THE NEWS.

CHESTER TOWN, Md.

Saturday Morning, October 28, 1854.

OUR PAPER.—The paper which we use this week, it will be perceived, is of a very inferior quality. This is owing to the scarcity of printing paper in market at the present time, and it was with great difficulty we procured any at all. We expect to receive a better article next week.

THE MOB AT DENTON, MD.—The Denton Journal says there is no truth in the report that the mob which hung Dave Thomas, the murderer of Butler, also released two other prisoners and tied the sheriff. The latter was at the jail, and did all in his power to preserve order and prevent the act, both by persuasion and threats, but the influences against which he had to contend, were decidedly too formidable, and he was compelled to yield.

SALES OF LAND.—The sales of land in Kent county on Tuesday the 24th instant, by the Messrs. Reybolds of Delaware, as Executors of Major Philip Reybold, deceased, were as follows:

The "Plum Point" farm, $72.50 per acre. "Doe Neck," $29 per acre. "Buck Neck," $31 per acre. These sales indicate that land is still appreciated in our county. The sale of the Money farm the day previous, by Geo. Vickers, Esq., Trustee, for $32.25 per acre, confirms our impression of the value of Kent land.

SIR JOHN FRANKLIN'S EXPEDITION consisted of 138 men. The place where their remains are reported to have been found is in about latitude 68, and longitude 95 west from Greenwich. It is nearly seven degrees of latitude south of Wellington channel, where the last traces of Franklin were found four years ago, in the graves of several of his men, buried in 1845-46. It was through this channel that Sir John was supposed to have forced his way north into the Polar Sea. Nearly all the expeditions fitted out have, under this belief, explored regions to far north. The land expedition which went out in 1848 was too far west, having followed the Mackensie river from the same Lake which the back river starts from running east.—Captain Austin, who investigated the region of Lancaster Sound in 1850, concluded that the missing expedition had not been to the southward of Wellington channel channel. Yet at this very time Franklin's party were suffering the pangs of starvation some seven degrees south of Lancaster Sound, having probable been carried down Prince Regent's Inlet past Lancaster sound by the ice. It is estimated that four millions of dollars have been expended in fitting out the various searching expeditions in England and the United States. Mr. Joen Rae, who has made the recent discovery of the remains of the lost yogagers, was engaged for three successive years in exploring the lands and islands north of Coppermine river.

NOVEMBER ELECTIONS. On the 7th of November the States of New York, Jersey, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin are to elect fifty-four Representatives to Congress. In New York and Michigan State officers are to be chosen; in Illinois State Treasurer and county officers, and Legislatures in all the States except Illinois. The annual election in Massachusetts will take place on the 13th of November, when eleven Representatives in Congress will be chosen, together with a Governor and State Legislature.

REMARKABLE CASE OF SECOND SIGHT.—A New York letter memtions the following extraordinary incident in connection with the loss of the Artic:

A young gentleman, lately residing in this city, fell through a hatchway in his fathers store some time last summer and was severely injured, one side of his body becoming completely paralysed and after awhile he entuely lost the faculty of speech. In this position he remained until the 27th ultimo, (about the time of the accident to the Arctic, on which steamer it was known that the young man's father was a passenger,) when he suddenly started up in his sleep, and exclaimed, to the surprise of all, "My father is drewning!" fell back upon his pillow and died. It was the first time he had spoken for months; it was the last forever.

The young man referred to was a son of Mr. G. G. Smith, of New York, who was lost in the Arctic.

Discovery of the Remains of Sir John Franklin's Party—Interesting Particulars.

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—The Montreal papers received here contain some additional details of the discovery of the remains of Sir John Franklin's exploring party. In the spring of 1850, a party of forty whites were seen travelling southward over the ice, dragging their boats, by some Exquimaux who were occupied in killing seals on the North shore of King William's Land. None of the party could speak the native language intelligibly, but by signs the natives were made to understand that their ships had been crushed in the ice, and that the whites were now going where they expected to be able to shoot deer.

From the appearance of the men, all of whom with the exception of one chief officer, looked thin, it was supposed they had got short of provisions and they purchased a supply of seals from the natives. At a later date in the same season, previous to the disruption of the ice, the bodies of about 30 white persons were discovered on the continent, and five more bodies were found on an island near about a long day's journey, say 35 or 40 miles, northwest of a large stream, which can be no other than Buck's Great Fish River.

Some of the bodies were buried, and some were found in tents and undercoats turned over them; and several lay scattered about in different directions.—Of those found on the Island, one is supposed to have been an officer, as he had a telescope strapped over his shoulder, and a doubled-barreled gun under him From the mutilated state of many of the bodies, and the contents of the kettles, it was evident that the unfortunate party had been driven to canibalism to prolong a miserable existence.—They appear to have had an abundant stock of ammunition.

Among the articles in the possession of the natives were the fragments of the watches, telescopes, compasses, guns, &c., which had been broken up by them. Dr. Rae saw pieces of these articles with the Esquimaux, together with some silver spoons, forks, &c., and as many as could be obtained he purchased. A list of the most important relics found, with drawing of others, would be forwarded to London.

