WATER SUPPLY FOR THE COUNTRY HOME

Necessity Of a Good Water Supply And Points To Be Considered In Selecting The Source.

T. H. TALIAFERRO,
Maryland Agricultural College.

In view of the fact that pure water in abundance is a necessity in the country home, it is of interest to consider in a general way the sources of water supply and the methods of rendering it available for use.

A plentiful supply of pure water adds, not only to the comfort of the home, but to the health of the members of the family. It tends to make the home more attractive, not only to the adults, but to the children. In so far as it accomplishes this fact, it has a marked tendency in keeping the young people in the country, since, in many instances, they go to the city to escape what they term the discomforts of country life.

Sources Of Supply.

Water may be obtained from streams, lakes, ponds, springs, and wells. Rain water is collected from the roofs of buildings. Health demands that water for home use must be free from hurtful germs. Therefore, it should be tested at intervals to determine its condition as to purity.

Streams, lakes and ponds are formed by springs and the drainage from the surrounding country. When the water supply is obtained from such a source, this watershed should be carefully examined to see that no center for pollution exists.

A spring should be cleaned out and surface water drained away from it, unless it is definitely known that such water seeps through a sufficient depth of soil to filter out any impurities. Hog pens and privies should never be placed above a spring.

Rain water should never be stored until after sufficient rain has fallen to cleanse thoroughly the roofs and gutters.

Locating A Well.

A well, particularly a shallow well, should be constructed [illegible], on ground higher than the house site, barnyard, cesspool, etc., so that the drainage would be away from it. It is, however, seldom possible to select such a position for the well, but it is possible to locate the well from forty to fifty yards from any source of pollution whatsoever; and considerations of health demand that it should be done. At this distance, any drainage water seeping through the soil should be sufficiently filtered before reaching the well. This is not, however, always true, even at this distance.

The necessity for thorough filtration of the surface water before it reaches the source of water supply is a strong argument in favor of using deep wells in preference to shallow ones. Further, the water from a deep well is usually cooler and more palatable.

SECURE THE CLEANEST MILK

Barns Should Be Kept Unpolluted and Yards Free From Manure and Litter of All Kinds.

These rules are given for the cleanest milk obtainable with only little more than ordinary care: Barns should be kept clean and well ventilated, the yards free from manure and litter and drained so that no water will stand there. Before milking, the cows should be brushed around the flanks and udder with a stiff brush; this should be followed with a damp cloth which will remove many of the dust particles and so dampen the others that they will stick to the cow during the process of milking. The milker should keep his hands dry during the milking. Milking with damp hands is a filthy process and is apt to cause the teats of a cow to chafe and become a source of annoyance. The milk should be removed from the barn or milking pen to a milk house just as soon as possible after it is drawn. The milk should be separated and the cream cooled as soon as possible after milking.

IN MEMORIAM

ANDREWS.—Dearer and fresher the memory, yet sadder and keener the loss of our dear husband and father. ARTHUR J. ANDREWS, who passed from earth to heaven two years ago—April 22nd, 1914.

Only a few lines dear husband and father,
To say we will never forget
The happy years we spent together,
For the memory lives with us yet.
As loved in life, so in death remembered.

ROCK HALL

Sunday's balmy weather had the effect of bringing out large numbers to the M. E. Church services, morning, afternoon and night. The morning congregation was treated to an exhilarating sermon by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Prettyman, on the theme "The Supremacy of Jesus," taking the sermon delivered by Bishop Berry at the recent Wilmington Conference as a basis. The subject of the evening sermon was "Why I Came Back." Elaborate preparation has been made for an interesting Easter service for to-morrow (Sunday) evening.

The terrific northwest blow-out on Friday of last week caused consternation in the ranks of our watermen, many of whom suffered the loss of much fishing rig along the bay shore. Some of the drifters were caught off Sandy Point and had narrow escapes from disaster. Hynson Carter had his gilling skiff smashed at Harris' wharf, up the bay. A tug, with car barges in tow, lost the barges, which went ashore. The tug "Pickwick," with mud scows, was blown from the Patapsco; the scows broke loose and were blown on to the big flats, off East Neck narrows. The tug boat tried to get back across the bay, but failed, and as she was about to swamp the Westmoreland picked her up and towed her to Love Point in a waterlogged condition. A number of small boats have been picked up since the storm and will be advertised.

Senator Blair Lee, escorted by the Messrs. Hadaway, was among us on Friday night of last week on a hand shaking and vote soliciting tour; but there didn't seem to be much enthusiasm among the voters.

Our oystermen have been handicapped by so much high winds on their last lap of the season. While the very blustery weather interfered much with the operations of the fishermen, yet they report the season so far as being more profitable than last season.

STILL POND

Miss Ruth Baxter and Miss Anna Walters spent the week-end with their friend, Miss Dorethea Medders, at Dover, Del.

Little Miss Velma Ford, of Baltimore, is spending the Easter holidays with her grandmother, Mrs. Wm. Thompson.

There will be Easter service at the church Sunday evening by the Sunday school.

At an entertainment given in the new school building in Betterton on Thursday, April 13th, many of us were surprised at the talent of Miss Edith Turner who rendered a solo, delighting all, and at the the same time revealing to all the fact, that Betterton is about to produce another soloist capable of more than local fame and perhaps will prove to be of great service upon those occasions, when human souls are called upon to make such music as is most natural to mankind.

A week ago last monday the Rev. Wm. Clews went to Philadelphia to have his nose and side examined. His nose was operated upon and an obstruction removed. It was also discovered that he was suffering from appendicitis, but not acute enough to call for an immediate operation. Returning to Kennedyville, he was almost at once compelled to take to his bed from an attack of grippe, the most severe of his expenience. Not until Wednesday of this week was he able to be out of bed. He is extremely weak and it will be impossible for him to hold services next Sunday.
