"The Button Behind."—M. Quad.

"I was a-chittering with Tom Oldham, who's bin up no'th, and Tom was a-saying as how the Yankees wore white shirts all the week, and as how they buttoned up behind. Reckon Tom was a-lying, wasnt he?"

"Hardly. Most every man wears a white shirt."

"Regular cotton?"

"Yes."

"Washed and starched?"

"Yes."

"I can't hardly forereach (comprehend) it, but I reckon it must be so. How in snakes do they button 'em up in behind? It's reg'lar tomfool fur a man to w'ar a shirt bosom on his back."

"That's what I say!" exclaimed two of the women.

"But they dont' wear 'em there at all," I replied.

"Then how kin they button up behind?"

"Mebbe he'un has got on one," suggested one of the women.

"Then he'un will show how it works," added one of the men, in a tone of expectancy.

I took off my coat and vest and submitted to examination. It was the pioneer button-behind in that locality. Not one of them had a clear idea of how they were made, any many and varied mere the expressions of astonishment and satisfaction.

After the marvellous shirt question had been disposed of we had some hard cider and fried-cakes for refreshments, after which our hostess popped a panful of corn and brought in a basket of apples, during the eating of which two of the men told bear stories and one woman sang an old ballad. Later on, after another story and two more songs, a colored man came in with a fiddle, four or five other people dropped in, and our host exclaimed in a loud voice:

"All of you'uns git ready fur a cotilion, and he'un with the patent shirt kin take the head o' the set and choose the best lookin' woman fur pardner. Any of you'uns who heven't met up with that shirt kin inspect it arter the dance. All ready now—first four right and left."

It Was Raining.

Yesterday afternoon while the rain was pouring down a citizen left the post-office to encounter an acquaintance who was also sheltered by an umbrella.

"Raining, isn't it?" queried the first.

"Hey?"

"Raining, isn't it?"

"I'd like to see you a momeut," was the reply. "Come up stairs."

The two passed up, traversed the dark hall to its darkest corner, and then No. 2 turned to No. 1 with:

"Do you take me for an infernal idiot?"

"Why, no, of course not."

"Do you suppose I'm carrying an umbrella around to keep the sun off at this time of year?"

"No."

"I'm carrying it to keep the rain off, am I not?"

"Of course."

"Well, then, it rains. You know it rains. Everybody in town knows it rains. Now you go on and let people alone."

"But—but—"

"That's all. You let it rain. She knows her business. You just attend to your own affairs and let the weather alone. Good day sir."

And he went clumping down stairs and left the other to follow at his leisure.

PRESERVING EGGS.—Preserving eggs for better prices in the fall and winter, is something all have a right to do, if it can be done. Try this: Get some boxes and some fine dry salt, cover the bottom of the box or boxes with the salt, then place your eggs small end down in rows, no two touching, then fill in with salt, so on layer after layer, until the box is full. Set the box in some cool place and let it alone until you wish to remove the eggs. No turning the box upside down every other day. The salt will enter the pores of the shell, which is all the better for the egg, while on the other hand if you preserve them with lime, linseed oil, flaxseed, etc., you run the risk of your eggs spoiling by the ingredients entering through the pores of the shell.

A NOVEL CURE was effected by the use of the dynamo recently at Westgate-on-Sea, England. A Mr. Brown was fitting a false bottom to a grate, and while chipping it to make it fit a very small splinter of iron flew off and struck him in the eye. An electrical engineer, who met him shortly after, seeing his plight, took him to a dynamo that was working near by. Brown placed his eye as close as possible to the machine, and the magnetic attraction was sufficiently intense to withdraw the splinter of iron from the eye, which was instantly relieved and which gave no further trouble.

THE salt industry in Southern Kansas is assuming majestic proportions. It is said that the salt taken up at Wellington, in that State is the purest in the world. A dozen great salt plants are already in operation, and others will soon be established. In a few years all the salt used for ordinary purposes west of the Mississippi river will probably be supplied by Kansas.

IT IS RUMORED from abroad that P. T. Barnum is very anxious to return home with a title. The fact that Edison was made an Italian count excites his ambition. How would the title Lord Jumbo of Bridgeport suit the veteran showman?