ALLEGED RE-APPEARANCE OF THE LONDON PLAGUE.—A story has been circulated in this country of the fightful re-appearance of the London plague which ravaged that city a hundred and fifty years ago, the contagion having been derived from bones disintered, in carryig a new sewer through Argyle St. by digging to unusual depth. It is asserted that physicians have pronounced that the disease is not the cholera, but that it is undoubtedly the plague, and that it is propogated by contagion, and is even more speedy in its fatal effects than the cholera. The writer of an article without date, which is copied from the Home Journal, says;

"The disease in a week from the time at which it broke out had completely ravaged the streets in Soho and its immediate vicinity; at the present moment Poland street, Argyle street, and others, are closed against all passers. Half the shops in Regent street are shut up—the remainder are rapidly closing. At two o'clock in the day, scarcely a dozen persons may be met in that great thoroughfare. In those streets which the disease is most speedly depopulating the dead bodies are placed in the open air, immediately that life has departed from them, so great is the fear of contagion. I have seen, in two instances, half a dozen bodies being carried off in black sacks like bales of goods, for burial! You will easily judge how great a fright this has created. Every one who is able to do so has fled. London, generally at this time crowded, is now half depopulated."

The London papers do not contain anything to countenance this story beyond the fact which has been repeatedly stated, that the cholera has prevailed in London to a greater extent than in any year since 1849.

Later from Havana.

Arrival of the Black Warrior—Assassination of Castenedo, &c.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 19.—The steamer Black Warrior has arrived here with dates from Havana, to the 15th instant.

She brings an account of the assassination of Castenedo, the well-known betrayer of Gen. Lopez. He was assassinated on the 12th inst. whilst in the billiard room of a coffee-house playing billiards. The assassin escaped and had not been heard of, nor any clue to his identify.

The funeral of Castenedo took place the next day, and his remains were followed to the grave by his guard only, who were hercely attacked by a mob, and a terrible scene ensued in which several were killed and wounded. The affair caused intense excitement—otherwise the Island is quiet.

Success of the Know-Nothings.

WILMINGTON, N. C., Oct. 20.—At a special election held here yesterday for a member of the House of Commons, to fill a vacancy, D. McMillan (democrat, but supported by the know nothings) received a majority of 356 over Dr. Walker the regular democratic candidate.—The latter party usually have a majority of 1000 in the county. It was not publicly known that Mr. McMillan was a candidate until the morning of the election.

Arrival of Steamer Niagara.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

The Siege of Sebastopot—Desperate conflict Expected—The Russians Prepared to Sink their Entire Fleet in the Harbor—Prussia Acting with Austria—Flour and Wheat Advancing, &c.

HALIFAX, Oct. 25.—The Royal Mail Steamer Niagara, arrived here this morning, with Liverpool dates to Saturday, the 14th instant, being three days later than advices received per steamer Washington.

FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

The news by this arrival from the Crimea, the present seat of active hostilities, is of a highly interesting character. Sebastopol, at the last accounts, was invested by the allies on the south and east, and the guns of their fleets and batteries were playing upon the walls of the fortresses of that famous stronghold of the Czar.

Prince Menschikoff was keeping to the field on the north of the city, daily expecting the arrival of General Ostenssken and Gortschakoff, with reinforcements.

Authentic accounts confirm the report that Menschikoff had sunk seven ships of the line at the mouth of the harbor of Sebastopol.

Prussis reported to have expressed a willingness to act with Austria.

The whole country north of Sebastopol had been been evacuated by the allies. All the allied reserves had left for the Crimea.

General Ostensacken was at Perekop since the 2d, and expected to join Menschikoff before the 15th.

The Paris Debats estimates the Russian force in the Crimea at 85,000 men, and the allies at 90,000, including the seamen.

The two Russian generals taken at the battle of Alma were Gonihoff and Ichanoff. Both of them were wounded and one has since died. They stated that the Russians were but 34,000 strong at the battle of Alma, considering that sufficent to defend the position. Menschikoff was sick, but sat on the heights and directed the battle. The Turks could not be prevented from bayoneting all the wounded Russians, crying out "Sinope."

Marshall Canrobert, who succeeds Marshall St Arnaud, dec'd, in command of the French, is considered energetic and adventurous, but as a tactician his abilities are regarded as doubtful.

It was supposed that the siege artillery of the allies would be mounted on the batteries around Sebastopol on the 4th inst., that the bombardment would commence on the 5th inst., and that an assault was expected to be made on the 8th.

The allied trenches were within 1600 yards of the walls, and were already mounted with fifty guns. A private dispatch says that two breaches had been made in quarantine on the 6th; another says that no bombardment had been made up to the 8th.

Seven Russian ships had been sunk with all their guns and stores on board, and the remainder of the Russian fleet was held ready for sinking. Their crews to the number of 10,000, had been added to the garrison.

The allied fleets were comparatively useless, and the marines from on board them had joined the land forces.

Mr. R. E. SELLERS: Dear Sir—I think it a duty I owe to you and the public generally, to state that I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint for a long time, and so badly that an abscess formed and broke, which left me in a very low state.
