A LARGE PART of the Cambridge base ball team is made up of Washington College players.

The Cambridge Record, says, regarding them:

"Kibler is a whole team in himself. He is widely known and possesses exceptional executive ability, as well as general knowledge of the game. He will be the local manager of the team and has the reputation of being a genius along this line. His work last year attracted the attention of every lover of the sport who saw him play.

Spedden, our own Reeder, is too well known to need any introduction. 'Pete' covers a whole territory around the third bag, fielding fast, throwing accurately, is a safe hitter, and knows the game from start to finish.

Pearson is one of the Washington College catchers, and is vouched for by Spedden and other players who are familiar with his work.

IN order that there may be a permanent settlement of the railroad wage problem, protecting the interests of the employes, employers and the public, the railroads propose that the controversy be referred to the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington. This proposed solution has already received the hearty endorsement of business men throughout the country through a referendum of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. It has also been strongly urged by many men in public life and leaders of economic thought in institutions of learning, and is without doubt the must equitable and the fairiest way to settle the important matter. The public is too much concerned to have any strike.
