Bedroom Farce At The Lyceum

"PARLOR, BEDROOM AND BATH" AN HILARIOUS SCREEN VERSION OF BROADWAY SUCCESS.

"Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," the screen farce which sets forth the tribulations and misadventures of a model husband who won his wife under a false pretense of devilishness, is scheduled for its first local showing Friday and Saturday, January 14th and 15th, at the Lyceum Theatre.

For one of the longest and most hilarious seasons a comedy has ever known, 'Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," written by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan, and produced in the theatre by A. H. Woods, convulsed New York; and those who have had the opportunity of seeing pre-release showings of the production in pictures, with an all-star cast, assert that the play has gained rather than lost in hilarity in the translation to the silver sheet.

The situation—or at least the central situation, for there are any number of them—deals with Reggie Irving who for many years had sought to win Angelica. This young woman wanted a man just the opposite of what her own name implied. She wanted a wild one, and since Reggie had no inclinations toward sowing even a little patch of the untamed oats, he perforce sought outside aid He went to Polly Hathaway, society reporter on the scandal sheet, and asked her to use dark polish on his reputation.

Ruth Stonehouse enacts the breezy resourceful girl reporter; and Eugene Pallette, who was the innocuous Billy Bartlett in "Fair and Warmer," starring May Allison, and who later was seen with Bert Lytell in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," plays Reggie. The part of Angelica is deftly and delightfully enacted by Kathleen Kirkham who, after this production, will form and appear in special pictures made by her own company. Henry Miller Jr., son of the famous actor-manager has also an important part in "Parlor Bedroom and Bath."

The picture is one of the big Metro specials. It was directed by Edward Dillon, photographed by W. M. Edmond and adapted from the stage play by June Mathis and A. P. Younger. Special art interiors were designed for it and done under the direction of Sidney Ullman.

By the will of former Judge James Alfred Pearce, probated at Chestertown, the regents of the Mount Vernon Association are bequeathed a hunting horn that belonged to General Washington and "a profile of General Washington," to be hung in the Maryland Room at Mount Vernon. This "profile" is an original painting made from life by Dr. Elisha Cullen Dick, Washington's friend and physician, in 1797. The painting was hung at Mount Vernon, and Washington directed that at his death it should be returned to Dr. Dick, together with a hunting horn the General was accustomed to use. When Dr. Dick died the portrait and hunting horn were kept by his widow during her life, and at her death became the property of United States Senator James Alfred Pearce, her grandson, who was born in the Dick home at Alexandria in 1807. He bequeathed them to his son, and Judge Pearce in his lifetime said he desired that they be preserved after his death in the American shrine.

Sixteen years ago the Century Magazine printed a reproduction of the Washington portrait, a full-page illustration, from an excellent photograph of the original made by Getz of Baltimore. This was the first time the portrait had been introduced to the notice of the general public. In size the portrait is about 14x16 inches, the colors being still fresh and bright, and it is surrounded by a beveled gilt frame about two inches wide, which shows the marks of age and is believed to be the original frame in which the picture was placed.
