CHESTERTOWN - MAY 17, 1890

"Gwine Back Home."

As we waited in the L. & N. Depot at Nashville for the train some one began crying, and an excitement was raised among the passengers. A brief investigation proved that it was an old colored man who was giving away to his grief. Three or four people remarked on the strangeness of it, but for some time no one said anything to him. Then a depot policeman came forward and took him by the arm, and shook him roughly and said:

"See here, old man, you want to quit that! You are drunk, and if you make any more disturbance I'll lock you up!"

"'Deed, but I hain't drunk," replied the old man, as he removed his tear stained handkerchief. "Ize losted my ticket an' money, an' dat's what's de matter."

"Bosh! You never had any money to lose! You dry up or away you go?"

"What's the matter yere?" queried a man as he came forward.

The old man recognized the dialect of the Southerner in an instant, and repressing his emotions with a great effort, he answered:

"Say, Mars Jack, I'ze been robbed."

"My name is White."

"Well, dèn, Mars White, somebody has dun robbed me of ticket an' money."

"Where were you going?"

"Gwine down into Kintuck, whar I was bo'n an' raised."

"Where's that?"

"Nigh to Bolin' Green, sah, an' when de wah dun sot me free I come up dis way.—Hain't bin home since, sah."

"And you had a ticket?"

"Yes, sah, an' ober $20 in cash. Bin savin' up for ten years, sah."

"What do you want to go back for?"

"To see de hills an' de fields, de tobacker an' de co'n, Mars Preston an' de good old missus. Why, Mars White, I'ze done been prayin' fur it fo' twenty years. Sometimes de longin' has cum till I couldn't hardly hold myself."

"It's too bad."

"De ole woman is buried down dar, Mars White—de old woman an' free children. I kin 'member de spot same as jf I seed it yisterday. You go half way to de fust tobacker house an' den you turn to the left an' go down to de branch whar de wimmen used to wash. Dar's fo' trees on de odder bank, an' right under 'em is whar dey is all buried. I kin see it! I kin lead you right to the spot!"

"And what will you do when you get there? asked the stranger.

"Go up to de big house a' ax Mars Preston to let me lib out all the rest of my days right dar. I'ze old an' all alone, an' I want to be nigh my dead. Sorter company for me when my heart aches."

"Where were you robbed?"

"Out doahs, dar, I reckon, in de crowd.—See? De pocket is all cut out. I'ze dreamed an' pondered—I'ze had dis journey in my mind fer years, an years an' now I'ze dun bin robbed an' can't go!"

He fell to crying, and the policeman came forward in an officious manner.

"Stand back, sir!" commanded the stranger. "If you lay a hand on that nigger I'll kill you! Now gentlemen, you have heard the story. I'm going to help the old man back to die on the old plantation and be buried alongside of his dead."

"So am I!" called twenty men in chorus and within five minutes we had raised enough to buy him a ticket and leave $50 to spare. And when he realized his good luck the old snow-haired black fell upon his knees in that crowd and prayed:

"Lord, I'ze bin a believer in You all my days, an' I now dun axes You to watch ober dese here white folks dat has believed in me an' helped me to go back to de ole home."

And I do believe that nine-tenths of that crowd had tears in their eyes as the gateman called out the train for Louisville.

A Nice Point on the Color Question.

Judge Bond, in the United States Circuit Court at Baltimore on the 2d inst., on appeal, dismissed the libel of Rev. Robert A. McGuinn, a colord Baptist minister, of Annapolis, against the owners and captain of the steamer Mason L. Weems. In July, 1887, Mr. McGuinn purchased a first-class ticket from Baltimore to Millenbeck, Va., on the steamer. There were two supper tables in all respects equal, one for colored passengers and the other for white. Mr. McGuinn took his seat at the table for white persons. He refused to go to the other table. The only three white passengers refused to go to the other table occupied by him and took their seats at the other table, intended for colored persnos, where no other persons were seated. Mr. McGuinn remained at the white passengers table, where he was politely served. The Judge said that all common carries are bound to furnish accomodations without distinction of race or color. A first-class ticket insures first-class accommodations. The steamboat company made a separation, but no distinction between passengers holding such tickets. The appellant, the Judge said, appears to be the only person on board who made a distinction or put any affront on the colored passengers by refusing to sit with them. The libel was dismissed with costs. —Sun.

Have Patience.

Let us do all honor to this quiet but powerful and valuable quality, patience. Let us especially promote its culture in the young, for, like many other things, it may be formed into habit. The childish impatience, so often manifested, may easily be hecked, and the child be trained to perseverance and self-control, if wise and gentle influence be carefully exercised. And, as all power is developed by use, so every voluntary effort to be patient will increase the strength it requires, and every new accretion of the power of patience will render the character more noble, and the life more valuable.

AN ICE MINE.—Howardsville, Col., has a curiosity in the shape of an ice mine. The mine is owned by parties who in the earlier days ran a tunnel through the frozen ground and struck a spring beyond. As the water flows out of the tunnel it freezes and the tunnel is now filled nearly to the roof with pure ice. It has long supplied ice for the town, and never thaws, winter or summer.

THERE is a firm in Cincinnati which each year beats 21,000 gold dollars into gold leaf, and as each dollar can be beat into a sheet that will carpet two rooms 16½ feet square, some idea may be formed of its tenuity. It requires 1,400 of gold leaf to equal in thickness a sheet of writing paper, and takes 280,000 of them, piled one upon the other, to equal an inch in thickness!

Their Origin.

Ohio is an Indian word signifying "beautiful."

