How the High Tariff Causes Over-production.

In his ninth paper on "Trust and Monopolies" the Hon. Wm. L. Wilson explains how the high tariff causes over-production and leads to the formation of trusts to maintain prices and to control supply. He says:

But the tariff is otherwise responsible for trusts. The high bounties it offers in many industries cause an extraordinary rush into them on the part of those who are tempted by the promise of greater profits than can be made in industries pursued under normal conditions. This rush leads, sooner or later, to excessive production, and then, to escape the loss threatened by an overstocked market, resort is had to some kind of combination to maintain prices and to control supply.

The circle is, first, excessive stimulation; next, excessive production, and lastly, combinations against the consumer. I know it is strenuously denied by defenders of our tariff that it is chargeable with the great movement in the United States in recent months toward the formation of trusts, and we are told that we are not the only people who are the victims of these combinations. I have already said there may be natural monopolies, as when a single country or region produces the entire supply. In such a case—whether that region be one of our States, or England, Holland or even the pretty republic of San Marino—it is perfectly feasible for producers to form a trust if consumers must and will still buy their products at artificial prices. Combinations of some kind or attempts to form them are as old as the history of trade. I do not deny that a trust such as the Standard Oil or the whisky trust might arise in any country under the same conditions, tariff or no tariff. But such combinations as our trusts in the prime necessaries of life, in food and clothing, which are produced by no one people, but freely in many countries, can be formed only in a country that surrounds its producers with a wall of protecting duties against supplies from without. The impracticability of forming an international combination among producers of an article found in many countries is shown by the collapse of the recent copper pool, carrying with it the second strongest bank in France, but, as I suspect, not affecting the power of the owners of the great Michigan copper mines to continue exacting from American consumers the excessive prices made possible by the high tariff rates they secured from Congress over the veto of Andrew Johnson.

The democrats of Ohio are going into the fall campaign with vigor and think they have a chance to win both the governorship and a majority of the Legislature. Campbell, the nominee for Governor, is popular and will bring out a full vote.

SAMUEL HICKS, near the Court House,
Gives his Exclusive Attention to HORSE - SHOEING!
I have learned the business thoroughly and have given it my study, and had much experience in the work of Horse-Shoeing. For this reason I think I am better prepared to do Horse-Shoeing than shops which do all kinds of Blacksmithing.
My system of Shoeing prevents CUTTING and FORGING and preserves the horses' feet.
My best recommendation is the universal satisfaction of my customers, and I have no hesitation in referring to any for whom I have done work.
My prices I guarantee to be as low as the lowest.

The said respective officers of registration shall sit at the said several sittings in the several counties with open doors from 8 o'clock A. M., until 6 o'clock P.
