4TH RED CROSS ROLL CALL FOR MEMBERS BEGINS ARMISTICE DAY

National Headquarters Reports Work Done In Past Year and It's Aims For the Future

ENTIRE PEACE TIME PROGRAM OUTLINED

In making an appeal to the people of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, comprising the Potomac Division, to renew their memberships or to become new members of the American Red Cross, David H. Brown, Division Director of the Fourth Roll Call, which begins November 11 and ends November 26, has issued the following statement, in which is shown the work that has been carried on during the past year, the existing activities, and the entire peace-time program of the great relief organization:

The Fourth Roll Call is not a campaign.

It is merely the yearly opportunity for American men and women to pay their annual dues and renew their membership in their Red Cross.

This Roll Call finds the Red Cross, as much at any time since it entered the great war, in the midst of tremendous concerns.

The world is so full of uncertainty—that which is called modern civilization is so utterly upset—that no sooner is one duty ended than another looms as large.

The present program of the American Red Cross is vastly important and fundamentally essential.

Its primary obligation was to the service men of the Army and Navy. Of that obligation these things still remain:

First, To stay with the Army of Occupation, comprising about 17000 officers and men, and serve as their Red Cross.

Second, To continue in the hospitals of the Army, the Navy and the Public Health Service where there are more than 26,000 men, many of whom will be retained there for months and some of them for years, and carry on their recreational and social work

Third, To keep in touch as an advisory organization with the discharged men of the Army and Navy, and be ready—not in the way of financial aid, but what is worth far more—to contribute kind advice and friendly assistance.

Fourth, To continue the work that has been going on in connection with the families of soldiers and sailors, and as growing out of this a similar work for the community at large.

The fact that the men have returned does not by any means eliminate domestic problems. In many cases it only intensifies them. This is particularly true in the case of more than 125,000 families whose men are in the number of the dead, where there is a wealth of service that the Red Cross can still render.

Fifth, While the Government itself is carrying on vocational training for maimed and crippled men, it has turned over to the Red Cross the care of those who have been blinded in the crash of war. No more sacred service can be imagined than this.

Work in Europe:

So far as the world at large is concerned the American Red Cross must still stand by to the limit of its possibility and the measure of its ability. On the Western Front its work is now over. Belgium, France and Italy are slowly but surely making progress, with their feet firmly set upon paths of reconstruction.

The Eastern Belt of Horror still remains—not only a menace to civilization, but a challenge to the Red Cross.

The enormity of its want is staggering.

The entire fabric of civilization is tottering into ruin.

Pestilence and famine are stalking in the midst of calamity.

The Red Cross cannot carry the burden that only Western Civilization united can bear. It cannot feed Poland, the Baltic States, Czechoslovakia and the Balkans. It cannot clothe and shelter hundreds of millions of people, were it so inclined.

No voluntary organization can any longer face a task of such dimensions.

But to the best of its ability the American Red Cross can do what it did during the months before America's armies came to take their part in the great conflict.

It can, by its very presence, give promise of assistance.

It can carry on at least a hopeful fight against pestilence and epidemic.

It can minister to the extreme of emergency.

It can try to protect and care for the children who are the one hope for the future.

More than this, in the present condition of its funds and its personnel, it dare not undertake.

Far more than this it is willing to undertake, if the American people choose again to make it the repository of their confidence and to contribute for the relief of suffering millions of fellow men.

What the American Red Cross does for Europe depends upon what the American people ask it to do.

It knows how. The experience of the past is invaluable. The American Red Cross is ready. It is up to the American people to decide.

Red Cross Work At Home:

America calls to the Red Cross for service.

It spent thirty billion dollars in the world fight for Democracy.

That was an average of $300.00 per capita from our entire population.

The United States owes twenty-eight billion dollars as a war debt.

That is an average of $280.00 per capita for our entire population.

The average American community spent last year about $9.00 per capita for education and about $3.50 per capita for fire and police protection.

As a nation we spent last year $10.00 per capita for candy, 50 cents per capita for chewing gum, $215.00 per capita for tobacco, 75 cents per capita for perfumery.

Last year the American nation spent less than 29 cents per capita protecting and developing the health of the country.

And yet—

Last year 1,250,000 American people died of sickness.

Seven hundred and fifty thousand of them died of preventable disease.

Twe hundred thousand adults died last year from tuberculosis.

Tuberculosis is neither hereditary nor necessary, but is a disease of defective civilization.

Last year 300,000 American babies died before they were one year old.

One hundred and fifty thousand of them did not live a month.

This slaughter of the innocents was largely the result of ignorance, indifference and economic inhumanity.

The records of the war show that our civilian population is blighted with Venereal Disease.

The Public Health Service indicates that one-tenth of our American life is thus contaminated.

The American Red Cross does not claim responsibility to analyze and solve these great questions of Public Health.

It only recognizes that under its Charter it is compelled to "devise and carry on measures for mitigating the suffering incident to pestilence and disaster.

It seeks, therefore, merely to aid existing agencies, to co-operate with organized effort, and to place its organization and its workers alike at the disposal and the service of the community.

In furtherance of such a program the Community Public Health Nurse is destined to play an important part.

One thousand of these—most of them returned army nurses—have prepared themselves for this new crusade for higher standards of physical life and the expansion of our national strength and vigor.

The Roll Call contemplates practical demonstration and instruction in Domestic Sanitation, Community Hygiene, Dietetics and Child Welfare.

The establishment of Public Health Center is as most important feature of this work for a better America.

This will be exactly what its name signifies—bringing to a definite place in each community a combination of all the agencies that may promote health, in order to maintain a high standard of physical manhood and womanhood in our country.

A distinct line of usefulness will be the formation of classes in First Aid, teaching people how to meet the emergency of accidents and to make possible the saving of life.

The continuation, enlargement and co-ordination of the Junior Red Cross as related to our American public schools is an item so vast as to be incalculable.

The whole fabric, not only of our American democracy but of the future civilization of the world, rests upon the child and the school.

The ideal out of which the Junior Red Cross springs is that of Service—self-sacrificing service for others.

Fifteen million American children, trained in the philosophy of unselfishness, schooled to a life of service, vowed to the furtherance of international understanding and good will, can save the world.

Finally, the American Red Cross must broaden and make more permanent its preparedness for the Disaster Relief that has been so great a part of its history.

Tempest and flood; earthquakes and fire; accident and calamity—whatever of these fall into the machinery of life throughout the world, the American Red Cross holds itself ready to go and minister in the name of humanity and mercy.

There is still room for the Red Cross.
