Ford Industries Announce New Year Gift Of Eight Million Dollar Bonus And Offer Of Participation In Future Prosperity.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 31.—Henry Ford and his son, Edsel Ford, announced today the distribution of a $8,000,000 bonus among the 80,000 employes of all branches of the Ford interests and the inauguration of an investment plan whereby every worker, from the man who wields a broom to the chief executives, may participate in the profits of the business.

In cash and in the number of men concerned, and without counting the moral effect on industry as a whole, this act of economic justice surpass anything in the history of labor.

The lowest award paid goes to men who are receiving the minimum pay of $6 a day and who have been in the employ of the various companies three months. It amounts to $50. The highest award goes to the workers who have been with the company five years and who are receiving $10.80 a day. The bonus received by the latter amounts to $270.

Employes who receive a salary will also receive bonuses. Ability and length of service will be the standard on which the awards will be based.

The policy reflected by these announcements is not new with the Ford organization. The history of the company for the last five years shows that its ideal of industrial justice has always been high. In 1914 the Ford Motor Company announced a minimum pay of $5 a day since which time it has distributed approximately 100 million dollars in profits to employes. Following this Mr. Ford was sued by minority stockholders and compelled to pay dividends instead of reinvesting earnings and increasing wages as he desired. Sometime later, however, came the announcement of a $6 a day minimum scale of pay and then the purchase of the holdings of minority stockholders by Henry and Edsel Ford.

No sooner was the organization in their complete possession than they began to arrange for an additional distribution of profits with their thousands of workers and the result is the New Year announcement of an $8,000,000 bonus and the right to share in the prosperity of the industry.

FEED FOR MILK PRODUCTION

Many Old Cows Will Increase Capacity if Fed on Properly Balanced Ration.

There are a large number of old cows that will increase their capacity for milk-giving if fed on a properly balanced ration and with a large amount of succulent food the year round. This is what develops the capacity of the cow. A great many cows are never fed with the idea of getting out of them the greatest amount of milk possible each year, with due regard to the health of the cows. If, however, the old cows were fed with this idea in mind, they would continue to give a large mess of rich milk.

SUMMER MONTHS ARE TRYING

Cows Giving Milk Should Have Plenty of Feed, Pasture With Water and Good Shade.

Take good care of the cows. The summer months are always trying on cows giving milk. They will need plenty of feed, pasture with water and shade. Unless special care is taken of them they are likely to fail and not be in condition to produce in winter when prices of dairy products are high. Give the cows all the protection possible from flies.

DAIRY NOTES

Keep the dairy cow out of all drafts of stable windows.

* * *

The milk cow on the general farm ought to be a money-maker.

* * *

A satisfied cow is probably a satisfactory cow.

* * *

A summer silo for the dairyman will pay even better than a winter silo.

* * *

The average dairy cow makes dairying unprofitable; it's the better-than-the-average cow that pays.

* * *

A good cow is worth more than most people believe. A dairy cow that yields an abundance of milk is indeed a valuable animal.

Would Take an Heiress Now.

Once more someone takes the trouble to tell us that there was a real Mary with a real lamb that went to school. And when you remember how much lower meat was in 1814, it isn't so hard to believe.—Milwaukee Journal.
