JAMES F. MELVIN DEAD

James F. Melvin, formerly a member of the Maryland Press Association, died on November 11 at Salmon, Idaho, where for the past 10 years he had been in the newspaper business as publisher of the Idaho Recorder.

Mr. Melvin was a native of Caroline county, Md., being a son of the late Thomas and Mary Frances Melvin. He was a brother of the late George T. Melvin, and of the late Howard Melvin, of the Denton Journal. He established the Ellicott City Times, which paper he successfully published until he went West, nearly ten years ago. He was a student at the college here at one time. Mr. Melvin leaves two sons, Thomas and James M. Melvin, who are engaged in newspaper work in Western cities.

What Kind of Indigestion Have You Got?

(Published by request of medical profession.)

Up to the present time the efforts of the Society for the Control of Cancer to educate the people in regard to indigestion has apparently had little or no effect on reducing the number of deaths from cancer of the stomach, cancer of the colon (large gut), and cancer of the rectum, and all kinds of cancer within the abdomen. These unfortunate patients still come to the surgical clinics of the country in the late stage of cancer. Yet, the histories of these patients show that they have known that they have been ill for months or years. Many have never consulted a doctor, but have tried to treat themselves by patent medicines and different kinds of diet.

Fortunately the majority of patients who suffer from the different kinds of indigestion do not develop cancer. Many of them carry their indigestion to their graves at a ripe old age.

The medical profession feels that they can reduce the number of deaths from cancer of stomach, colon, and rectum, by getting the people to be more interested in the kind of indigestion they suffer from, to excite their curiosity as to its cause rather than stimulate their hope to get some medicine or food for its relief.

The first thing to do for indigestion is to find its cause and if possible to remove the cause. This means a thorough examination by some trained member of the medical profession. Many questions must be asked about your symptoms, x-rays must be made after taking bismuth by the mouth; the rectum must be examined with the finger and an electrically lighted protoscope; a stomach tube must be passed and the chemistry of the gastric juice analyzed; specimen of the blood and urine must be studied chemically and microscopically.

To the majority this examination seems formidable. With the exception of the stomach tube it is not, and the common report of the discomfort of swallowing a rubber tube, like Mark Twain's death, are grossly exaggerated.

Death from cancer of the stomach, colon and rectum will never be reduced until the public are educated to demand such an examination by an expert member of the medical profession, or in one of the hospital clinics of the country. We should change the expression "take your medicine" to that of "take your examination."

Everyone is familiar with indigestion. The message or symptoms come from that part of your body called the abdomen or "belly." This is a cavity below the diaphragm and above the pelvis. You may have discomfort, pain, colic, nausea, vomiting, belching of gas, heart burn, constipation, diarrhoea, blood in the stools; the abdomen may distend, it may become tender. These symptoms may be brought on by food or not; you may or may not be jaundiced or yellow. But whatever the character whatever the severity, the right thing to do is to seek an examination and find out the cause. Often the examination ceases at the end of a careful history. All the examination may not necessarily be made, but the essential thing is the examination. Up to the present time medical science has nothing else to offer, if you wish the proper thing done.

Carry in your mind that ringing sentence of one of the patriots of this country: "Millions for defense, and not one cent for Tribute," and translate it: "Millions for examination and not one cent for treatment until the examination is as complete as possible."
