Eggs Hatching Chix

Bar. Plymouth Rox

My Barred Plymouth Rocks are better this year than ever before. I have recently added five Cockerels from the best known Barred Rock dealers in the world—that came from 270 and 300-egg hens. My breeders are all yearlings, and are from stock that has for years, been bred to lay. As a general purpose fowl, the Barred Rock leads them all in this country.

S. C. W. Leghorns

Like my Rocks, my Single Comb White Leghorn breeders are all yearlings, to which I mated Cockerels from hens that produced tremendous egg yields. Leghorns are recognized the world over as being the best layers and can be raised with profit any time from January to July. Leghorns have made records of three hundred eggs per year and better.

Prices of Chix and Eggs

CHIX—$18 per hundred; $9 per fifty.

EGGS—$8 per hundred; $1 50 per setting.

CUSTOM HATCHING—$6 per two hundred.

No less than two hundred taken.

Two (2.00) dollars per month per ampere at 110 volts single phase.

Two ($2.00) dollars per month per ampere at 220 volts single phase.

Four ($4.00) dollars per month per ampere at 220 volts single phase.

Rules

The general rules now in force are applicable to this rate and in addition thereto the following rules will apply to this rate only.

(1st) The minimum amount of service is ten amperes at 110 volts or five amperes at 220 volts.

(2nd) Customers must make written application for the service and set forth the voltage, phase and ampere requirements in their application.

(3rd) Service will be supplied for periods of not less than twelve months.

(4th) Payments covering minimum bills must be made in quarterly installments in advance. No discount will be made on minimum bills.

(5th) when energy is used under this rate credit will be allowed for only the minimum bill for the month in which energy was used.

(6th) Customers must provide and install at their expense an automatic circuit breaker capable of adjustment for the amount of service required. The breaker must be mounted in a metal cabinet fitted with a lock and key. The metal cabinet is to be supplied at the customers expense and the lock and key will be supplied by the company at the customers expense. All of this equipment must be approved by the Company and the arrangement must be such that the circuit breaker can not be adjusted to a new setting when the cabinet is locked. All keys to the cabinet lock shall be held by the company and no one but authorized representatives of the company shall have access to the cabinet during the term of the contract. All wiring within the customers premises and on the company's side of the circuit breaker shall be installed in metal conduit.

(7th) Circuit breakers will be set by the company at the amperage specified in the customers application.

(8th) Application for a change in the setting of the circuit breaker must be made in writing by the customer at which time he must agree to continue the service for a minimum period of twelve months from the date of the new setting of the breaker.

(9th) Service will not be supplied in parallel operation with other sources of power under this contract.

(10th) No claim for rebate due to discontinuance of service caused by the automatic operation of the circuit breaker on overloads will be allowed.

(11th) The company reserves the right to withdraw this service on twenty-four hours notice when in its judgment the further supply of this service might endanger its service to regular customers.

Rates for energy (but not minimum bills) supplied under schedule P. S. C. No. 9A are subject to the 5% discount for payment within ten days after their date of presentation as set forth in schedule P. S. C. No. 9.

THE MAN WHO GAVE HIS ALL TO HIS COUNTRY

WOODROW WILSON'S SACRIFICES AND COURAGE HAS ENSHRINED HIM IN MEN'S HEARTS.

FOUNDATION FUND GROWS

The Least One Can Do To Repay and Reward Is To Contribute To Maryland's Quota.

His face lined and seamed, his hair white, his health broken, there sits in Washington today one of the greatest and the loneliest figures in world history—Woodrow Wilson, the man who sacrificed all for his country and who today has seen his dream of world peace virtually realized.

Hale and hearty when he assumed the tremendous responsibility of the presidency, Mr. Wilson is but a wraith of his former self. The lines in his face, the whiteness of his hair, the physical disability which weights him down—these have been the rewards of his patriotic sacrifices.

