WEDDING BELLS.

Mr. Edward E. Fowler, son of Mrs. Emma Fowler, of "Flatlands," and Miss Marguerite P. Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Barrett Smith, near Chestertown, were quietly married at the M. P. parsonage, Chestertown, by Rev. W. R. Graham on Wednesday morning, Dec. 24, at 7.30. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Fowler took the B. S. For[illegible] for Baltimore, where they were entertained a few days by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Truitt. On their return home will reside with the groom's mother. They received many handsome gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. A. Joiner announce the marriage of their daughter, Lillian Marie, to Albert Earl Jewell, of Wilmington, formerly of Kent, on December 26, 1913, by the Rev. W. H. S. Murray. The marriage took place in Wilmington, Del., where the bride and groom will make their home

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Jewell, of Still Pond, announce the marriage of their daughter, Sallie, to Mr. J. Thomas Parsons, to take place at their home in the presence of only the immediate families on Wednesday evening, January 14, at 7.30 o'clock. No cards.

The marriage of Miss Susie Harrington, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Harrington, to Mr. Baxter, of Mobile, Ala., December 31st, in Calvary M. E. Church.

Laura Virginia Strong and Horace Catlin Watts were married at Crumpton M. E. Church on December 27.

ELSIE WHARTON.

The grim monster death has again entered our little town, carried away as its victim, Elsie, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Watson J. Wharton, of Golt, Md. Her illness was brief, and almost before we could realize it she had passed away; the life that shone here went to shine in Heaven; the life that never knew any sorrow passed into that country where no pain or death can enter; passing away she leaves fond hearts lonely, yet submissive, knowing that while they are sorrowing, she has won the crown, and has gone to be forever with the Lord in Heaven. She was loved not only by her parents and brothers, but by everyone in the town and community, she being such a kind and obedient girl. She had gladdened the home for 12 years. Not only will Elsie be missed in her home, but in the Sunday school, public school, both Sr. and Jr. Epworth League, where she was always present and a willing worker. She leaves besides her loving parents to mourn her untimely death eight brothers, i. e., Thomas, of Wilmington; Roscoe, of Vienna, Md.; William of Willow Grove, Pa., Gilbert and Roy, of Wilmington, Erwin, Vivan and Alton at home. The funeral took place Tuesday morning Dec. 30th, at eleven o'clock, services at the M. E. Church conducted by her pastor, Rev. Horner, and was attended by a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends. The beautiful white casket was completely covered with lovely flowers. The pall bearers were six girl friends, i. e., Mary George Alice Clayton, Annie Blanchfield, Elizabeth Johnston, Minnie Turner and Mildred Matthews. Interment in Immanuel M. E. Cemetery, Townsend, Del.

"O Elsie must we give you up. Tis you we love so well,
How can we drink the bitter cup, and say a long farewell?
Farewell, 'tis a solemn word that thrills through every heart,
But oh, it is the will of God that loving ones should part."

250 TROOPS IN CHESTERTOWN

Wednesday morning when the citizens of Chestertown began to be astir they were astounded and indigant to find the town and jail almost under martial law as during the late hours of the night 180 soldiers had been sent to the town by special train and 50 by boat. Every citizen with but few exceptions were hot with feelings of indignation as he looked upon the scene before him. Loud protestations were heard against whoever ordered it done, but it was some time before it was known the reason.

The Second Battalion of the Fifth Regiment, Maryland National Guard, was ordered by Governor Goldsborogh Tuesday evening, each man carrying full field equipment. The battalion arrived here at 12.40 o'clock Wednesday morning. The troops were marched to the jail and Brigadier General Gaither immediately went into consultation with Judges Constable, Adkins and Hopper.

The order for the troops to go to Chestertown was transmitted to Adjunctant General Macklin nt 5.30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. At 9 o'clock one company of battalion, numbering about 50 men, left Baltimore, for Annapolis, whence they embarked on the state boat, Governor Thomas, for this town.

