THE CLEVELAND CONVENTION.

Presentation of the Resolutions and Address to the President--His Reply.

The committee appointed by the Soldiers and Sailors' Convention, recently held at Cleveland, to preceed to Washington and present the President with official copies of the resolutions and address adopted by that body, performed that duty on Tuesday last.

General Granger, chairman of the committee, in presenting the resolutions and address, said he believed that in the proceedings of the convention were reflected the sentiments of the great mass, not only of those who had borne arms in the cause of the Union, but of patriotic men throughout the whole land, and expressed the hope that under President Johnson's administration the Union would be restored, and that it would be as enduring as time.

The President said in response:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: I have no formal reply to make, but the presentation of the recorded proceedings of the Cleveland Convention is peculiarly acceptable to me. To receive the encouragement and the expression of confidence in me of gentlemen so intelligent and patriotic inspires me with increased confidence to progress in the discharge of my duties in strictly adhering to and maintaining the constitution of the country. You have performed your part in the field. That has become a part of the country's history; but after having done that, there is, as you have just evinced, an equally important part to perform as citizens. That duty you are doing, and the part that you are performing now is equally important, if not of superior moment, to that which you discharged as soldiers and sailors of the Union.

While the war was a physical contest, connected, of course, with intellect and intelligence as far as the science of war was concerned, the struggle now is purely of a civil character for the establishment of a basis upon which our institutions are to rest hereafter.

The query which now arises is, whether the character and genius of the nation is to be subverted, or whether it is to be settled upon the principles of the constitution. To each and all of you is known the part that I have borne since this civil war commenced, both in the campaign and apart from it. I must refer you to that as evidence of what my conduct will be in the future. I have been co operating with you in every capacity in which you have been engaged since the struggle commenced.

I think we are now at the most important crisis of our country's history—when we are to fix a substantial and enduring basis upon which the institutions of the country are to rest. We are to return to the constitutional limits—establishing the great fact that this is a government of limitations—that it has a written constitution, and that its boundaries are to be observed and strictly guarded, if free government is to exist. And, coming out of a rebellion, we ought to demonstrate to mankind that a free government cannot exist upon hatred and distrust, and ill-will, and that with us the time has come for a re-establishment of all the relations of the States to the federal government. This I look upon as being of equal importance with any part of the war, if not the most important part.

I have said more than I intended; but I repeat that the encouragement, the countenance, and the confidence given me, coming from the source it does, is peculiarly acceptable to me; and, God being willing, I will, with your, help, pursue the course I have been pursuing in the effort to save our government. I know it has been said that the founders of government are entitled to the most conspicuous place in history; but my opinion is that the preservers of government should occupy the most important page. Let us all perform our part according to the theory and genius of the government, and the result will be the preservation of our institutions, and we will take the place to which history will assign us.

GENERAL LEE'S APPLICATION FOR PARDON.—After the President's proclamation of peace in May last, General Lee, it appears, made up his mind to apply for pardon, but hearing that he had been indicted for treason at Norfolk, he concluded to procure General Grant's opinion as to the legality of such indictment. Accordingly, he enclosed to General Grant an application for pardon, and stated to that eminent officer that he had learned that he was to be indicted for treason at Norfolk, but that he had supposed the rebel officers and soldiers, were, by the terms of their surrender, to be protected from molestation so long as they conformed to their paroles. General Grant, on June 20th, replied to General Lee that the application had been received and forwarded to the Secretary of War, with his recommendation that the pardon be granted, and in addition, a statement that in his opinion the rebels paroled at Appomattox Court House could not be tried for treason so long as they observed the terms of their paroles. Gen. Grant also says in his letter that such, he is informed, is the opinion of the government, and that the terms granted by him to the rebels at Appomattox Court House were at the time heartily approved by President Lincoln and the country.

The application as presented to the President by General Grant, had this endorsement upon it:

"Respectfully forwarded through the Secretary of War to the President, with the earnest recommendation that this application of Gen. R. E. Lee for amnesty and pardon may be granted him. The oath of allegiance required by recent order of the President does not accompany this, for the reason, I am informed by General Ord, the order requiring it had not reached Richmond when this was forwarded.