But as he sits in his study, forcing his indomitable will to the lesser duties of private life, his heart is gladdened by the thought that in the minds of millions of men and women of the United States he has been enshrined.

No President has ever left the White House so broken in health as Mr. Wilson. No great figure in history was so misunderstood and to no one has more sincere recognition of the truths of ideals been so quickly accorded as to this white-haired, tragic-faced man who withstood cabals, who so courageously answered unjust attacks, who labored so earnestly for a great cause.

On no man in the history of the country did a heavier responsibility fall than upon Mr. Wilson when the momentous decision was made that the United States must throw in its lot with the Allies. No one can know what hours of mental travail were passed by this man of tragedy; how many Gethsemanes were traveled, before he found peace.

Mr. Wilson has been called a dreamer. Today his dreams are coming true. He has been called an idealist. Today the world is preparing to put his "idealist notions" into actual practice. His theories, always admitted to be morally sound, have been found economically worthy.

Picture the man to whom this belated recognition comes. Visualize that kindly face aged by pain, that formerly erect figure bowed down by the grief that so undeservedly came to him when he saw the peace structure he labored so earnestly to build come crashing down, destroyed by those whose material minds could not grasp the greatness of the vision unfolded to them.

However, it is becoming more apparent each day that the ideals for which Mr. Wilson fought and suffered are going to control the future of the world. In order to pay a tribute to Mr. Wilson and also their belief in his ideals and their faith in the League of Nations, the idea was conceived to establish the Woodrow Wilson Foundation which would consist of a fund of One Million Dollars to be contributed by the whole United States, the income of which would be used from year to year to award those who had rendered meritorious service to the public welfare for securing peace through justice.

Maryland's quota is Thirty Thousand Dollars, of which $15,000 is to be raised by the counties. It is expected that every county will raise Five hundred Dollars and it is hoped that the average county will raise Seven Hundred Dollars. It is important that contributions be made promptly to the local county chairman. Allegany, Frederick and Somerset Counties have raised their quotas. It is noteworthy that each of these counties is a Republican stronghold. The State Headquarters are located at 1006 Fidelity Building, Baltimore, Md.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear mother, Rachel E. Apsley, died one year ago February, 13, 1921.

Who's love can equal the love of a mother?
Who's devotions so loyal and true?
Who suffers so much with joy for another?
Who works with much pleasure as mother for you?
You hail with delight the friendship of others,
You revel in love of sweet heart you've won;
Yet where do you find a friendship like mother's,
Unbroken till death calls and life's work is done?

PATRIOTS ALL.

By JENNIE LITTLE.

(©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Girls and boys," said the young minister, "of course the general subject that fills the back of your heads just now is vacation. But the outstanding idea is the Fourth.

"Now, I have a question to bring before the house. Last year your celebration consisted of noise, and what were meant to be howling funny tricks. Suppose we have a worthwhile program—a parade with floats, decorated vehicles, scouts, and a picnic supper out here in the birches? Then a splendid flag raising, as the good, old one has done its duty to the point of dissolution—music, speeches and real fireworks. Let's have something that will leave a good taste in everyone's mouth."

The bell sounded dismissal, and the pupils unversed in the subtle science of mental telepathy, swarmed about the teacher and preacher like humming birds on hollyhocks, and knocked cold his plan to walk home with her alone. Don't blame the children, though, for the little teacher was the kind that the girls copy and the boys would rather look at than their lessons; while the minister, instead of being one of those solemn dignitaries whose opening conversation was sure to expose a fellow's ignorance of youngsters right off the bat, such as "I trust you attend church regularly, William. Can you recite the Commandments?" would call, "Say Bill, if you can hook a two-pounder today I'll go you one better." Yes, and dig his own bait, too.

From the hedge squirmed the undersized body and unsmiling face of a boy who had listened wistfully. Stingy Bud Daniels, on the back road, had taken him from an institution to "chore," in return for a hard bed and poor food, and he had not made a friend. Once he ventured to school, but with that cruelty to animals that children unthinkingly practice on each other, they made his life miserable.

