THE ONLY WAY TO REDUCE TAXES IS TO SPEND LESS MONEY.

More consistence is needed about this tax reduction business. Folks who deplore tax burdens and demand their reduction rarely do anything else to effect it. For they demand all kinds of expenditure, vote this issue of bonds and ask more and more service from every branch of government — national, state, county and municipal—ignoring oftimes the plain fact that everything secured in this way costs all of its worth and then some and has to be provided by means of taxation.

The only way to reduce tax rates is to spend less money.

LET'S STOP IT

"The automobile is an instrument of death if carelessly driven. Run by a drunken driver it is a potential juggernaut. Everything possible should be done to prevent persons under the influence of liquor from running cars, and those who disregard the laws in this respect should be jailed and their licenses taken away forthwith. The risk to the public is too great to permit driving by persons who because of liquor are not in full possession of their faculties."

LENTEN SEASON IS HERE

It has been said that not another day comes upon the earth with such universal acceptance as Easter. By the same token Lent, which leads to it, finds a growing observance among the various denominations.

Lent gives the great opportunity for self-examination. "The more perfect the knowledge we obtain of self the greater will be our ability to improve self," says Bishop John Gardner Murray in his pastoral. "We must know why and where we are wrong before we can apply the remedy." Lent provides the season of reflection, and in it one may see the folly and the waste of what the good Bishop calls "the whip and spur of social dissipation and fulmination." Then the lessons we learn in Lent should be carried over the whole year, forgetting those things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before.