At about the same hour the three other companies of the battalion left Union Station on a special train. These companies went by way of Wilmington, Del. In all about 180 members of the regiment left Baltimore.

It is the first time the state militia has been called out to suppress riots since Governor Brown sent the Fifth to Lonaconing, Md., about 18 years ago. It was the night of the Fifth Regiment hop. Members of the regiment, bringing the sweethearts and wives to the armory, were ordered to don field uniform at once. There were no questioning the order. The sweethearts and the wives had to be left alone in the armory; they had to return to their homes alone.

Gov. Goldsborough, in a statement issued after ordering the militia to Chestertown, where a detail of city policemen had already been sent, said he did so following advices which he had received over the phone from that town.

Brigadier General Charles D. Gaither was the ranking officer with the battalion was sent to Kent county. General Gaither was the personal representative of Governor Goldsborough and acted in an advisory capacity only. Major David W. Jenkins, comandant of the second battalion, was in active charge.

Each man carried full field equipment and United States Army emergency rations for two days. A large quantity of ammunition went with the men. It was distributed on the trains.

The field uniform of the regiment is the olive drab of the United States Army. The emergency rations of the United States Army were contained in little blue boxes, about six inches high [illegible] It is the "tabloid food" adopted by the [illegible] years ago. Two of these boxes [illegible] distributed to each man. They [illegible] carried easily in a pocket. Ex-Sh[illegible] Keyser was given a sample of these [illegible]tions as a souvenir.

Every man was ordered to exam[illegible] carefully his rifle. One man showed [illegible] rifle to a town citizen and there wa[illegible] not a shell in it! Others were likewise loaded (?). Blanket rolls were carried around the shoulders, as were the haversacks and canteens. The cartridge belts were also worn. The officers carried swords and revolvers,

Field stoves, tents and boxes of ammunition were loaded into wagons at the the armory and carried to the stations, where they were placed on special baggage cars. Trenching tools were also carried, as they are included in the term "full field equipment."

Perkins To Defend Them.

After the indictments Tuesday afternoon Chief Judge Albert Constable named Herbert E. Perkins counsel for the defense. Mr. Perkins was taken to the jail to see if he was acceptable to the negroes, and, after their assent, he was instructed to prepare to defend them. Allan Goldsborough, Esq., of Denton, was assigned to assist Mr. Perkins and arrived here during the night.

Preparations for the trial came with swiftness and precision after the indictments. Besides the selection of counsel, Sheriff William E. Brown was instructed to summons the members of the petit jury who served during the October term of court, and within an hour he had reached every man. They arrived Wednesday morning but their services were not needed.

Judge Constable States Reason.

A great crowd thronged the court house at the opening of Court Wednesday morning and were soon told who was responsible for troops being in our town. State's Attorney H. W. Vickers announced that he was ready to proceed with the trial of the accused.

As the men had no counsel, the Court had appointed Herbert E. Perkins, of Chestertown, and T. Alan Goldsborough, of Denton, to defend them. Mr. Perkins made the formal plea for removal of the case, giving the reason that the men could not be afforded a fair and impartial trial in Kent county.

State's Attorney Vickers made a vigorous protest. He contended that there was no reason for taking the the case to another county; that a speedy trial had been promised the people of Kent and that the men would be accorded full justice here.

Chief Judge Constable, speaking for the court, said it has no alternative in the matter under the law and that it would be compelled to accede to the request of the defense.

been extremely high here. The people have been highly excited and nervous, and in that state might do acts which later would be regretted. It was to prevent such acts that this Court asked that the soldiers be sent. I wish to commend Sheriff Brown and State's Attorney Vickers for the creditable manner they have acted in this difficult situation here."

With the arraignment of the Judge still in their ears, the crowd flocked out of the Courthouse. They were hurried outside the fence and then the soldiers who had been patrolling the jail and courtyard were assembled in front of the jail building. Sheriff Brown brought Mabel, Paraway and Blake, handcuffed them, and turned them over to the detectives.