July 4th was as perfect as if made to order, and things went off gloriously till the happy procession neared the schoolhouse.

Fire!

The flames were eating greedily through the dry timbers, and the youngsters stood aghast, for their beloved fireworks were stored inside. Suddenly a figure that had followed afar off hurled itself like a streak across the yard and into the burning building. Men tried to follow, but returned gasping, and there in an upper window poised "the Shrimp" with the new flag in his arms.

He threw it to safety, and before it touched the ground scouts caught and raised it high. The rockets exploded deafeningly, and he fell into strong arms below.

In the preacher's study he opened his eyes as the doctor gently unfastened the blistered fingers from a package pinned inside his blouse, which disclosed an exquisite pictured face called "Mother," a little flag, three medals, and a letter, frayed with much reading.

"Dear little son whom I have scarcely known—once when misfortune crushed me, I took money to buy necessities for which your angel mother was suffering, yes, dying; and justice showed no mercy. But from Charlestown prison to Flanders was a step upward, and now I am about to receive the highest promotion possible and be with her. These are all I have to bequeath you, but try and forget my great mistake by remembering that I died for America, and, whatever your lot in life, be a brave and honest gentleman."

The doctor adjusted the bandages and slipped out and got busy. Simultaneously the minister and teacher bent and kissed each scorched cheek, for their eyes were too misty to see distinctly. Their own cheeks brushed as lightly as butterfly wings and their hands met behind the pillow.

"Muriel," he said, softly, "as your spiritual adviser, may I clearly point out your patriotic duty to marry me and help me look after this hero? We'll put youth in his heart, joy in his life and flesh on his bones." He paused, for happiness and disappointment wrestled together in "the Shrimp's" face.

"I wanted to marry her myself," he gulped, "but you spoke first; so she can take her pick."

She smiled down at him. "Let's make it a three-cornered partnership, laddie boy. I fancy you would like me better as a sister, while Mr. Thayer has no use whatever for sisters."

But why the band playing and people cheering to beat the band? The doctor re-entered, and, wrapping "the Shrimp" in a rug, carried him out where the assembled village waited to do him homage.

The scoutmaster saluted. "We want an 18-carat American like you in our ranks as soon as you can join us," and then, in behalf of all, he unfurled a beautiful silken flag and presented it to the speechless boy.

As the cheering burst anew he buried his poor singed head in the doctor's shoulder, and, hidden by the sheltering folds of the starry banner, the healing tears washed away the accumulated bitterness of eleven lonely years, for never again would he be "Nobody's Kid."

A TRIBUTE TO A GREAT AMERICAN

"Do you covet distinction? You will never get it by serving yourself. Do you covet honor? You will get it only as a servant of mankind."—Woodrow Wilson's Address at Swarthmore College, October 5, 1913.

Within a few days the American public will be given an opportunity to express tangibly its faith in liberal ideals, and in the world democracy for which Woodrow Wilson has been the chief spokesman. This opportunity will be the national free-will offering for the endowment of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, the purpose of which is to make periodic awards, in Mr. Wilson's name, for distinguished public service. The collection, under the auspices of a nationally representative committee, which begins this week, will have as its goal the raising of a fund of $1,000,000 or more.

Woodrow Wilson saw beyond the momentous conflict of his day and made clear to men certain ideals of world relationship that helped them to prosecute the ugly business of war until victory rested with the peoples of democracy. Plain men, the men in the ranks, had begun to believe that the world had come to a pass where living was beyond endurance; yet they felt, vaguely maybe, that they were fighting and dying to establish some principle of human freedom which would in effect constitute a rebirth of civilization. It remained for the American to become their highly articulate spokesman. By word and deed he clarified the issue so that all the world could see it as a struggle between democracy and autocracy.

