there our Federal Constitution," he says, "would serve to unify the nations and bring them the same peace and orderly progression and security it has given our own formerly sovereign States."

"There are celestial minds to which stepping off a log and jumping over the moon are tasks of equal facility. Following up the remarks just quoted, Mr Lewis adds: "The pride of kings—would that deter some of the great powers? In Austria, Italy, Russia, Germany, before the war, perhaps yea. An authority and jurisdiction above or broader than their own they might have resented, but fearfully chastened by their present experience, I think it reasonable to hope than any such personal vanity has disappeared." So infatuated was Mr. Lewis with his colossal conception that recurring to it when announcing his present candidacy, he said: "There is an exigency much larger than military preparation." To his project might be aptly applied the words of Banquo, in "Macbeth":

"The earth hath bubbles as the water has,
And these are of them."

In federal companionship with such dangerous associates as the great European powers which are now slaughtering each other, it is to be feared that a wealthy, unarmed country like the United States would be in very much the same situation as the lamb that the late P. T. Barnum, of circus fame, kept penned up with a lion, a tiger, a wolf and a bear.

"How long have these animals dwelt together in this way?" Barnum was asked by a curious patron.

"Eight months," he replied, "but the lamb has to be renewed occasionally."