The militia, under the command of Major, surrounded them and with loaded rifles the march through the town to the boat was begun.

The negroes though were thoroughly frightened in the march to the wharf. The jeers of the mob which they had seen break into their cells Saturday night caused them to tremble. "Don't let them get us," they pleaded with their guards and every fresh outburst caused them to look fearfully at the marching troops.

By this time news of the action of the Court had spread over town, and a great crowd of excited persons, numbering a thousand or more, had collected. When the negroes emerged from the jail a cry of protest went up. The negroes when brought out were surrounded by the 12 policemen and detectives from Baltimore, under command of Detective Hogan.

These, in turn, were surrounded by the four companies of militia, and the march to the wharf was begun, the crowd streaming along behind as close as the troops would permit.

A rear guard was thrown across the street a square away from the wharf, and no one was permitted to approach nearer the steamer.

They were hustled on the steamer and placed out of sight while the captain was ready to cast off the lines and steam away as soon as all the soldiers were on board

The march from the jail to the wharf began at 11.15 o'clock and half an hour later the steamer left the wharf.

The remaining companies of the Fifth marched back up town. The train pulled out at 1 o'clock, leaving another crowd about the station.

After the case had been disposed of by the Court the grand jury continued in session, but soon returned without any true bills against the jail breakers and were dismissed. Their report is as follows:

NORMAN MABEL AND JOSEPH PARAWAY

The two confessed murderers from pictures taken in the Chestertown Jail last Tuesday morning.

In his address Judge Constable said the Court was cognizant of the criticism expressed on every side regarding the call for the troops and stated that the the Court assumed full responsibility. Neither the State's Attorney nor any officer or citizen had requested the militia, he declared.

Court Only Responsible.

"I want to say right now that no one but this Court was responsible. We asked for aid because since we have been here this court has made a point of investigating the sentiment. We have been informed that the crowd meant to see that its mandate was carried out by the Court.

"This Court is here to give these men an impartial trial. If, in this judgment of the Court, the evidence should warrant that some other penalty than the death sentence should be pronounced, this Court will be free to administer justice as it sees it, not as the mob demands. That is one reason the soldiers are here."

"Again it has been brought to the attention of the Court that threats have been made, some even to this body, that only one penalty could be given the negroes here. I beg to inform you gentlemen that this Court is the sold arbitrator of what penalty can be given, subject only to the law. It has been stated that these negroes would never leave the jail alive. This Court felt that a change of venue might be asked and determined that the men should be tried in any court that might be agreeable. It had the soldiers sent here to prevent any harm coming to the prisoners.

"I do not want you to think that the militia was brought here because this Court felt that the people here were of a rougher element than elsewhere in the State. Since the incarceration of the negroes in prison the tension has

To Be Tried In Cecil

The negroes will be tried at Elkton, Cecil county, at the March term of court. In the meantime they will be held in Baltimore City jail. In case they are condemned to hang they will be brought to Chestertown and executed.

STOPPED THE TRAIN

As the special train bearing the militia came thundering down the track persons about the county gathered at the different stations to learn the cause. Among them was Mr. Ralph Shallcross, who went to Kennedyville station. He had been out calling and carried a lantern, one side of which showed red and the other white. As the train neared Kennedyville it was noticed to slow down and finally stop. The conductor alighted, came up to Ralph and asked him what was the matter. "That's just what I'd like to know," said Ralph "What did you stop the train for?" asked the conductor. "I didn't know I stopped it," said Ralph. "Didn't! What did you display that red light for?" asked the trainman. Ralph looked down at his light and understood all, and after a few minutes the train continued on to town amid the laughter of the crowd.

Mr. Edward Ringgold and family and Mr. Walter Elburn and family had quite an experience on Xmas night. They had been on an auto trip to visit friends in Queenstown for the day, and after spending a pleasant day, were returning when they got stuck in the heavy roads caused by recent rains. The united strength of the two men was not sufficient to move the car and it was daylight before sufficient help arrived to get him started on their way home.