Any student of Mr. Wilson's life, any undertaking related to him, must come to consider this question: What is the motive that actuated him in his public life? His ideals have been published to the world; but what is the source from which they come? The answer seems to be found in those prophetic words uttered early in his first term as President of the United States, "Do you covet distinction? You will never get it by serving yourself. Do you covet honor? You will get it only as a servant of mankind."

The Foundation created in his name can find no better watchwords.

On Christmas Eve, 1920, a group of women met to consider what was then a nebulous wish to pay some sort of tribute to the man who was shortly to leave the White House. There was no doubt in their minds as to the verdict of history; rather the thought was to establish a precedent, if possible, and honor a great American while he lived. Great men had seldom been so honored.

The thought of a tribute was discussed among the women and then presented to a group of men, friends of Mr. Wilson and former members of his official family, and finally the nebulous desire to honor him while he lived became the Woodrow Wilson Foundation.

The materialized idea has been developed far beyond the thought of a tribute to the former President. It is to be that, of course, but chiefly it is to perpetuate his ideals of democracy and human freedom, and in such form as to be both an inspiration and a reward to other men whose ambition it is to "enable the world to live more amply, with greater vision, with a finer spirit of hope and achievement"

The Foundation, "created in recognition of the national and international services of Woodrow Wilson," will provide awards for "meritorious service to democracy, public welfare, liberal thought or peace through justice."

The founding of an institution which is to be a significant demonstration of America's belief in idealism is an historical occasion, and to be commemorated as such. An emblem has been adopted which will permanently represent the spirit of the Foundation. The central feature of the emblem is a portrait of Woodrow Wilson.

A number of reproductions of this emblem have been struck off in the form of certificates to be presented to subscribers to the endowment. They will mark the recipient as one of the founders.

It is the present purpose of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation to raise the endowment. When that has been done a board of trustees composed of eminent Americans will be appointed and entrusted with the administration of the fund and the granting of the awards.

Maximilian Harden has said of the war and its aftermath: "Only one conqueror's work will endure—Wilson's thought."

Acting with Franklin D. Roosevelt, the national chairman, is an executive committee of national distinction, including Cleveland H. Dodge, chairman.

For Maryland the state chairman is Clarence K. Bowie, Baltimore head quarters, 1006 Fidelity Building, Baltimore. Mrs. S. Johnson Poe, Baltimore is chairman of the women's committee.

On the national committee, among the Maryland members are Governor Albert C. Ritchie, Dean John H. Latane, of Johns Hopkins University; ex-Governor Harrington and Hon Blair Lee.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Charles Morris vs. Elsie Morris

In the Circuity Court for Kent County
In Equity. No. 2158.

The object of the Bill filed in the above entitled case is to procure a divorce in "a vincule matrimonii" for the Plaintiff, a resident of Kent County, Maryland, from the Defendant.

The Bill states:

1. That in October of the year, 1908, he was married to his wife, Elsie Morris, with whom he resided in Kent County, Maryland, until some time during the year 1918.

2. That, though the conduct of your orator towards his wife, the said Elsie Morris, has always been kind, affectionate and above reproach, the said Elsie Morris has, without any just cause or reason, abandoned and deserted him, and has declared her intention to live with him no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation.

3. That ever since their said marriage your orator has behaved himself as a faithful, and affectionate husband.

4. That your orator and the said defendant, Elsie Morris, have had no children born to them from said marriage.

5. That the said defendant, Elsie Morris, is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, whose present whereabouts is unknown.

6. That your orator is a resident of Kent County, Maryland, and has been for many years.

It is thereupon this 3st day of Jan. A. D. 1922, ordered by the Circuit Court for Kent County, in Equity, that the Plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Kent county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 6th day of March next, giving notice to the said Elsie Morris, non-resident defendant, warning her to appear in this Court in person, or by Solicitor on or before the 22nd day of March next, to show cause, if any she has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.
