THIS WOMAN FOUND RELIEF

After Long Suffering by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

In a little town of the middle West, was a discouraged woman. For four months she had been in such poor health that she could not stoop to put on her own shoes. Unable to do her work, unable to go out of doors or enjoy a friendly chat with her neighbors, life seemed dark indeed to Mrs. Daugherty.

Then one day, a booklet was left at her front door. Idly she turned the pages. Soon she was reading with quickened interest. The little booklet was filled with letters from women in conditions similar to hers who had found better health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"I began taking the Vegetable Compound," Mrs. Daugherty writes, "and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to everyone I see who has trouble like mine, and you can use these facts as a testimonial. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—MRS. ED. DAUGHERTY, 1308 Orchard Ave., Muscatine, Iowa.

I aunt of Cowardice Too Much for "Tough"

There is a dentist at One Hundred and Sixty-third street and Third avenue, the Bronx, who is a strong believer in psychology and he calls upon Henry M. Schiller, equity clerk of the Bronx, to back up his latest demonstration of faith in that science. The other day there appeared at his office for treatment an inmate of the Bronx county jail. The patient had complained for several days about a painful tooth and Sheriff Lester Patterson finally ordered him taken to the dentist.

The prisoner was a real, bold holdup man who had used a gun fearlessly in carrying out his crimes. He showed the average human trait of weakness in the dental chair, however, when the doctor appeared with the forceps, and demanded gas. He was a drug addict and the dentist, after administering twice the normal dose of gas without putting the patient into a coma, started to use the forceps.

The prisoner howled and refused to let the dentist near him. Several attempts brought the same antics from the man in the chair. Finally the doctor winked to the keeper and Equity Clerk Schiffer and the pair left the room. In a few moments all was quiet and the prisoner walked out gazing intently at a big molar in the palm of his hand. Schiffer's query brought the explanation from the dentist.

"The old psychology did it," said the doctor, "I told him you two had sneered and that one of you said he was a brave guy with a gun in his hand, and a helpless holdup victim in front of the gun, but when he was unarmed he was a coward and whimpered like a baby. That turned the trick. 'I'll show them,' he said and he gripped the arms of the chair and in a moment the job was over."—New York Evening World.

Plenty of Experience

A burly man sauntered into the premises of a film producing company and managed to reach the managing director's office without being accosted.

He told the director he wished to obtain an engagement with the company. As the applicant looked a most unlikely person for such a post, the director asked if he had had any previous experience.

"I get Saturday afternoon off," stated the would-be player, "an' I reckon I might as well spend the time actin' for picters."

"But have you had any experience in moving pictures?" asked the director, who was rather doubtful on the point.

"Have I?" exclaimed the man, and his voice was full of scorn. "I've been vanman to the Shiftum Furniture Removing company for the past five years."

Bit Too Even

An even disposition is desirable at the bridge table, but not just the kind of an even disposition referred to by the wife when she described her husband as always grouchy in the morning.

Left Splendid Record in War and Council

John White Geary, who was born in Pennsylvania in 1819, seemed to do things in pairs; he studied both civil engineering and law; was territorial governor of Kansas and governor of Pennsylvania and won fame in two wars.

At the outbreak of the Mexican war he was chief engineer and superintendent of the Allegheny Portage railway. He helped to recruit the Second Pennsylvania volunteer regiment, in which he became lieutenant colonel and served through the war. After the capture of the Mexican capital he was promoted to colonel and was placed in command of that city.

Later he settled in San Francisco, where, in 1849, he was appointed the first American postmaster. In 1856 he was appointed by President Pierce as territorial governor of Kansas. At the beginning of the Civil war he raised the Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania volunteer infantry, of which he became colonel. In 1862 he was made brigadier general, and three years later received the brevet rank of major general. In 1866 he was elected governor of Pennsylvania; was re-elected in 1869 and served until within eighteen days of his death, which occurred February 8, 1873, in Harrisburg.—Kansas City Star.

Darkness Thought to Herald Judgment Day

Famous dark days have occurred in history when great fear seized the people because of abnormal darkness in the middle of the day. May 19, 1780, is famous as "Black Friday," or "The Dark Day" in the history of New England. Schools were dismissed, work ceased, barnyard fowl went to roost, ordinary print could not be read at noon without artificial light, and candles were lighted. Many over-conscientious people thought the Day of Judgment had arrived. The Connecticut legislature, which was in session at Hartford, adjourned at 11 a. m. It is related that in the council, which was also in session on that day, a motion to adjourn having been made, Col. Abraham Davenport of Stamford rose to his feet and said: "I am against adjournment. Either the Day of Judgment is at hand or it is not. If it is not, there is no cause for adjournment. If it is, I wish to be found in the line of my duty. I wish candles to be brought." No satisfactory explanation for this extraordinary darkness throughout New England has ever been given by scientists.

Hunger Supreme Motive

Hunger is a more compelling motive than either mother love or the desire for companionship, Dr. F. A. Moss of George Washington university, discovered when he made a series of tests with rats. The reactions of the rodents, he believes, fixes rules that also will apply to other animals, and, possibly, to man. Doctor Moss used a cage built in three parts, with the center section so wired that a rat passing through it received a slight electric shock. Ten rats were placed in one end and food in the other. Within 72 hours eight of the 10 risked the shock to reach the food. In the next experiment mother rats were installed in one section and their young in the other, but only three of the ten mothers would pass the charged wires.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Only Little Sunlight

House plants require some direct sunlight, says Nature Magazine. While geraniums and the like thrive in a bright sunny window, ferns and palms prefer a shadier location, with only a little sunlight. Too hot a house is unhealthy for plants, but a sudden change of temperature is worst of all.

Hard Luck Tales

When you hear a fellow wailing that his life would have been far more of a financial success had he had his own way about things, you may usually draw the conclusion that a business crash has been averted for the sole reason that he was not in position to direct.—Decatur (Ala.) Daily.

Faces of Crystal

Every crystal has a definite molecular structure and its outward form is bounded by a number of faces resulting from the regular arrangement of the particles of the substance which is undergoing solidification. Although the faces often develop unequally, the angles between them remain constant.

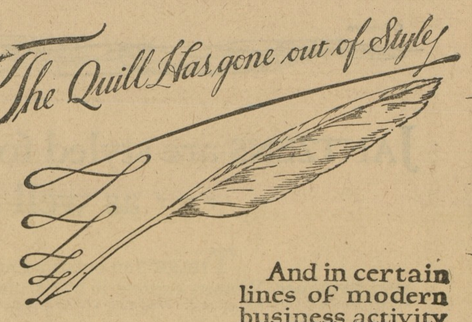
WHENEVER TIME MEANS MONEY—TELEPHONE!

The Quill Has gone out of Style



And in certain lines of modern business activity the letter has also disappeared . . .

WHEN a shipment has gone astray, when a rush order is imperative, when a market is rapidly rising or falling, and each tick of the clock throws away valuable dollars, do you stop to write a lengthy business letter? Do you waste precious moments in dictation, typing, mailing, and waiting for an answer? Of course you don't. You use the long distance telephone!

But the use of long distance is not restricted to emergencies. Time is always valuable. And long distance saves time—and trouble.

And a face-to-face conversation is so much more satisfactory! Try handling important business in the up-to-date way—by long distance—