On this the New York Express remarks:

This endorsement doubtless will inspire the radicals with a new fit of disgust against General Grant. In their eyes it must be an unpardonable sin to be thus "earnest" in restoring to General Lee his status as a Union man—quite as unpardonable as the equally earnest endeavor of President Johnson, Grant's commander-in-chief, in bringing back the Southern representatives to their places in the capitol.

GOLD IN MARYLAND.

For several months explorations have been making for gold in Montgomery county and near Washington city. The Rockville Sentinel now gives the following interesting statement:

The facts show that the presence of rich gold deposits within a few miles of Washington is no longer problematical. "The Maryland Mining Company," composed principally of Philadelphians, were the pioneers. They bought a tract of land about two miles below the Great Falls of the Potomac, of some one hundred and twenty acres; they have sunk several shafts and run some drifts, and in these have found several well-defined veins of gold-bearing quartz, which assays from forty to twenty-five hundred dollars per ton.—Having demonstrated the abundance and richness of the quartz, they have erected a large steam quartz mill for the reduction of these ores. These results have created a great demand for the stock of this company. Other rich veins have been discovered in adjacent tracts.

Many experienced miners and skilful mining engineers have visited the region lately, and they all concur in the opinion that, when developed, these will be among the richest mines in the country.

THE CASE OF JEFFERSON DAVIS.—It is now definitely stated that Jefferson Davis will not be tried the coming October.—The Circuit Court that met at Norfolk in April last, under an impression given by the local papers there that Congress had voted to transfer the sitting to Richmond, adjourned its proceedings, on May 5, to the latter city until October. As the act No. 56 did not pass both houses until May 22, the adjournment of the court was at that time premature and illegal—consequently the court will have to convene at Norfolk and perfect a legal adjournment to Richmond. On the 27th of July Congress passed the act No. 117, rearranging the fourth circuit of the United States Courts by naming Delaware in the place of South Carolina, while at the same time the necessary reallotment of judges to the districts was omitted. The judges of the Supreme Court do not agree upon their power to make this change of judges, and it will be necessary to await the action of Congress in this matter. When these difficulties shall have been corrected, and it is authoritatively announced the military will in nowise interfere with the civil law, Chief Justice Chase announces himself in readiness to call a special session of the court and proceed with the trial of Mr. Davis.—Wash. Cor. N. Y. Tribune.

ANOTHER BRUTAL MURDER IN PHILADELPHIA.—The city of Philadelphia has again been the scene of a terrible murder, which next to the massacre of the Dearing family, exceeds in atrocity any tragedy of a similar character enacted in that city for years. The fiendish deed was committed on Wednesday morning, the 19th inst., but was not discovered until late in the afternoon. The victim was Mrs. Eliza M. Miller, an elderly lady, who was found in her own house with her throat cut in a terrible manner, three wounds on her head, penetrating the skull, and marks of strangulation about her neck and breast, and surrounded with a pool of blood. A man named Gettlieb Williams has been arrested on suspicion of being the murderer. He denies any knowledge of or participation in the crime, yet the police officers who have the investigation of the horrible affair specially under their charge have little or no doubt of his guilt.

SENSATION STORIES FROM THE SOUTH.—It is scarcely necessary to say that many of the dispatches purporting to come from the South, and published in the Northern papers, have very little foundation in fact. As the fall elections approach, dispatches of the most sensational character will probably be daily sent forth to inflame the public mind at the North. The New York Tribune, of Tuesday, has a very doubtful statement, by telegraph, dated at New Orleans, about a state of insurrection at Benham, Texas, the citizens armed to prevent soldiers coming there and to drive the "Yankees" off, etc. Every little difficulty which, if occurring up North, would scarcely be noted, will be magnified into a new war or rebellion, because of its occurrence in the South. Sensible people will duly estimate all such venal trumpery.

The National Military Asylum to be erected in Milwaukie, Wisconsin, will be located on a tract of about 500 acres. The buildings will be capable of accommodating from 10,000 to 15,000 inmates, and will cost nearly $100,000. The asylum will be placed in charge of disabled officers, and will be for the accommodation of all disabled Union officers and soldiers of the late war. Two other similar institutions are to be established in other localities, under the act of Congress.