Montana, from mont, or monet, meaning "hill."

Georgia was named in honor of George II, of England.

Nevada is from the Spanish, and signifies "white with snow."

Virginia was named in honor of Elizabeth the virgin queen of England.

Nebraska is an Indian term, signifying "water valley or "shallow river."

Louisiana was named by the French in 1682, in honor of Louis XIV of France.

Missouri is named after the Missouri river. The Signification of the term is Mud river.

Vermomt is named after the Green mountains, from the French words vert, gren, and mont, mounfain.

Wisconsin signifies in the Indian language "wild, rushing river." The state took its name from the river.

Delaware from Lord De la Ware, or Delaware, governor of Virginia, who entered the bay (Delaware) in 1610.

Maine is supposed to have been named by the early French settlers after the ancient province of Maine in France.

Massachusetts is named after a tribe of Indians of the great Algonquin stock. It signifies "about the great hills."

Excellent Disinfectant.

Chloride of lime is the safest, as well as one of the best of disinfectants. It owes its merits to the free chlorine gas which it contains when fresh and gives off slowly into the air. When used in sufficient quantity in a room or chosen space, it combats much of its impurities. As for the germs of disease, this agent is something of an enemy to them, although not a powerful one. It is customary in contagious disease to lay the chloride of lime about in saucers. Some good is certainly done in that way, but it is measured by the quantity of lime used, which in order to have a very decided effect, must be considerable. It acts exceedingly well in solution with water as a disinfectant of "wash clothing" which has been within the atmosphere of a sick room containing a patient ill with an infectious disease. Some use it in solution, to disinfect water closets and bathpipes; but it is scarcely fit for that purpose, as the chloride of lime in it must be confined in order to render it efficacious as a disinfectant. We occasionally see it sprinkled about in foul places, such as open drains, on heaps of filth, etc.—places freely exposed to the air. In such situations it is absolutely powerless to do good. It must be in practically closed space where the gases arising from it can be confined until they can do their work.

Fair War Story.

A rather fair war story was related in the delegate's hearing, and a new one to him. It was one of the late General Kilpatrick's dashing campaigns. The command was preparing to encamp after a long ride, and there was a casting about for water supply. Scouts had been sent in all directions, but there had been no encouraging finds reported. Among these scouts or prospectors was an Irishman, who well filled the place of a headquarters' cook bodyservant to the general, and also of wit in general to the command. He was a prime favorite with all by reason of his constantly bubbling spirits and fun, and Kilpatrick especially rather doted on him. Presently this man returned, and exclaimed as he came into the presence of Kilpatrick. "General, I had great luck, indade. I discovered a lake!" "Ah, that is great news, indeed; and where is it, my good man?" "In the bottom of the coffee-pot, sir, and divil a shtop can I put to it." It was not related what effect this declaration had on the dashing cavalry commander, but it is reasonable to suppose that there was enough flavoring of wit in it to shield the jolly cook from all evil consequences of his cheekiness.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

They All Lost It.

An old gentleman, evidently a gatherer of statistics, but with a kindly face which shaded off to a something like philanthropy about the edges, stood at the junction yesterday gazing abstractedly down the street. Suddenly he stepped up to a gentleman who was awaiting a cable train and touching him lightly on the shoulder, said:

"Excuse me, but did you just drop a twenty dollar gold piece?" at the same time holding out in his hand a coin of the denomination mentioned.

The gentleman questioned looked a moment at the coin, assumed a look of excitement, made a hasty search of his pockets, and said, "Why, so I did, and I hadn't missed it," holding out an eager hand.

The old man slowly drew a note book and said: "I thought so." He then took the name and address of the loser and, dropping the coin in his pocket, turned away.

"Well," said the other, "do you want it all as a reward?"

"Oh, I did not find one," said the benevolent old man, "but it struck me that in a large city like this there must be a great deal of money lost and upon inquiry I find you are the 81st man who has lost a $20 gold piece this very morning."

Good Advice.

Don't sign, says a cotemporary. But such a caution as this seems hardly necessary to any person in the full possession of his faculties. Yet it is astonishing how many people there are, including good business men, who attach their signature to papers or documents whose contents might have a serious bearing upon themselves or their affairs, with scarcely a glance at their contents. Carelessness in failing to acquaint themselves with the contents of a paper before signing it has worked incalculable harm to thousands of well-intentioned people. Then read all papers carefully before you sign them, particularly those that express or imply anything in the nature of a contract or a legal obligation.

A NOVEL WEDDING.—A novel wedding took place in Boone county W. Va. The combined ages of the bridal party were 249 years, the baidegroom being 101, the bride 61, the groom's best man 83, the bridesmaid 74. The bride was dressed in her first wedding trousseau, which was made 64 years ago. The bride was as frisky as a young damsel, and the bridegroom ascended one of the highest mountains in the county on a time wager and own.

THERE is nothing lower than hypocricy. To profess friendship and show enmity is a sure proof of total depravity.

THE great secret of happiness is to throw one's self into the circumstances that surround one.

MAN will make ten words to the expression of his joy, and fifty to lament his sorrows.

Cures All Diseases.

After myself and wife had used your Microbe Killer with great benefit, although I have not a farthing's pecuniary interest in your remedy, unsolicited and on my own responsibility, I wrote to nearly forty of those whose certificates you publish, embracing nearly all diseases. "Please give your present impressions of Radam's Microbe Killer." I am happy to state the replies were not only favorable but enthusiastic. Many of the cures of complicated diseases almost surpass belief.
