CHESTERTOWN - NOV. 9, 1889.

He Met a Man With a Load of Corn.

I started out from the hotel at Paterson to drive across the country to a small town in company with a parlor organ agent. He had been driking pretty freely, and as soon as clear of the town he observed:

"You never saw me fight, of course, but I will soon give you an exhibition of what I can do. I feel in the mood this morning and I'm going to lick the first man I can pick a fuss with."

"I wouldn't get into any trouble," I suggested.

"Oh there won't be any trouble about it. I'll bring it around so as to have the other man begin it, and then I'll polish him off and drive on."

About two miles out we met a young farmer driving into town with a wagon box full of corn. He gave more than half the road, but the organ man pulled up, gave me a nudge, and exclaimed:

"Young man, do you want to run over us?"

"No, sir."

"You act as if you did. It is evident that you think yourself very smart, but you'll meet a man some day who'll teach you a lesson."

"How?"

"By giving you a licking."

"Perhaps you want to try?"

"What! Don't you talk that way to me!" shouted the agent, as he nudged me to signify that the leaven was working.

"If you do, just come down!" continued the young man as he climbed over the wheel.

"I think I will!" replied the agent. "I'm a peaceful man, and I don't believe it was two minutes before he lay in the May weeds in the ditch, licked to insensibility. The young fellow knocked him out with the very first blow, and then sat down and hammered him blind, when he let up he nodded to me climbed upon the corn, and as far as I could see him he never turned back. I worked over the agent a quarter of an hour to revive him, and another quarter to get him into the buggy, and it was only as I drove on that he rallied enough to dreamily inquire:

"Will you please tell me whether I am selling lightning rods or wind mills, and also what my name is?"

Notes from Carlisle, Pa.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—In my wandering thoughts Old Kent and its enticements comes to my mind. It makes me think of the jolly good times I have spent there, and I often wish I were there, if it were only for a short time. Well, as it is with a great many others, like myself in seeing new things and places, I like to tell about the many curiosities and sceneries that I see in life. Of the many different places I have visited, Carlisle for its size is the most moral and quiet and its society in general is the most elevating kind. It is a town of intelligent and wide awake people attending to their own business and letting others alone. These are generally the kind that prosper in life. It is also quite a business place of many different kinds well divided; not too many of any one kind to be successful. The inhabitants of Carlisle are principally people of money and enterprise. I have not had the opportunity to see much of the surrounding country yet, but one of the greatest curiosities to me was a cave, which was discovered by a company of the students. It is said to be two miles long, running back under the earth. There are two prongs to it, one is only 3-8 of a mile long. While investigating some one proposed to get some candles and go in, so we all consented and got fixed up for the trip and started. Everything worked all right and we reached the end of the short prong of the cave all safe and sound. Some places we would have to almost crawl and other places were high enough and big enough in which to get a small sized cabin. We all got a piece of clay out of the far end of the cave to remember our little exploring expedition. On our return we passed several pleasing objects. One of which was the Indian School, in which we took great interest, for it was quite a curiosity to some of us to see an institution of that kind. It is well attended by both sexes from different tribes.

There is also an academy here for young lads which is well attended. As time is precious, I will have to close for this time but will in the near future try and give a description of the surrounding country and of the many good things which God has blessed this country with.

Not all they say, or do can make
My head or tooth or finger ache.
Or mar my shape, or scar my face
Or put one feature out of place.
Nor will ten thousand lies
Make one less virtuous learned or wise.
The most effectual way to balk
Their malice is to let them talk.

A Remedy for Insomnia.

The abuse of the eye is the crime of the age. I am prepared to demonstrate that at least nine-tenths of the prevailing sleeplessness, of which we hear so much, is due to nervousness directly traceable to the optic nerve. We are wearing our eyes out over books and desks and types, and the effect shows itself not only in the appearance of the organ itself, but in its retroactive effect on nerve and brain. I have discovered a remedy for sleeplessness, and for the reason I have never known it to fail I am fortified in my opinion that the whole trouble arises from the overstrain of the eyes. Take a soft cloth—say a piece of napped towel—and fold in it two small pieces of ice at a distance apart to exactly cover the eyes when the cloth is laid across them. Then lie down, adjust the cloth with the ice over the closed eyes and you will be asleep in a very short while.—St. Louis Republic.

RECOVERED HIS REASON AND APPLEJACK.—A Weston, W. Va., special says: David Anderson, a patient recently discharged from the State Asylum for the Insane at that place, has developed a remarkable memory. Anderson first showed evidences of insanity in 1883. He became very violent. When the officers started to arrest him he was on his way home with a gallon jug of applejack. On catching sight of the officers Anderson secreted the jug. For the ensuing six years he was a raving maniac, and for four years was in close confinement. A year ago he was discharged as cured. The first thing he did was to make a bee-line for the jug of applejack, and he found it where he had buried it in 1883.

HORSE-SHOEING
Headquarters!
SAMUEL HICKS, near the Court House,
Gives his Exclusive Attention to HORSE-SHOEING!
I have learned the business thoroughly and have given it my study, and had much experience in the work of Horse-Shoeing. For this reason I think I am better prepared to do Horse-Shoeing than shops which do all kinds of Blacksmithing.
☞My system of Shoeing prevents CUTTING and FORGING and preserves the horses' feet.
My best recommendation is the universal satisfaction of my customers, and I have no hesitation in referring to any for whom I have done work.
My prices I guarantee to be as low as the lowest.
Horsemen! Come and see me, and I will save you trouble and expense.
